Most people with college degrees earned them after several years of sweat and hard work at a reputable institution.

But if you aren't too particular about your alma mater, and if you're willing to commit a felony, you can acquire a college diploma in a matter of weeks and for far less trouble.

Anyone who willfully sells or buys a bogus diploma is guilty of a felony, punishable by five years imprisonment, a $1,000 fine, or both, according to Section 29042 of the state Education Code, yet several Southland firms will be all too happy to affix your name to the finest parchment. Just send cash.

The firms include:
—Evaluations & Management International Inc., Box 4277, Inglewood, Calif. 90309.

—Pacific Southern Corp., c/o Collegiate Consultants Inc., 1610 Argyle Ave., Suite 105, Los Angeles, Calif. 90028, and, —Pal Mar Enterprises, Box 1796, Altadena, Calif. 91001.

These businesses are among nearly 50 so-called diploma mills located across the country and named in a publication entitled "How and Where to Obtain A College Degree By Mail — Even If You Are A Grade School Dropout!"

Advertised in a national magazine, the 32-page booklet is available for $12.50 from Career Counseling of Tustin.

"We thought we had driven diploma mills out of the state in 1958 when the Legislature passed strict new laws to prohibit this racket," said Dr. Milton H. Hood of the state Department of Education's Division of School Approvals in Los Angeles.

"Now, in 1977, the situation seems worse than ever."

The bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees offered by the three local firms "look spurious and illegitimate to me," said Hood, a 17-year field representative whose job is to make sure that schools conform to the Education Code. He refers those enterprises which appear to be breaking the law to the state attorney general for further investigation.

"ALL THREE of these Southland firms violate Section 29023 of Division 21 of the Education Code pertaining to private educational institutions," Hood explained. He said an institution is permitted by law to issue a degree if it has:

—Received accreditation by an agency recognized by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare;

—Been approved by the state superintendent of public instruction to issue specific degrees, or,

—Filed an affidavit stating that it owns real or personal property, worth at least $50,000, that is used for education purposes.

"These firms have not met any of these requirements," Hood told the Independent, Press-Telegram.

"In fact, I'd never heard of them until you brought them to my attention . . . I'm amazed to know of this."

Population shows tilt to West

WASHINGTON (AP)—America's Bicentennial year marked the first time that the majority of the U.S. population lived in the South and West, the Census Bureau reported Saturday.

Thus, 1976 was a milestone not only in the nation's settling and development, but also in the more recent trend of migration out of the North and into the so-called Sunbelt states.

The Census preliminary count for 1976 showed the nation with a population of 214,659,000, up 1.63 million over 1975. Most of the growth was in the South and West, where the population reached 107,417,000, while the North population was 107,242,000.

In 1975, the nation's population was 213,032,000, with 107,092,000 in the North and 105,940,000 in the South.

Six years ago, the South and West had eight million fewer residents than the North.

THE NORTH, by Census definition, consists of the 21 north-central and Northwest states included in an area struck by North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The population shift has been building for several years, as retired people looked for a sunny retirement spot and workers left older, slower growing industries of the North for the space-age industries of the South and West, according to Census experts.

By 1970, two key factors that had sustained population growth in the North fell off—the birth rate and the migration of blacks from the South.

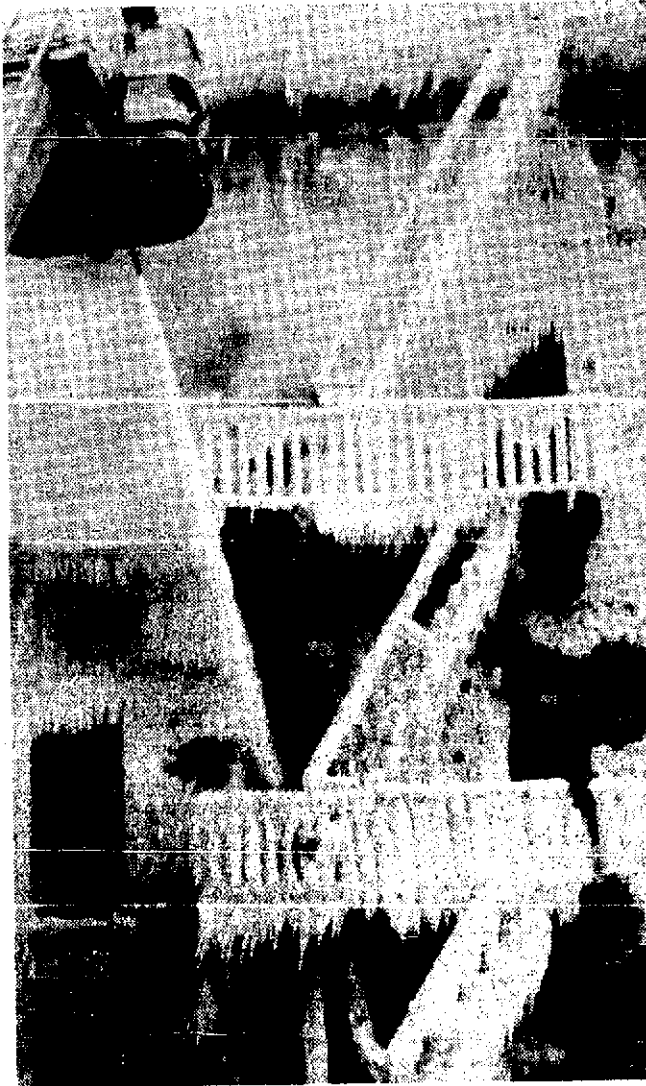

Because few people migrated into the North in the two decades prior to 1970, its population growth relied mainly on births. The drop in the birth rate to record low rates in the early 1970s had the most severe effect on population growth in the North.

ALSO, BY 1974, for the first time since the Civil War, more blacks were migrating into the South than were moving North out of the region.

California's population grew by 322,000 to 21.5 million last year.

New York, the second largest state, added 8,000 to its 18 million last year, but overall, New York's population has declined 158,000 since 1970 while California has gained 1.5 million.

The fastest growing state last year in percentage terms was Alaska, which grew by 17,000, or 4.7 per cent, to 322,000.

Ninth foreign tanker in trouble in U.S. waters

A Liberian-registered ship was rocked by an explosion about 300 miles off the Virginia coast on Saturday, the ninth foreign flag tanker to run into trouble in or near U.S. waters in less than a month.

One ship, the Panamanian tanker Grand Zenith carrying a crew of 38 and 8 million gallons of oil, remains missing and is presumed sunk.

Three others have spilled a total of about 7.7 million gallons of oil; another blew up, killing nine persons; the rest continued their journeys with cargoes intact and no deaths after running aground.

The incidents have led to calls for greater regulation of foreign ships while operating in U.S. waters under international safety regulations less stringent than U.S. standards.

Carter to send Mondale abroad

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

PLAINS, Ga. (AP)—President-elect Jimmy Carter said Saturday he would send Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale on a get-acquainted trip to Europe and Japan the first week of the new administration.

The president-elect said he himself probably would attend an economic summit meeting of the world's industrialized democracies this year, probably in late May or June.

Carter also said he likely would meet with Soviet Party Leader Leonid I. Brezhnev sometime before next fall and hoped by that time to have achieved "substantial" progress on a new strategic arms limitation treaty.

CARTER said he had every hope that tax rebate checks, a key element of his plan to stimulate the lagging economy, would be sent to millions of taxpayers by early spring.

Carter said he still intended to minimize his own travel in the first year of his administration but would make an exception for the economic summit.

Carter, at a chilly outdoor press conference on the lawn of his home, said, "I've asked Sen. Mondale to go to West Germany, to France, to Great Britain, to the European Community headquarters in Brussels and also to Japan."

He said arrangements for the trip already were made and that he would speak with the prime ministers or leaders of those nations by telephone sometime next week.

He said the purpose of the Mondale trip was to let America's closest allies "know in some detail what I and the United States Congress propose to do about the stimulation of our economy."

"In addition to that, he will explore with them better means by which we might coordinate our NATO policies, deal with the problems of the increased oil prices and also share with them some of our potential plans at that point for helping to resolve the potential problems surrounding Cyprus and Turkey and Greece, the Middle East and of course the southern Africa question."

IN THE latter case, Carter said that the United States planned to play a supportive role and would not pre-empt the leadership position taken by Britain.

Mondale later issued a statement from his Washington office saying that the trip would allow the new administration to consult closely with allies and exchange views with them.

"Finally, I expect this trip to provide an opportunity for a frank exchange of viewpoints in other vital areas, including East-West relations, the European Community and the NATO alliance, the Middle East and Cyprus, the world energy situation and various trade and monetary problems," Mondale said.

Carter said he himself probably would meet with the leaders of the nations Mondale will visit later in the year, "probably in the framework of an economic summit meeting."

He said he hoped that other meetings with foreign leaders during his administration's first year would take place in the United States.

CARTER said he has exchanged messages with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France about the timing of an economic summit. The meeting is expected to be held in Japan.

Carter said Mondale would be his personal emissary.

"As a means of getting acquainted with them, letting them know in some detail the hopes of our own administration in international matters, particularly relating to tension in world trouble, spots, I think Sen. Mondale can do as good a job on his first trip as I could do myself," Carter said.

He said the Mondale trip would be just the first in a series to be made early this year by other members of the administration.

On Friday, Carter and key congressional Democrats proposed a two-year program to stimulate the economy through jobs and public works programs, a permanent tax cut and a one-shot tax rebate that could give individual taxpayers up to $200.

ASKED about reports that Congress might not be able to act on the rebate portion of the plan for several months, Carter said:

"I would hope the information from Washington is erroneous."

"I don't foresee any difficulty in getting the rebate checks out very rapidly," he said.

Carter said also that he intended to announce in the coming week the legal details of the trust he is setting up to manage his farm and peanut business while he is in the White House.

CIA still stands for sinister U.S. threat to Castro's Cuba

By WILLIAM BROOM
Our National Bureau Chief

It's been 12 years between Bill Broom's visits to the forbidden isle of Cuba. For the average Cuban, life has not changed, but his labor is just beginning to bear the fruit of economic change. In this five-part series, Broom explores Fidel Castro's successes and failures in remaking Cuba.

HAVANA—If the CIA didn't exist, Fidel Castro would have to invent it.

Under his manipulative oratory, the CIA has symbolized the sinister threat of Yankee imperialism for more than 15 years, often serving as the mortar of nationhood Castro has been building.

Once again, the specter of the CIA has come to Castro's rescue. In a time of economic crisis, he has blamed the agency for the bombing of a Cuban airliner that crashed off Barbados Oct. 6, killing 73 persons.

The alleged involvement of the CIA, vigorously denied by U.S. authorities, shocked the Cuban people into rare unity.

"They came together 100 per cent," says Sylvia Carranzas, a Havana office worker, clasping both hands into a ball. "Like a rock. Even the gusanos (counter-revolutionaries) support Castro's decision on the hijack treaty with the United States."

Renegotiating the treaty, which expires April 15, has now become an important part of Cuba's design for restoring normal ties with the United States. Havana spokesmen repeatedly used the words "necessary first step toward normalization" in discussing the treaty with newsmen.

The signals that Cuba would welcome a return to normalcy have been growing stronger and clearer in recent months. The most recent occurred Dec. 4 when Gen. Raul Castro, Fidel's brother and commander of the armed forces, said at a military review here that "influential sectors" in the U.S. are pushing for a new policy toward Cuba. Referring to the election of the Jimmy Carter administration as a "compass of hope," Raul Castro added:

"Our government and our people are attentively watching . . . for practical steps by the next government (that would) show that realism and sanity will prevail in the new U.S. administration, and (to see) if there will be a definite end to all hostile and aggressive acts against our country, the unquestionable basis for any discussion with the U.S. government."

Little is known of the attitude of President-elect Carter toward Cuba. One of his few published statements appeared in a July 2 interview with reporter Jack Skelly of El Nuevo Dia, San Juan, P.R. In it, Carter cited Cuba's open support for the independence movement in Puerto Rico and involvement in Angola as "indications of the warlike attitude of Castro . . . that would prevent any sort of move on my part now toward establishing normal relationships."

Carter also told Skelly, "I don't have any intention of taking the initiative" toward normal relationship.

IN THE VIEW of western diplomats interviewed in Havana for this article, the door is open wider for such an initiative than it has been in years.

Mother hailed for turning in son

Combined News Services
A New Iberia, La. mother who was once harassed for turning her son in on an armed robbery charge now is getting letters of praise from mothers throughout the country who say they wonder whether they could have been as courageous.

Jerry Paul Francis, 18, drew a 20-year sentence with no parole after his mother, Rosemary Francis, put police on his trail in a bank robbery case. Mrs. Francis recognized her son in a newspaper photograph of the bank robbery and called police.

She said it was a difficult decision to make but that she was horrified by the crime. A bank teller was shot in the head during the robbery and remains in a nursing home, unable to speak.
"If he did that, he was liable to do something else worse and I'd rather turn him in than have him lying dead in the streets," Mrs. Francis said.

After accounts of her action were published and broadcast, she said she began getting nasty telephone calls from people who didn't agree with what she did. But recently, she has been getting letters of support from strangers all over the country.

— From a California woman: "Bravo to you. If more parents were responsible and did the right thing there would be less crime. They stand behind their children when they are dead wrong."

2 brothers pardoned in kidnaping

Inmates applauded as Lonnie and Sandy Sawyer, convicted of kidnaping and pardoned by the governor, walked from a North Carolina prison camp as free men on Saturday.
The brothers were released after a two-year struggle that had attracted national attention. Their mother, Etta, was waiting at the gates of the Harnett Youth Center in Lillington.
"I was so happy I just can't imagine having a happier day," she said.
The Sawyers, who insisted throughout that they had committed no crime, were sentenced to long prison terms after being convicted of a 1974 kidnaping. The pardon granted on Friday by Gov. Jim Holshouse was only the 12th in North Carolina in this century.
"I really don't have anything planned. I just feel wonderful and want to go home," said Sandy Sawyer, 22, as he walked from the prison camp to meet his mother.

Also waiting was Lonnie's fiancée, Tina Rayley, and two attorneys and private detectives who helped them gain freedom. NBC television producer Sy Pearlman, whose program about the Sawyers' case brought it to national attention, also was there.

Lonnie, 19, said he still planned to be married.

Sandy said he was considering moving to Raleigh, and does not look forward to seeing any of the persons involved in the prosecution of their case in Union County. "If I see them on the street or something, I'll just walk on the other side," he said.

The Sawyers were convicted of the kidnaping of Robert Hinson, a Union County department store manager, who identified the brothers as his abductors.
Their brother, Tom, of Charlotte, one of 13 children in the family, persisted in seeking help after the Sawyers' conviction.

He finally found a private investigator, Lester Burns, who became interested in the case and in 1975 brought it to Pearlman's attention.
In a recent interview, Sandy said a car he owned with his brother was similar to one used in the abduction.
"It was all just a mistake," he said.

Ford healthy

President Ford took what probably was his final physical examination as the nation's chief executive Saturday, and his physician said he is in excellent health except for "occasional nagging discomfort in his knees."
The knee problems date 40 years when Ford suffered injuries while playing college football.
Ford, 63, told reporters after the three-hour annual examination at Bethesda Naval Medical Center: "They gave me a clean bill of health. I think I'm in better health now than when I came in."
He was responding to a reporter's question on whether he felt 30 months in office had taken a toll on his health.

Mossler

Harris County Probate Judge Pat Gregory has ruled in Houston that Candace Mossler's 1975 divorce from Barnett V. Garrison was final.
Gregory's Friday ruling gave Garrison no legal status to contest Mrs. Mossler's purported will. Garrison, 38, and Mrs. Mossler were married in 1971 and divorced Dec. 1, 1975.
The will in question divides an estimated $27 million estate equally among three of six children.
Jacques Mossler, Mrs. Mossler's second husband, was found stabbed to death in his Miami apartment in 1964. Mrs. Mossler and a nephew, Melvin Lane Powers, were acquitted of murder in the case.

Nixon

Richard Nixon celebrates his 64th birthday today. A spokesman for the former president was unavailable for comment on how Nixon and his wife, Pat, planned to spend the day.

Practicing for super show

Entertainer Andy Williams performs dance routine on stage outside the Rose Bowl in Pasadena Saturday with other members of his act during rehearsal for evening show. The entertainment was a prelude to today's Super Bowl between the Minnesota Vikings and the Oakland Raiders.

Orson Wells

Only Orson Wells could do it.
In what was billed as his first stage performance in 17 years, Wells drew 2,000 persons, many of college age, to Boston Symphony Hall despite a storm that dumped more than a foot of snow on the city.
Wells, 61, won standing ovations at the beginning and end of his appearance Friday night.
For 90 minutes, Wells — dressed entirely in black, down to a black cane he carried — told stories and answered questions.
Finally, he recited — in a Yiddish accent — two speeches of the villainous Jew Shylock from Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice."
And as an encore, he recited Mark Antony's funeral oration from "Julius Caesar" — "Friends, Romans, countrymen," etc. He said he had always wanted to play the role and never had.

Omar Sharif

Film star Omar Sharif is engaged to the latest sex queen of Egyptian movies, Soheir Ramzy.
Sharif was divorced last year from the Egyptian screen's foremost actress, Faten Hamama, after more than 18 years of marriage on the grounds that their profession kept them apart.
Miss Ramzy's mother said her 30-year-old daughter and Sharif, 45, became engaged at a party in Cairo on Thursday attended by family and close friends.
In her latest film, Miss Ramzy plays a film star who is murdered by her fiancée because of her sexual involvement with a number of men.
The movie, considered daring by contemporary Egyptian standards, has been running in Cairo for two months.
Miss Ramzy has been married and divorced three times. Her first husband was a musician, her second a Saudi Arabian prince and her third an Egyptian millionaire.

$4.2 million in art stolen

Combined News Services
MURCIA, Spain — Burglars using a blowtorch forced open an iron gate in the cathedral museum in this southeastern Spanish city and carried off 20 art pieces studied with 7,000 gems and valued at $4.2 million, church officials said Saturday.
The theft at the 514-year-old Santa Maria Cathedral occurred Friday night or early Saturday. The officials said the stolen items were uninsured and had been on open display behind the gate.

Among the stolen pieces were the jeweled crown from a statue of the Virgin of La Fuensanta, patron saint of Murcia, and the pectoral cross and ring of Luis Cantorio Cardinal Belluga, a major figure in the Spanish Roman Catholic Church in the 18th century, the officials said.
The diamonds, sapphires and gold in the crown of the virgin saint had been paid for by popular subscription.
Also stolen were gold altar pieces of the 14th and 15th centuries.

Police said they had no immediate clue to the identity of the thieves.
In a similar theft about two years ago, church jewels valued at $1.4 million were stolen from the shrine of the Virgin of the Pines in Las Palmas, Canary Islands.
The building of Santa Maria Cathedral began in 1394 and was completed in 1462. A baroque 18th century frontispiece is one of its main tourist attractions.

Africans hold summit talks

LUSAKA, Zambia — Frie black African states opened a summit meeting Saturday amid indications they might throw their weight behind British attempts to break a deadlock in talks on bringing black majority rule to Rhodesia. None of the participants spoke to reporters when they flew into Lusaka to a welcome from traditional African dancers and greetings chanted by the assembled crowd. But all the so-called "frontline" black states except Angola have indicated guarded support for Britain's efforts to get the stalemated Geneva talks moving again toward a peaceful transition to majority rule in Rhodesia, where blacks outnumber whites by about 25-to-1. The frontline countries — Angola, Zambia, Tanzania, Mozambique and Botswana — support the black nationalist insurgency in Rhodesia.

Plane said downed

MOSCOW — Black nationalist guerrillas in Rhodesia shot down a government military transport plane, killing three airmen, Tass reported Saturday in a dispatch from Lusaka, Zambia. Security officials in the Rhodesian capital of Salisbury last Thursday confirmed that a Rhodesian air force Douglas Dakota had crashed and three men aboard were killed. Two other persons were injured, they said. But the security officials did not give a cause for the crash, saying a board of inquiry had been established to investigate.

Snakes peril flood victims

LA PAZ, Bolivia — Hordes of poisonous snakes are moving onto high ground in eastern Bolivia where thousands of persons have taken refuge from flooding tropical rivers, La Paz newspapers reported Saturday. They said rescue workers in helicopters and boats found dozens of persons had suffered snakebites. Civil defense officials announced that at least 20 persons have drowned or perished in flood-related accidents in the region of Santa Cruz, an oil and agricultural center 335 miles east of La Paz. About 100 peasant families in remote areas are unaccounted for, they added.

Storm stalls ship hunt

HALIFAX — A snowstorm in Nova Scotia hampered travel Saturday and forced Canadian aircraft to temporarily suspend the search for the missing tanker Grand Zenith. A spokesman for the air-sea search and rescue centre said Canadian aircraft would resume the search for the Grand Zenith when the weather clears. Gale and storm warnings were out off Canada's Atlantic coast and some ships reported winds of up to 55 knots.

Military chief returns

BANGKOK, Thailand — Former military strong man Praphas Charusathien came home from exile in Taipei Saturday, his peaceful arrival contrasting with the bloody riots that greeted his previous attempt to return to Thailand last year. A cordon of about 30 air force and plain-clothes security men surrounded the former deputy prime minister after he arrived at Bangkok's international airport and whisked him off to his Bangkok residence. He is believed to be planning to remain permanently in Thailand.

Arab ministers to meet

CAIRO, Egypt — Foreign ministers of five oil-rich Arab nations and the three Arab states bordering Israel plan to meet today in Saudi Arabia to discuss financial and military aid, officials said Saturday. Egypt, Syria and Jordan, the so-called "confrontation states" that border Israel, will be represented along with the oil-producing nations of Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates. A Palestine Liberation Organization representative also will be present, according to the Cairo officials.

Coffee truck hijacked

TORONTO, Canada (AP) — A truck carrying 13,000 pounds of freeze-dried coffee worth $30,000 was stolen earlier this week from the yard of McKinlay Transport Ltd., police said Saturday. The truck was loaded with coffee to be used in vending machines.

Mother hailed for turning in son

Combined News Services

A New Iberia, La. mother who was once harassed for turning her son in on an armed robbery charge now is getting letters of praise from mothers throughout the country who say they wonder whether they could have been as courageous.

Jerry Paul Francis, 18, drew a 99-year sentence with no parole after his mother, Rosemary Francis, put police on his trail in a bank robbery case. Mrs. Francis recognized her son in a newspaper photograph of the bank robbery and called police.

She said it was a difficult decision to make but that she was horrified by the crime. A bank teller was shot in the head during the robbery and remains in a nursing home, unable to speak.

"If he did that, he was liable to do something else worse and I'd rather turn him in than have him lying dead in the streets," Mrs. Francis said.

After accounts of her action were published and broadcast, she said she began getting nasty telephone calls from people who didn't agree with what she did. But recently, she has been getting letters of support from strangers all over the country.

Some excerpts:

— From a woman in Laurel, Miss.: "The incident was mentioned in church last night and the feeling was that it took courage on your part to call the police. I'm on your side."

Pad power

Would you please settle a dispute for us? How much electricity does a small heating pad use? I have a bad back and I use the heating pad a great deal. My wife says it adds a measurable amount to our electric bill, and I say it doesn't. Who is right? W.W., Bellflower.

Although the wattage on your heating pad probably is quite low, if you have it on many hours each day it certainly will increase your electric bill, said Floyd Younklin, energy service representative for Southern California Edison in Long Beach. He said it is impossible to say exactly how much it costs to run a certain appliance, since it depends on the wattage and the number of hours the item is used. To arrive at a specific figure, he said, you would have to multiply the wattage of your heating pad by the number of hours you use it, then divide that figure by 1,000 to get the number of kilowatt hours used. You then can figure it costs about five cents per kilowatt hour. SCE has a free booklet, "Conservation of Energy is Everybody's Business", available by writing the company at P.O. Box 410, Long Beach, Calif. 90802. In addition to giving energy conservation suggestions, the booklet lists a number of home appliances, their wattage and average kilowatt hour use. Your heating pad probably is similar to an electric blanket, which is 150 watts. An electric clock is only 2 watts, while a blender is 300, a coffee maker 600 and an electric fry pan 1,200.

Way to San Jose

On Aug. 15 I sent a check for $21.20 to the San Jose Inn in San Jose to secure a reservation for Sept. 10 and 11. On Sept. 7, I called and canceled the reservation and was told my money would be refunded. On Oct. 11 I called again, and was told it would be taken care of right away. I then sent a letter on Oct. 24, but still don't have my money. Can Action Line help? W.K., Long Beach.

Your refund is on its way. Gene McClain, owner of the San Jose Inn, said he was on a "lengthy vacation" at the time your refund request was received, and nothing could be done until he returned. He said they also had to wait for proof from you that you had canceled the reservation. He said he received your letter with the telephone bill enclosed the day that Action Line contacted him.

Skip trace

A woman motorist ran into my car and caused more than $600 damage. I got her name, her driver's license number and her car's license number. But when I went to give her an estimate, the owner of her apartment house said she had moved and he didn't know her new address. What can I do about this? W.B., Lakewood.

Your only recourse is to try to locate the woman and file a lawsuit against her if she refuses to pay. Motorists are supposed to notify the California Department of Motor Vehicles of their new address within 10 days after they move, and if the woman has complied with the law, you can get her new address by paying 75 cents at any local DMV office. She may not have notified the DMV of her new address at this time, but when it's time for her to renew her car's registration, she is likely to record her new address. If you don't get her new address now, you should check back with the DMV every few months. If she left a forwarding address with the post office, you can get her new address by paying $1 at any post office. If you locate her, you could sue her in small claims court without the aid of an attorney. As of Jan. 1, the amount that can be collected in small claims court has been increased to $750. The statute of limitations for filing civil actions varies depending on the nature of the lawsuit. Generally, property damage lawsuits must be filed within three years after the incident, and the statute of limitations for personal injury claims usually is one year.

Love song

On a recent television program, The Captain and Tennille, the two of them sang a song which I think was entitled, "There is Love." It was about a man and a wife's relationship and marriage. Can Action Line tell me who wrote the song and where I could get the sheet music? My fiance and I would like to have it sung at our wedding in June. M.D.W., Westminster.

The sheet music for "Wedding Song", subtitled "There is Love", is available at Morey's Music Store, 342 Pine Ave., for $1.50. The lyrics were written by Paul Stookey, formerly of the singing group Peter, Paul and Mary. The Captain and Tennille have recorded the song on their album, "Song of Joy", on sale in most record stores.

5 dead in county traffic accidents

Unrelated traffic accidents claimed five victims Saturday in Los Angeles County.

Highway Patrol officers said Charles Gilbert Stelle, 29, of 5923 Quinn St., Bell Gardens, was a passenger in a northbound car that rammed another vehicle in the snow about three miles south of Gorman. Stelle died at Henry Mayo Memorial Hospital in Valencia at 3:50 a.m., about two hours after the accident on Interstate 5.

The driver of the car in which Stelle was riding, Joel Elmer Hardin, 31, of 6516 Marlow Ave., Bell Gardens, was booked on suspicion of manslaughter and felony drunk driving. He was taken to County-USC Medical Center, where he was reported in satisfactory condition.

Downey police said Antonia Maria Figueroa, 42, of 13221 Alameda Road, La Puente, was killed when she ran in front of a pickup truck in the parking lot of Rockwell International's Space Division, 12214 S. Lakewood Blvd., where she was employed.

Francisco Manrique, 46, of 9519 State St., South Gate, made a left turn at Randolph Street and Santa Fe Avenue at 2:10 a.m. at a high rate of speed and crashed into a parked truck. Huntington Park police said. He was pronounced dead at the scene. No passengers were in his car.

Officials said Owen Kielbach, 29, of 3855 W. 106th St., Inglewood, was killed at 6:35 a.m. when he hit a guardrail while trying to turn onto the Jefferson Street offramp from the southbound San Diego Freeway in Culver City.

Ramiro Raigosa, 46, of 11853 Cheshire St., Norwalk, died at 8:40 a.m. at Paramount General Hospital. CHP officers said Raigosa drove his vehicle onto the Long Beach Freeway from Rosecrans Avenue near Compton at 9 p.m. Friday and collided with a southbound truck.

Wildcat strike hits Chevron refinery

An estimated 900 workers at oil refineries in El Segundo and Port Arthur, Tex., went on strike Saturday in local bargaining disputes, despite indications that settlements elsewhere would be reached on union contracts.

A spokesman for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union International (OCAW) in El Segundo said an estimated 500 of 860 workers his union represents at the Standard Oil Co.'s Chevron refinery set up picket lines at 12:01 a.m.

Some 400 workers at the American Petrofina refinery in Port Arthur reportedly walked out over a similar dispute.

A Chevron spokesman said operations at El Segundo were continuing, with the plant staffed by management and non-striking personnel.

However, he said no other refineries in California, including the other Chevron refinery in Richmond, had been struck.

The wildcat strikes were called despite an apparent trend toward a nationwide settlement with the Denver-based union. About 60,000 members nationwide would be affected by the present negotiations.

A spokesman for OCAW

Local 1547 in El Segundo said the walkout involves local issues, particularly "lack of communication" with Chevron.

With a nationwide refinery strike apparently averted, OCAW officials waited for more oil companies to fall into line.

Prospects of an industrywide strike ended Friday afternoon when Gulf Oil Corp. offered OCAW negotiators a revised agreement at its Port Arthur plant. The union's National Oil Bargaining Policy Committee accepted that contract with unexpected swiftness.

International Union President A.F. Grosprion called it a "pattern contract" for the rest of the industry to follow.

OCAW contracts with about 60 oil companies throughout the country would have expired Friday at midnight.

But Grosprion advised workers to stay on the job while other firms worked out agreements to be submitted to the union.

Officials said the strikes at the two refineries involved local issues and not the major contract talks.

Jerry Archuleta, an OCAW spokesman in Denver, said the workers at the Gulf refinery at Port Arthur reportedly ratified the new contract Friday night and early Saturday by a wide margin.

That agreement affects 13 separate contracts with Gulf, but nearly 400 other contracts are still at stake.

Saturday's session was quiet, Archuleta said, but "we discern signs of movement among various oil companies toward settlements similar to the Gulf settlement."

OCAW bylaws require that contracts meet conditions of the "pattern contract" or they cannot be accepted by the union.

"From what movement we have detected, we might have additional settlements within a day or two," Archuleta said.

Rewards for missing L.B. man increased

Reward funds in the Secret Witness case of missing Long Beach businessman Evan Allan Snider, 34, today grew to a total ranging from $6,000 to $12,000—depending on the offense and the type of conviction.

A reward totaling $6,000, including $1,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $5,000 pledged by Snider's father, Dr. Allan Snider, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and kidnap conviction of those responsible for Snider's disappearance, if he is still alive.

A total of $12,000, including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $10,000 pledged by Dr. Snider, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of those responsible, if he has been killed.

Snider was last seen in Long Beach last Oct. 22 on Cedar Avenue, where he was checking on some of his extensive property holdings. His car, reported missing at the same time, was found abandoned in the 1600 block on Cedar Avenue Dec. 1.

Dr. Snider, pastor of the Glad Tidings Assembly of God at 1900 South St. for 13 years and presently a faculty member at the Melodyland School of Theology in Anaheim, feels certain his son has met with foul play. Police investigators agree.

The missing man is described at 5 feet 8 inches tall, 145 pounds, with medium length brown hair, brown eyes, and a full mustache.

L.B. youth killed over cigarettes

A 17-year-old Long Beach youth was stabbed to death Saturday during an argument with his neighbor over a pack of cigarettes, police said.

Witnesses told police that when Albert Bernard Walker, of 2067 Lime Ave., answered his door at 2:50 p.m., Jesse Curtis Cockrell, 26, of another apartment at the same address, asked for some cigarettes he had left at Walker's apartment earlier.

Officer M.G. Martin said that when Walker refused to let Cockrell enter, the angry neighbor pulled open the screen door and Walker was then stabbed three times in the chest and back.

Cockrell was booked on suspicion of murder.

Pad power

Would you please settle a dispute for us? How much electricity does a small heating pad use? I have a bad back and I use the heating pad a great deal. My wife says it adds a measurable amount to our electric bill, and I say it doesn't. Who is right? W.W., Bellflower.

Although the wattage on your heating pad probably is quite low, if you have it on many hours each day it certainly will increase your electric bill, said Floyd Younk, energy service representative for Southern California Edison in Long Beach. He said it is impossible to say exactly how much it costs to run a certain appliance, since it depends on the wattage and the number of hours the item is used. To arrive at a specific figure, he said, you would have to multiply the wattage of your heating pad by the number of hours you use it, then divide that figure by 1,000 to get the number of kilowatt-hours used. You then can figure it costs about five cents per kilowatt hour. SCE has a free booklet, "Conservation of Energy is Everybody's Business", available by writing the company at P.O. Box 410, Long Beach, Calif. 90802. In addition to giving energy conservation suggestions, the booklet lists a number of home appliances, their wattage and average kilowatt hour use. Your heating pad probably is similar to an electric blanket, which is 150 watts. An electric clock is only 2 watts, while a blender is 300, a coffee maker 600 and an electric fry pan 1,200.

Way to San Jose

On Aug. 15 I sent a check for $21.20 to the San Jose Inn in San Jose to secure a reservation for Sept. 10 and 11. On Sept. 7, I called and canceled the reservation and was told my money would be refunded. On Oct. 11 I called again, and was told it would be taken care of right away. I then sent a letter on Oct. 24, but still don't have my money. Can Action Line help? W.K., Long Beach.

Your refund is on its way. Gene McClain, owner of the San Jose Inn, said he was on a "lengthy vacation" at the time your refund request was received, and nothing could be done until he returned. He said they also had to wait for proof from you that you had canceled the reservation. He said he received your letter with the telephone bill enclosed the day that Action Line contacted him.

A woman motorist ran into my car and caused more than $600 damage. I got her name, her driver's license number and her car's license number. But when I went to give her an estimate, the owner of her apartment house said she had moved and he didn't know her new address. What can I do about this? W.B., Lakewood.

Your only recourse is to try to locate the woman and file a lawsuit against her if she refuses to pay. Motorists are supposed to notify the California Department of Motor Vehicles of their new address within 10 days after they move, and if the woman has complied with the law, you can get her new address by paying 75 cents at any local DMV office. She may not have notified the DMV of her new address at this time, but when it's time for her to renew her car's registration, she is likely to record her new address. If you don't get her new address now, you should check back with the DMV every few months. If she left a forwarding address with the post office, you can get her new address by paying $1 at any post office. If you locate her, you could sue her in small claims court without the aid of an attorney. As of Jan. 1, the amount that can be collected in small claims court has been increased to $750. The statute of limitations for filing civil actions varies depending on the nature of the lawsuit. Generally, property damage lawsuits must be filed within three years after the incident, and the statute of limitations for personal injury claims usually is one year.

Love song

On a recent television program, The Captain and Tennille, the two of them sang a song which I think was entitled, "There is Love." It was about a man and a wife's relationship and marriage. Can Action Line tell me who wrote the song and where I could get the sheet music? My fiancé and I would like to have it sung at our wedding in June. M.D.W., Westminster.

The sheet music for "Wedding Song", subtitled "There is Love", is available at Morey's Music Store, 342 Pine Ave., for $1.50. The lyrics were written by Paul Stookey, formerly of the singing group Peter, Paul and Mary. The Captain and Tennille have recorded the song on their album, "Song of Joy", on sale in most record stores.

5 dead in county traffic accidents

Unrelated traffic accidents claimed five victims Saturday in Los Angeles County.

Highway Patrol officers said Charles Gilbert Stelle, 20, of 5923 Quina St., Bell Gardens, was a passenger in a northbound car that rammed another vehicle in the snow about three miles south of Gorman. Stelle died at Henry Mayo Memorial Hospital in Valencia at 3:50 a.m., about two hours after the accident on Interstate 5.

The driver of the car in which Stelle was riding, Joel Elmer Hardin, 31, of 6516 Marlow Ave., Bell Gardens, was booked on suspicion of manslaughter and felony drunk driving. He was taken to County-USC Medical Center, where he was reported in satisfactory condition.

Downey police said Antonia Maria Figueroa, 42, of 13221 Alanwood Road, La Puente, was killed when she ran in front of a pickup truck in the parking lot of Rockwell International's Space Division, 12214 S. Lakewood Blvd., where she was employed.

Francisco Manrique, 46, of 9519 State St., South Gate, made a left turn at Randolph Street and Santa Fe Avenue at 2:10 a.m. at a high rate of speed and crashed into a parked truck, Huntington Park police said. He was pronounced dead at the scene. No passengers were in his car.

Officials said Owen Kiebach, 29, of 3655 W. 106th St., Inglewood, was killed at 6:35 a.m. when he hit a guardrail while trying to turn onto the Jefferson Street off-ramp from the southbound San Diego Freeway in Culver City.

Ramiro Raigosa, 46, of 11853 Cheshire St., Norwalk, died at 8:40 a.m. at Paramount General Hospital. CHP officers said Raigosa drove his vehicle onto the Long Beach Freeway from Rosecrans Avenue near Compton at 9 p.m. Friday and collided with a southbound truck.

Wildcat strike hits Chevron refinery

An estimated 900 workers at oil refineries in El Segundo and Port Arthur, Tex., went on strike Saturday in local bargaining disputes, despite indications that settlements elsewhere would be reached on union contracts.

A spokesman for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union International (OCAW) in El Segundo said an estimated 500 of 860 workers his union represents at the Standard Oil Co.'s Chevron refinery set up picket lines at 12:01 a.m.

Some 400 workers at the American Petrofina refinery in Port Arthur reportedly walked out over a similar dispute.

A Chevron spokesman said operations at El Segundo were continuing, with the plant staffed by management and non-striking personnel.

However, he said no other refineries in California, including the other Chevron refinery in Richmond, had been struck.

The wildcat strikes were called despite an apparent trend toward a nationwide settlement with the Denver-based union. About 60,000 members nationwide would be affected by the present negotiations.

A spokesman for OCAW

Local 1547 in El Segundo said the walkout involves local issues, particularly "lack of communication" with Chevron.

With a nationwide refinery strike apparently averted, OCAW officials waited for more oil companies to fall into line.

Prospects of an industry-wide strike ended Friday afternoon when Gulf Oil Corp. offered OCAW negotiators a revised agreement at its Port Arthur plant. The union's National Oil Bargaining Policy Committee accepted that contract with unexpected swiftness.

International Union President A.F. Grosprion called it a "pattern contract" for the rest of the industry to follow.

OCAW contracts with about 60 oil companies throughout the country would have expired Friday at midnight.

But Grosprion advised workers to stay on the job while other firms worked out agreements to be submitted to the union.

Officials said the strikes at the two refineries involved local issues and not the major contract talks.

Jerry Archuleta, an OCAW spokesman in Denver, said the workers at the Gulf refinery at Port Arthur reportedly ratified

Slower economic growth predicted

By G. DAVID WALLACE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The rate of growth in the economy this year probably will be slower than last year, the Commerce Department said Saturday. But it added that the growth should be enough to reduce unemployment without stimulating inflation.

The broad economic assessment was given by chief economist John W. Kendrick as part of the agency's annual industrial outlook publication. It was written before President-elect Jimmy Carter unveiled his $30 billion economic stimulus package Friday.

KENDRICK said the rise in consumer prices in 1977 was projected to remain close to last year's gain of less than 6 per cent.

With the help of the government's massive computer model of the U.S. economy, Kendrick forecast a growth rate of 5 per cent in the volume of total economic output this year with the possibility of "somewhat faster" growth through a tax rebate and other stimuli.

That's a slower pace of growth than the 6 per cent expected for 1976 as a whole when the final figures are tabulated. But that would still be an improvement over the mid-1976 performance, when economic growth was at annual rates of 4.5 per cent in the April-June quarter and 3.9 per cent in the July-September period.

Kendrick estimated that even without stimulus, growth should be strong enough to cut unemployment, currently at 8.1 per cent, to an average of 7 per cent for the year.

HE ALSO cited several encouraging factors on inflation: no major imbalances between business inventories and sales, no signs of materials bottlenecks which fueled inflation in 1973, and adequate excess industrial capacity to absorb the expected growth in output without quickening the pace of inflation.

Kendrick said current policies implied slow progress in reducing the unemployment rate after 1977.

"This would suggest the need for new economic policies if the nation is to return to relatively full employment by 1980 and simultaneously continue to unwind from inflation," he said.

KENDRICK describes himself as an independent politically. He assumed his post this summer on leave from George Washington University.

Beyond the general economic outlook for the nation, the agency's review assessed the prospects for 260 major business sectors accounting for 85 per cent of the nation's manufacturing shipments.

The industry-by-industry breakdown, which provided a more detailed mosaic of which areas of the nation might sustain the slowest or fastest growth, showed that for 91 of those sectors, production is expected to gain by more than 10 per cent, or double the national growth rate.

Action on jobless bill seen by early spring

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress wants to act as soon as possible to expand two job-creating programs which have high priority for President-elect Jimmy Carter. Action could come in early spring, congressional sources say.

Carter also has encouraged individual members of Congress to go ahead with plans for expanding other programs such as a year-round conservation corps.

The House Democratic leadership has agreed to push for quick expansion of the public works jobs program, which currently has $2 billion worth of projects already funded and a backlog of $22 billion of additional project requests.

AT HIS press conference Friday, Carter said he was proposing to add $4 billion worth of public works jobs during the next two years. This is designed to create 600,000 jobs, directly and indirectly, during the two years.

The second job-creating program that Carter and Congress want to expand is the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, which currently subsidizes about 310,000 public service jobs.

The CETA expires at the end of September. Carter is expected to ask for another $1.7 billion to $2 billion for an additional 200,000 public service jobs in a one-year extension of the program.

gressional Democrats have agreed on a $30 billion, two-year program to stimulate the economy. It includes tax cuts and one-time tax rebates of up to $200 for individuals.

The proposals also include an additional $5 billion to $8 billion in federal spending aimed at creation of jobs and the $4 billion more for public works projects.

One proposal in Congress is a comprehensive government planning and full-employment program known as the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, sponsored by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif.

THE CONCEPT was endorsed by Carter late in the presidential primaries, but he gave the bill his full endorsement only after the House Education and Labor Committee revised it along his recommendations to lower the three-year target goal of unemployment. As it now stands, the goal would be 3 per cent adult unemployment within four years. Some economists say this could hardly be reached without risking dangerous new inflation.

Hawkins has already reintroduced the bill in the House, and Humphrey was to follow with his companion version Monday. They claim full support of Carter. But many Carter aides, including his campaign economic adviser, Lawrence Klein, say the bill will be watered down or shunted aside for the time being.

jobs bills introduced so far this session focus on increasing the job opportunities for youths and the hard-core urban unemployed.

The overall unemployment rate is 8.1 per cent but it is much higher for youth, women and minorities.

Two programs now exist specially geared toward young people.

One is a $30 million, 20,000-person Jobs Corps, which is a vastly scaled-down version of the intensive residential skills training program begun during President Johnson's war on poverty. There are proposals to expand it.

ANOTHER is the Youth Conservation Corps, a $35 million program for persons aged 15 to 18 who work in state or national parks and forests.

Last year, the House approved an expansion in the conservation corps to a year-round program for persons 19 to 24 and a summer program for teenagers, but the bill died in the Senate.

The conservation corps proposal is being reintroduced by Rep. Lloyd Meeds, D-Wash. He checked the plan with Carter in December, an aide said, and was told to aim toward a first-year spending target of $200 million for jobs for 100,000 persons aged 19 to 24. Meeds' bill would be a five-year, $9 billion program providing 1.5 million jobs for young people in its fullest stage.

crease went to the relatively small cottonseed oil milling industry with a 37 per cent jump forecast, the specialists also placed the vital construction, auto, steel retail trade and aerospace industries in the 10 per cent or better category.

Here is a breakdown the report gave on some key industries:

AUTOMOBILES—Although sales of 11 million for the year will fall short of 1973's record, 11.4 million, domestic production should hit a record-tying 9.7 million due to a lower share of import sales than in 1973 and a restocking of inventories. That's a 12.8 per cent production gain.

A 52 per cent gain, to 140,000 units, was estimated for the truck trailer and van industry. The value of farm equipment production is expected to grow 9 per cent to $9.6 billion.

CONSTRUCTION—The specialists projected an 11-per cent gain in construction spending to $157.5 billion. Private residential construction, which provided most of the force in turning construction around last year, still is expected to be the major force this year, with housing starts climbing 13 per cent to 1.7 million units. Highway construction spending is expected to climb to $10 billion after last year's 13 per cent drop to $9 billion. But public construction overall still is expected to gain by a relatively modest 6 per cent.

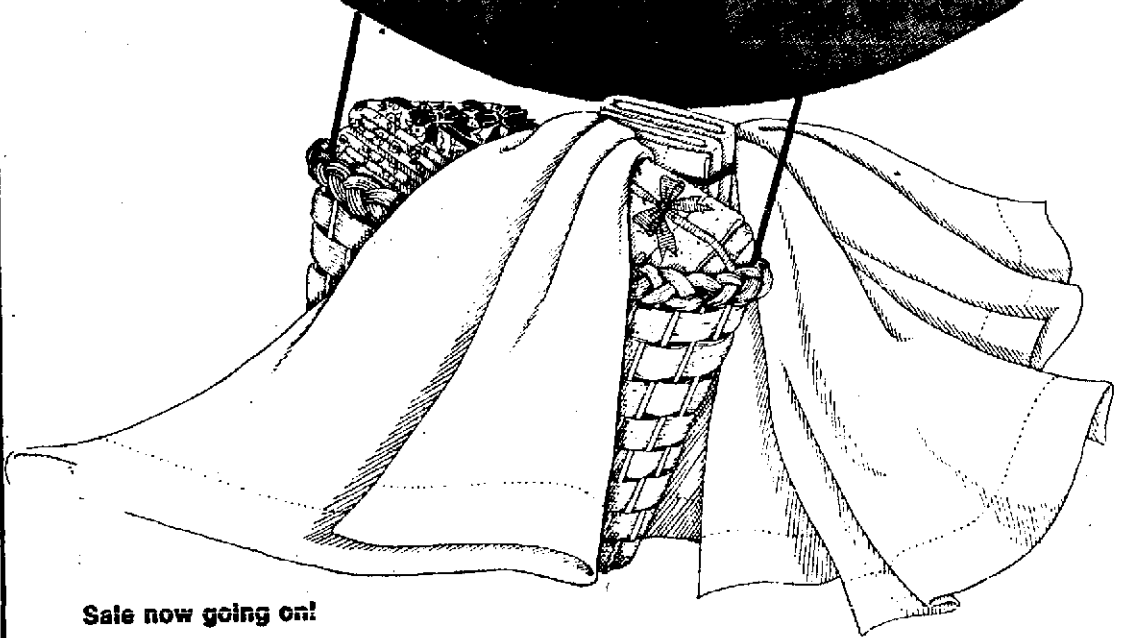

RETAIL TRADE—Commerce forecast a 9.5 per cent growth in retail sales to $703.9 billion, with department store and restaurant spending setting the pace. Home appliances, furniture and other durable goods were expected to continue last year's gain and account for 32 per cent of all retail sales.

PRIMARY MATERIALS—The steel industry was expected to show a 27 per cent increase in value of shipments and approach capacity late this year, thus setting the stage for further expansion which would in turn fuel growth elsewhere in the economy. On a volume basis, steel shipments were pegged for a 14 per cent rise, aluminum shipments were expected to climb 10 per cent, the lead industry was slated for a 2.9 per cent rise, ferrous castings were expected to be 9 per cent higher, and the increase for copper production was estimated at 4 per cent. Other changes by value of shipments: chemicals up 12 per cent, plastics up 15 per cent and lumber up 11 per cent.

HIGH TECHNOLOGY—industries. By value of shipments, aerospace up 5 per cent, computers and related equipment up 14 per cent, telephone and telegraph equipment up 8 per cent and medical instruments up 19 per cent.

VARIOUS SERVICES—Bank assets up 7 per cent and lending up 6 per cent. Health care up 13 per cent. Personal services, such as dry cleaning and beauty shops, up 5 per cent.

The industry-by-industry breakdown, which provided a more detailed mosaic of which areas of the nation might sustain the slowest or fastest growth, showed that for 91 of those sectors, production is expected to gain by more than 10 per cent, or double the national growth rate.

ALTHOUGH the honor of biggest increase went to the relatively small cottonseed oil milling industry with a 37 per cent jump forecast, the specialists also placed the vital construction, auto, steel retail trade and aerospace industries in the 10 per cent or better category.

Here is a breakdown the report gave on some key industries:

AUTOMOBILES—Although sales of 11 million for the year will fall short of 1973's record, 11.4 million, domestic production should hit a record-tying 9.7 million due to a lower share of import sales than in 1973 and a restocking of inventories. That's a 12.8 per cent production gain.

A 52 per cent gain, to 140,000 units, was estimated for the truck trailer and van industry. The value of farm equipment production is expected to grow 9 per cent to $9.6 billion.

CONSTRUCTION—The specialists projected an 11-per cent gain in construction spending to $157.5 billion. Private residential construction, which provided most of the force in turning construction around last year, still is expected to be the major force this year, with housing starts climbing 13 per cent to 1.7 million units. Highway construction spending is expected to climb to $10 billion after last year's 13 per cent drop to $9 billion. But public construction overall still is expected to gain by a relatively modest 6 per cent.

RETAIL TRADE—Commerce forecast a 9.5 per cent growth in retail sales to $703.9 billion, with department store and restaurant spending setting the pace. Home appliances, furniture and other durable goods were expected to continue last year's gain and account for 32 per cent of all retail sales.

PRIMARY MATERIALS—The steel industry was expected to show a 27 per cent increase in value of shipments and approach capacity late this year, thus setting the stage for further expansion which would in turn fuel growth elsewhere in the economy. On a volume basis, steel shipments were pegged for a 14 per cent rise, aluminum shipments were expected to climb 10 per cent, the lead industry was slated for a 2.9 per cent rise, ferrous castings were expected to be 9 per cent higher, and the increase for copper production was estimated at 4 per cent. Other changes by value of shipments: chemicals up 12 per cent, plastics up 15 per cent and lumber up 11 per cent.

HIGH TECHNOLOGY—Industries. By value of shipments, aerospace up 5 per cent, computers and related equipment up 14 per cent, telephone and telegraph equipment up 8 per cent and medical instruments up 19 per cent.

VARIOUS SERVICES—Bank assets up 7 per cent and lending up 6 per cent. Health care up 13 per cent. Personal services, such as dry cleaning and beauty shops, up 5 per cent.

Action on jobless bill seen by early spring

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress wants to act as soon as possible to expand two job-creating programs which have high priority for President-elect Jimmy Carter. Action could come in early spring, congressional sources say.

Carter also has encouraged individual members of Congress to go ahead with plans for expanding other programs such as a year-round conservation corps.

The House Democratic leadership has agreed to push for quick expansion of the public works jobs program, which currently has $2 billion worth of projects already funded and a backlog of $22 billion of additional project requests.

AT HIS press conference Friday, Carter said he was proposing to add $4 billion worth of public works jobs during the next two years. This is designed to create 600,000 jobs, directly and indirectly, during the two years.

The second job-creating program that Carter and Congress want to expand is the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, which currently subsidizes about 310,000 public service jobs.

The CETA expires at the end of September. Carter is expected to ask for another $1.7 billion to $2 billion for an additional 200,000 public service jobs in a one-year extension of the program.

CARTER and key congressional Democrats have agreed on a $30 billion, two-year program to stimulate the economy. It includes tax cuts and one-time tax rebates of up to $200 for individuals.

The proposals also include an additional $5 billion to $8 billion in federal spending aimed at creation of jobs and the $4 billion more for public works projects.

One proposal in Congress is a comprehensive government planning and full-employment program known as the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, sponsored by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif.

THE CONCEPT was endorsed by Carter late in the presidential primaries, but he gave the bill his full endorsement only after the House Education and Labor Committee revised it along his recommendations to lower the three-year target goal of unemployment. As it now stands, the goal would be 3 per cent adult unemployment within four years. Some economists say this could hardly be reached without risking dangerous new inflation.

Hawkins has already reintroduced the bill in the House, and Humphrey was to follow with his companion version Monday. They claim full support of Carter. But many Carter aides, including his campaign economic adviser, Lawrence Klein, say the bill will be watered down or shunted aside for the time being.

MOST OF the dozens of job bills introduced so far this session focus on increasing the job opportunities for youths and the hard-core urban unemployed.

The overall unemployment rate is 8.1 per cent but it is much higher for youth, women and minorities.

Two programs now exist specially geared toward young people.

One is a $30 million, 20,000-person Jobs Corps, which is a vastly scaled-down version of the intensive residential skills training program begun during President Johnson's war on poverty. There are proposals to expand it.

ANOTHER is the Youth Conservation Corps, a $35 million program for persons aged 15 to 18 who work in state or national parks and forests.

Last year, the House approved an expansion in the conservation corps to a year-round program for persons 19 to 24 and a summer program for teenagers, but the bill died in the Senate.

The conservation corps proposal is being reintroduced by Rep. Lloyd Meeds, D-Wash. He checked the plan with Carter in December, an aide said, and was told to aim toward a first-year spending target of $200 million for jobs for 100,000 persons aged 19 to 24. Meeds' bill would be a five-year, $9 billion program providing 1.5 million jobs for young people in its fullest stage.

Illegal alien report stresses prevention

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Cabinet committee says U.S. policy should stress preventing illegal immigration, rather than apprehending illegal aliens already in the country, because deporting hundreds of thousands of aliens would be "inhumane and impractical."

In a report issued Saturday, the Domestic Council Committee on Illegal Aliens said the effort to enforce immigration laws "must stress prevention above all other considerations."

The report continued, "It is vastly more desirable from both a policy and a resources standpoint to prevent entry of the illegal (alien) or screen out potential illegals before arrival than to locate and apprehend the illegal once he is in the United States."

THE COMMITTEE said this is the "currently accepted" strategy of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the State Department, but it recommended more money, better management and increased cooperation among federal agencies in order to make the strategy work.

The Immigration Service estimates there are eight million illegal aliens in the country, and 400,000 may be coming in annually.

President Ford established the committee two years ago to review the illegal alien situation. Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi was the chairman, with members from other departments and federal agencies.

The committee noted that "a dramatic lack of reliable information makes thorough analysis of illegal immigration impossible at this time." It urged more research to measure the impact of illegal aliens on the U.S. labor market, social services, and the economy in general.

Many illegal aliens avoid contacts with government agencies, change residences frequently, and distrust interviewers, the committee noted, so it is virtually impossible to gather reliable data about them.

But the committee said the few existing studies show that "illegal immigration is significant and growing" and that "the major impact of illegal aliens at this time seems to be in the labor market."

The committee called for legislation making it illegal for an employer knowingly to hire illegal aliens.

About 90 per cent of the 800,000 illegal aliens apprehended annually are Mexican citizens, and the remainder are from Canada, the British West Indies and Belize, Greece, China, the Dominican Republic, the Philippines, Great Britain and other countries.

Vance backs detente with China

Lunches with Kissinger, Red envoy; plans Peking visit

By KENNETH J. FREED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State-designate Cyrus R. Vance Saturday endorsed the Nixon-Ford policy of normalizing relations with China and said he would probably travel to Peking.

Vance made the statement just before a luncheon with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Huang Chen, head of the Communist Chinese liaison mission in Washington.

As the three men posed for pictures, Vance was asked how he envisions American policy toward Peking under President-elect Jimmy Carter.

"Insofar as our bilateral relations are concerned," Vance answered, "we will continue to be guided by the Shanghai communique."

He referred to the February 1972 document signed in Shanghai by former President Nixon and Chinese leaders outlining a gradual movement toward normalized relations.

Vance also said that "at some time, I would probably be going to Peking."

HOWEVER, the incoming secretary added that no date has been set for such a trip. Kissinger has made almost yearly visits to China, in addition to the trips there by Nixon and President Ford.

Saturday was the first time that Huang had appeared publicly at the State Department for an announced meeting with American officials.

Kissinger told reporters that Vance suggested the session during a discussion of U.S.-China relations.

Kissinger opened a press conference by outlining his views on the state of the relationship.

"The opening to China was one of the most important moments of recent history," he said. "We have always attributed the greatest importance to the normalization of relations with the People's Republic of China."

Kissinger also used one of the code words that the U.S. employs to indicate that it understands Peking's diplomatic concerns.

That came when he expressed "our concern with respect to hegemony." This is the word used by the Chinese to show concern over what they consider to be the Soviet drive for control of the Communist world and Russian expansionism generally.

Huang, speaking through an interpreter, was asked for his views on the future relations with the U.S.

He said "as far as our policy and position are concerned, our leaders have ... said what our position and policy consists of."

He added that "I believe Mr. Vance is also clear about our policy and position."

U.S. officials said this appeared to be a reference to Peking's basic position that full-scale relations with the U.S. cannot be achieved until the U.S. cuts off contacts and support for the Nationalist regime in Taiwan.

N-weapons in Europe vulnerable, study says

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional budget analysts said Saturday that U.S. nuclear weapons in Europe are vulnerable to surprise Soviet attack. They urged vigorous action to make sure U.S. weapons could survive.

The analysts said that in order to discourage a Soviet nuclear strike against Western Europe, it is vital that U.S. nuclear weapons be able to survive such an attack.

The ability to deter an attack has become the most important purpose of the 7,000 U.S. tactical nuclear weapons deployed in Europe, staff members of the Congressional Budget office said in a 45-page study.

Tactical nuclear weapons are designed for use chiefly on regional battlefields. Though much more destructive than conventional high-explosive artillery and bombs, they are less powerful and shorter-ranged than the strategic intercontinental missiles aimed by the United States and Russia at each other's heartlands.

The study said that 100 or so sites where U.S. tactical nuclear weapons are based on European soil are vulnerable to nuclear and conventional attack.

A well-designed and executed Soviet attack could destroy a large number of them, the analysts said.

The study suggested that currently planned improvements in U.S. tactical nuclear weaponry, such as improved accuracy and ranges, "do not appear to contribute strongly to deterring Soviet first use of nuclear weapons."

It proposed changes in those forces which might improve their ability as a deterrent.

Among the suggestions were concealment, sea basing of weapons and early dispersal in time of crisis.

The study proposed reduction or elimination of what it termed "marginally useful or highly vulnerable weapons such as the Nike-Hercules antiaircraft missile, the old Honest John battlefield bombardment missile, nuclear land mines and "quick reaction alert forces" which include fighter-bombers armed with nuclear weapons for use against ground targets.

The basic aim of U.S. tactical nuclear weapons in Europe "must be to deter the enemy from using his nuclear arsenal," the study said.

Plains police jail Berrigan protest group

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Philip Berrigan and six associates were taken into custody Saturday within sight of President-elect Carter's home. They were protesting against U.S. nuclear arms policies.

Berrigan, a former Jesuit priest and protest movement veteran, was told by one of this community's three policemen that he and his group lacked a permit to display a large banner reading "Nuclear Weapons Massacre the Innocent." The seven were taken to the Sumter County sheriff's office in nearby Americus.

Hearings on House ethics set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The special House commission created in the wake of House scandals holds hearings this week on options for cracking down on congressmen's finances.

These may be the final hearings before the so-called Obeys Commission on Administrative Review holds a scheduled meeting Feb. 8 to approve its final recommendations to the House.

The hearings this week will deal with options on requiring public disclosure of congressmen's finances and prohibiting or putting limitations on their outside income, gifts, office accounts — and travel, if they are lame ducks.

CHAIRMAN David R. Obey, D-Wis., said "we believe it is essential that the House act as rapidly as possible to insure that the financial affairs of members of the House do not contribute in any way to the public's lack of confidence in the House as an institution."

Creation of the Obeys commission was among a series of actions taken by the House last year in response to the Capitol Hill sex scandal and allegations of misuse by some congressmen of their House funds.

The options on which the public hearings will be held Thursday and Friday were prepared by a commission task force headed by Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind.

He said the options generally are:

—Financial disclosure. Keep the present system of reporting finances to the House Ethics Committee but make it public; require public disclosure of income tax returns, or require congressmen to publicly disclose all their income and assets.

—Outside income. Prohibit it entirely or regulate it, for example, by setting a maximum dollar limit on the outside income a congressman may accept.

—Gifts. Require public disclosure of all gifts, set a dollar limit on the value of gifts a congressman may accept or prohibit acceptance of any gifts except small ones from immediate family members.

—Office accounts which do not now require public accounting of any kind. Require public accounting, prohibit them entirely or place limitations on them.

—Publicly financed travel by lame-duck congressmen, meaning those who are going out of office. Prohibit it or limit it.

Hamilton said his task force will draft recommendations from among those options after the public hearings this week and submit them to the full commission for its consideration Feb. 8.

Leadoff witness will be former Secretary of Commerce Peter G. Peterson, chairman of the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries, which recommended last year that a new pay raise for congressmen, judges and administration officials be contingent on adoption of stiff new codes for financial conduct.

BART strike date canceled

OAKLAND (AP) — A Monday strike deadline has been canceled by the newly formed union for 110 middle-management employees of the Bay Area Rapid Transit system.

Mike Healy, acting manager of public information, said that BART's Supervisory and Professional Association agreed after late negotiations to cancel the deadline and continue bargaining. No new strike deadline was set.

The association, which is negotiating its first contract, includes maintenance shop superintendents and payroll supervisors.

In the event of a strike, Healy said, trains would continue to run, but he added, "We don't know to what extent it would affect our operation."

Hearings on House ethics set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The special House commission created in the wake of House scandals holds hearings this week on options for cracking down on congressmen's finances.

These may be the final hearings before the so-called Obeys Commission on Administrative Review holds a scheduled meeting Feb. 8 to approve its final recommendations to the House.

The hearings this week will deal with options on requiring public disclosure of congressmen's finances and prohibiting or putting limitations on their outside income, gifts, office accounts — and travel, if they are lame ducks.

CHAIRMAN David R. Obey, D-Wis., said "we believe it is essential that the House act as rapidly as possible to insure that the financial affairs of members of the House do not contribute in any way to the public's lack of confidence in the House as an institution."

Creation of the Obeys commission was among a series of actions taken by the House last year in response to the Capitol Hill sex scandal and allegations of misuse by some congressmen of their House funds.

The options on which the public hearings will be held Thursday and Friday were prepared by a commission task force headed by Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind.

He said the options generally are:

—Financial disclosure. Keep the present system of reporting finances to the House Ethics Committee but make it public; require public disclosure of income tax returns, or require congressmen to publicly disclose all their income and assets.

—Outside income. Prohibit it entirely or regulate it, for example, by setting a maximum dollar limit on the outside income a congressman may accept.

—Gifts. Require public disclosure of all gifts, set a dollar limit on the value of gifts a congressman may accept or prohibit acceptance of any gifts except small ones from immediate family members.

—Office accounts which do not now require public accounting of any kind. Require public accounting, prohibit them entirely or place limitations on them.

—Publicly financed travel by lame-duck congressmen, meaning those who are going out of office. Prohibit it or limit it.

Hamilton said his task force will draft recommendations from among those options after the public hearings this week and submit them to the full commission for its consideration Feb. 8.

Leadoff witness will be former Secretary of Commerce Peter G. Peterson, chairman of the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries, which recommended last year that a new pay raise for congressmen, judges and administration officials be contingent on adoption of stiff new codes for financial conduct.

BART strike date canceled

OAKLAND (AP) — A Monday strike deadline has been canceled by the newly formed union for 110 middle-management employees of the Bay Area Rapid Transit system.

Mike Healy, acting manager of public information, said that BART's Supervisory and Professional Association agreed after late negotiations to cancel the deadline and continue bargaining. No new strike deadline was set.

The association, which is negotiating its first contract, includes maintenance shop superintendents and payroll supervisors.

In the event of a strike, Healy said, trains would continue to run, but he added, "We don't know to what extent it would affect our operation."

Worst aspect of power is giving it up

Ford administration officials know the future won't be the same

EDITOR'S NOTE — With a close look at the outgoing President and the men who left before him, with interviews with Cabinet members and high White House officials, with fresh insight into the human equation of government, Saul Pett examines the other side of transition: the trauma of losing power.

By SAUL PETT
WASHINGTON — Elliot Richardson, a man for all seasons who is out of season, has a playful idea.

It is to collect the blitest people about to lose their jobs in the federal government and form a small counterpart of the executive branch on the outside.

"We would hire ourselves out as professional opponents of whatever the new administration does. Anything they are for we are the experts in being against. We'd provide the analysis, develop the action recommendations, design the campaigns for public support, draft the bills for Congress. You could make millions that way, don't you think?"

"IF THE administration drives up the price of mushrooms with a tariff on foreign mushrooms which are more cheaply produced, we're automatically for the mushroom eaters.

If the President offers an energy contingency plan which in a crisis called for curtailment of weekend travel, the tourist industry would know automatically they could come to us and we'd develop the reasons why this is a terrible idea. If . . ."

The outgoing Secretary of Commerce, who holds so many ex-titles he lives in fear of being introduced one day as the former Elliot Richardson, was, of course, making a joke about his future plans. But the area of his humor reflects a question occupying the minds of many of the nation's leaders who are now 11 days away from being stripped of all rank and almost all privileges:

How are you going to keep 'em down on the farm or up in the board room after they have seen the Great Inside, the center of the action and the power and the sometime glory, the perks and the pressure cookers at the highest levels of the federal establishment?

IT IS a facing Gerald Ford because he has been President and won't be again; Elliot Richardson because he has been almost everything else in the executive branch but President; Henry Kissinger because he has lived and labored at the core of world peace or war for eight intense years. A problem of adjustment for the many others far removed from Armageddon but still in the thrall of the consuming challenge, the GERALD FORD, comforted by daughter Susan as he conceded defeat to Jimmy Carter on Nov. 3, wasn't a victim of White House ego-inflation, but needs to find something in private life that will absorb his energy and experience.

long, long hours, the heady excitement of trying to make a government of 215 million people work. Good, bad or indifferent, they tried and they will miss it.

"I can imagine," says Richardson now in a serious vein, "Feeling a sense of deprivation from not being a part of things I'll be reading about in the papers. A feeling that when I get up in the morning there isn't really anything very much facing me that day, no need to master the essence of a problem as soon as possible, no way to use accumulated experience, a sense of how to resolve problems, how to move things from here to there, how to elicit consensus and cooperation.

"It's like race horses no longer brought to the track. They probably are quite comfortable in their pastures. But it's different, very different."

A MAN leaving a high-powered executive job in private business may also go through a form of the bends, but re-entry from government has a special quality. You are no longer doing the people's business which, like virtue, apparently has its own rewards — a sense of purity, real or rationalized, in being able to tell yourself you are not working for personal profit but for the public good.

Some men steal, many feed their egos and political dreams at the public trough but, despite Watergate, there is still reason to believe that the majority of major bureaucrats put up with the long hours, the relatively short pay, the public cynicism and because they savor this sense of dedication.

"In 25 years I've worked for great men and I've worked for bastards," said a man now cleaning out his desk in the upper reaches of the State Department. "But here, at least, you have the illusion that every piece of paper that comes across involves the public interest. And that sustains you."

PRESIDENTS may not be any more dedicated than the thousands of faceless bureaucrats who work for them, but in leaving they face a downhill slope that is longer and steeper.

In adjusting to private citizenry, Gerald Ford has at least this going for him: Before he got it, he never lusted for the job. He was in it only two and a half years and, all hands seem to agree, never became addicted to power. Even in its small uses. Orders were more often questions than orders.

"Bob," he'd say to his military aide, Maj. Robert Barrett, "do you suppose we can use a helicopter on this trip and save the long car ride?"

"Mr. President," Barrett said on more than one occasion, "you're President. You can do anything you want."

BUT GOING into retirement he will not have that comforting annuity enjoyed in every man who went before him, the knowledge that once there was a time when a majority of his countrymen voted to make him their leader. Even Richard Nixon has that to cling to.

Gerald Ford never wanted the job but having gotten it he wanted to keep it by public affirmation, election. He thought he had earned the right to enter history with more than the unique title of "caretaker President."

"He thought he had done a good job here," said a man a few steps from the Oval Office. "He wanted to keep doing it because he thought he was right. He especially thought he had led a spiritual revival in the country. He genuinely identified himself with that great feeling we all had July 4. And that, more than anything, explains that look of deep hurt in his eyes on Nov. 3 and some of the days that followed."

"NONE OF us who hasn't experienced it," said Ron Nessen, the President's press secretary, "can even come close to understanding that feeling. You work hard, you campaign hard. On Nov. 2, you seek the ultimate judgment of your 215 million people, and it comes back, thumbs down."

While no one around Gerald Ford expects him to become a brooding Hamlet in retirement, it is agreed he will have his problems. For 28 years in government, he was accustomed to coming to his desk every morning and working his way down the stack of paper. These mornings, the stack is very low. After Jan. 20, it will be all gone.

"Because of his energy level, his relative youthfulness at 63, his part patterns of work," said Maj. Barrett, who goes into retirement with Ford as chief assistant, "he will have to have a real replacement for what he does now. It cannot be artificial, it will have to have content and real challenge."

ACCORDINGLY, at Ford's behest, Barrett has been studying the ways in which other Presidents spent their days after the White House. All of them kept busy, but something was missing.

It feels, William Howard Taft once said, "like a giant locomotive suddenly pulling a toy train." The momentum remains. The payload is gone.

To bridge the gap from real power to no power, Lyndon Baines Johnson, that one-man cannonballing express, threw himself with characteristic fury into his memoirs, a series of TV interviews, organizing the Johnson Library and the Johnson School of Public Affairs and running his ranch. Especially his ranch.

"He ran his cows the way he once ran the country," said his old friend, James Rowe. "All out."

THE TRACTORS and the pickup trucks were equipped with two-way radios and all hands were well advised to keep in close touch with the commander in chief. Where once he studied status reports on bills before Congress, he now read, with care, about the egg production of his 200 chickens. The body count in Vietnam was replaced by the latest attendance figures at his birthplace and his library.

And, writes Doris Kearns tells us, once during a dry spell when a water pump failed and new parts were urgently needed, Johnson personally tracked down the manufacturer in Cincinnati by phone. He finally was assured the parts shipment was being expedited. Like a President thanking an allied Prime Minister for the promise of two air squadrons, Johnson thanked the parts man "for your help and support at this critical time."

His transition into private life was helped by his successor, Richard Nixon, according to Tom Johnson, who was the late President's administrative assistant in retirement and is now publisher of the Dallas Times Herald.

"Nixon treated him with enormous respect," Tom Johnson recalled.

"Every Friday, a Jetstar would land at the ranch with intelligence information. He was also advised in advance of major events. In fact, a day or two before he died, he was told that a peace agreement with Hanoi was about to be announced."

LIKE LYNDON Johnson, Dwight Eisenhower was long accustomed to power and the center of the action when his turn came to ride down Pennsylvania Avenue with the new man. Retiring to his farm in Gettysburg, he still retained his deep interest in national affairs while having no power to do anything about them.

He sublimated, especially in his first year out of office. When he read of a new national problem, he'd get on the phone and call various people, especially former members of his cabinet. He'd ask what they would do if they were still in a position to do anything about anything. And that was it, a meeting of a shadow cabinet by phone, poker for matchsticks.

Among recent Presidents, Harry Truman seemed to have the least difficulty in transition. This was in the days before ex-Presidents had the Secret Service with them in retirement. Returned to Independence, Harry Truman drove his own car, carried in the firewood, hauled out the ashes, helped with the dishes and, like most of his countrymen in a democracy, caught occasional hell from his wife for shooting from the hip.

"I DON'T worry about myself," Truman used to say. "I just have a good time as I go along. Leaving the White House involves no problem of adjustment if you were a common citizen before."

This quality of perspective, this self-sense of being ordinary, is frequently ascribed to one of Ford's admirers, Gerald Ford. It is never ascribed to Henry Kissinger. Which brings us to the Eastern Airlines shuttle, which out of towners may have to be told is the non-plush, non-reservation, common mode of air travel between Washington and New York. Though both have grown accustomed to government

Giving up power is tough to take planes, people in Washington can somehow visualize Gerald Ford flying the shuttle but not Henry Kissinger.

And so, in a recent conversation about his departure from office and all its perquisites, Kissinger was asked by a reporter:

"Mr. Secretary, is it true that CBS has offered you $50,000 for the exclusive rights to film you getting on the shuttle?"

KISSINGER: "True. They offered to make it $75,000 if I'd get into a middle seat."

Kissinger can and probably will make a pile of money from books, which should ease the pain of his transition. It is also likely that the new administration will call on him now and then for special uses. But mostly, day to day, he will be out of it, away from the action and the power, cut off from the daily cables from around the world, the umbilical cord of master diplomats.

"It will be difficult for him," said an associate, "the first time a head of state comes to Washington and Henry is not invited to the state dinner at the White House or the visitor doesn't seek him out for tea privately."

HAVING become a familiar face on the evening news from crisis points all over the world, Kissinger, at least, will be spared the fate of one of his predecessors. Dean Acheson left the state department in 1953 an embittered man, succeeded by a secretary who sought to discredit his policies completely.

A few months out of office, Acheson was riding a Pullman car where the man across the aisle was clearly having difficulty placing him. Finally, the stranger came over.

"Excuse me, sir, but aren't you John Foster Dulles?"

Acheson, mustache quivering: "Good pause! God pause! No!"

ONE MAN who does not mind, in the least, not being recognized by strangers is William E. Colby, until 10 months ago director of the Central Intelligence Agency. Now in private life, writing a book, giving lectures and hoping up for a law practice he left 26 years ago. America's former chief spook still attracts protesters, especially on publicized campus appearances.

Colby is no longer attended by CIA bodyguards, a fact, he said, which does not make him uneasy although he still carries to p secrets in his head. He takes only ordinary precautions, he said, like having good locks on the doors of his home and not following a repetitious pattern of behavior, like being at the same street corner the same time every day.

"I don't see that anything more is necessary," he said. "After all, capturing me and squeezing secrets out of me would be quite a venture, a very difficult operation for any foreign country. The odds would be prohibitive."

COLBY DOES not miss, he said, the lure of the inner councils of government, the occasional crisis atmosphere or the perquisites of office. What he does miss, he said, is information.

"I have to work hard to follow what is going on in the world through the papers and television. In one half hour of reading at the CIA I used to be very well informed. Also, I still find it difficult to read a whole book. The CIA accustomed me to short, sharp resumes."

Lawrence Eagleburger will miss it all, including having his mind and stamina stretched to the outer limits by Kissinger, a fierce taskmaster. "There wasn't a day I didn't have to be doing my best. If I gave him one sloppy answer, I'd get hit in the chops." He'll even miss the foulups, one in particular.

An American ambassador in country X of Africa was about to be replaced when the Secretary of State took off on his first African swing. Somebody gooted and the change in ambassadors was announced in Washington prematurely, just as Kissinger was landing in country X, to be greeted by the envoy just fired. Kissinger was on the phone moments later. Eagleburger apologized frantically for the awkward mistake in timing.

"THAT'S ALL right, Larry," said the modern Metternich, after a pause. "Just don't announce my resignation until I get home because I need the plane to get back."

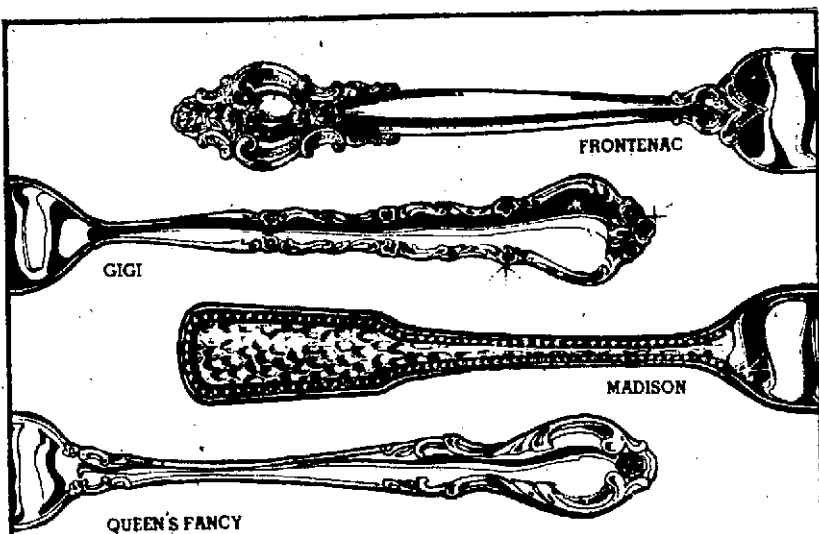

RON NESSEN, 42, a media man himself, will not miss combat with the White House media. "As individuals," he said, "reporters may be as compassionate as anyone. As a group, they are slow to forgive and forget a mistake."

He takes with him this framed quotation from his wall: "A press officer is like a man pegged out on an African ant hill for the termites of the daily press to eat into at will."

You, too, can have a Ph.D.

"I can assure you the Bureau of School Approvals will investigate." For $60, Pal Mar Enterprises offers a diploma from Franklin University of Philadelphia, Penn., or Bradford University of Pasadena.

"You will receive your degree in two weeks' time or less!" boasts Pacific Southern Corp., claiming its $200 bachelor's and $225 doctorates are "documents you can be proud of."

By Saturday, Career Counseling, Pal Mar Enterprises and Pacific Southern Corp. had failed to answer I.P.T. requests for interviews. The requests were made, in writing, in early December.

However, the director of Evaluations & Management International (EMI) in Inglewood agreed to talk.

"WE'VE BEEN scrutinized by the police, the FBI and postal inspectors," said John Ansah. "They have all tried to get degrees while undercover, but we know who they are."

Ansah said EMI bears "absolutely no relation to diploma mills."

"A diploma mill is like a printing press," he asserted. "You cannot get a degree here unless you're competent. Our certification (degree-conferring) does not represent a printing press."

Hood, however, countered that, "I personally feel EMI is a diploma mill. Diploma mills are defined in the Education Code as persons or organizations selling or giving academic degrees and similar documents without requiring any real academic achievement."

"EMI is blatantly phony," Hood added. "It's just begging to have some legal action taken."

According to Ansah, EMI issues diplomas that bear the name of a university which has been accredited by the International Accreditation Association (IAA).

AS FOR IAA, Hood says it is "a worthless outfit whose accreditation is not worth a hill of beans."

An example of a legitimate accreditation team is the Western Association of Schools and Colleges, he said.

The EMI promotional brochures state, "We provide no telephone number or street address because such contacts would require additional staff and increase the cost of the service."

It adds, "Yes, you may acquire a class ring." EMI offers a money-back guarantee for its diplomas, which cost $1,000 for a bachelor's, $1,500 for a master's and $2,000 for a Ph.D.

"According to the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education," said EMI director Ansah, "some 78 million Americans between the ages of 21 and 65 have one or more years of college but no college degree."

"OUR PURPOSE," he explained, "is to allow these people the opportunity to evaluate their own achievements and then grant a degree based on our evaluation."

In Sacramento, Assistant Atty. Gen. Eugene Hill said, "We haven't had citizen complaints in this area in years."

Hill, in charge of the attorney general's public welfare section, said an investigation would be launched "if (these) diploma mills are brought to our attention."

The U.S. Postal Service can investigate improper use of the mails if the buyer claims he or she was defrauded.

"Who in the public wants to admit they bought something making them a felon?" asked Los Angeles postal inspector Dalling Webb.

"We've investigated diploma mills forever, but unless the state takes firm action, they will bloom."

WHY WOULD someone buy such a degree?

"It's a short cut to success," said Hood, who wrote his doctoral dissertation on diploma mills in 1970 at UCLA.

"Many people like the title. It's an ego thing. They go into a restaurant and like to be called doctor when ordering a table."

Well, why shouldn't those who buy worthless degrees be allowed to waste their money? Hood and other educators have several reasons:

- Many diploma mill outfits use misleading advertising in foreign countries, causing students to think they can get a bona-fide education by enrolling in unregistered American schools.

- Victims are often financially or educationally disadvantaged.

- Phony degrees flooding the post-college job market decrease the value and integrity of legitimately earned diplomas.

- Employers cannot always tell the difference between degrees from diploma mills and those earned at legitimate colleges.

- Many private non-traditional schools have opened their doors in the last half-dozen years to meet demands of a credentials-crazed society.

Home boogaloos to sea

Associated Press

Their home may not set records for the 100-yard dash, but Margaret and Don Fraser's Palos Verdes place overlooking the Pacific might win a dance contest.

In 20 years their place has boogalooed 85 feet toward the sea and is still moving — four to five feet a year — on a slow-moving landslide.

"Some people get dizzy when they visit us," said Mrs. Fraser. "Some even get a sensation like seasickness."

"My daughter can't get used to the kitchen," she said. "When she comes to visit, she'll chop vegetables and they all fall on the floor. You have to hold onto the pan when you're cooking. You put dishes on the table and they start sliding toward the floor."

She said periodically the house tips so badly that beds slide up against the wall.

About every two or three years the home is leveled with hydraulic jacks.

"The kitchen tips. We have to keep raising the porch. And sometimes we can't open doors, so we have to jack up an area to get them open," Mrs. Fraser says.

Even so, living on a landslide has its advantages. Taxes on the high-risk property are low. Nobody will build next door and ruin their "gorgeous view of the Pacific," Mrs. Fraser said. Law forbids any new construction in the slide area.

Homes of some neighbors have moved as much as 150 feet and some have tipped into the ocean. In the late 1950s, a major slide damaged or destroyed 125 homes in the area.

Fraser, a 60-year-old boat insurance salesman, and his wife are among 30 families still living in the Portuguese Bend area of the Palos Verdes Peninsula. They are among the few original owners, having moved there in 1950.

"We stay because we both love the country, and we couldn't possibly afford to buy a place now with this beautiful view," she said.

Fraser added, "The house cracks and groans, but we're accustomed to it."

There's no real danger, added his wife.

"We're not going to just slide into the ocean," she said. "The houses that way near the ocean did slide off, but we've got a long way to go."

DON FRASER stands on front steps of his Palos Verdes home, which has moved 85 feet toward the ocean in the past 20 years.

CIA specter hovers over Cuba

Castro depends on it to preserve unity

tal machinery recently installed mean that Castro is now in a position to contemplate a serious change in his foreign policy, one of the diplomats said.

Economic developments also pressure for change. Since 1974, the world sugar price has dropped from 65.5 cents per pound to 7.5. Meanwhile drought hit Cuba, pinching production. As the rising price of world oil forced the costs of needed imports upward, Cuba has found itself in critical shape. It is short of hard currencies to pay for the industrial equipment ordered when times were better.

Consequently, Cuba has become more dependent on the Soviet Union. Current estimates put Soviet support at about $2.5 billion per year. And the Russians, some diplomats here say, seem to be encouraging Cuba toward relations with the United States because they are weary of the burden.

But trade with the United States would help ease the strains a conclusion verified by Cuba's Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez in an interview. He said there are two other reasons Cuba wants relations with the United States: access to advanced U.S. technology and the absurdity of two countries 90 miles apart remaining hostile when their peoples are not in conflict.

A number of major barriers stand in the way of normalization:

- Elimination of the current U.S. sugar embargo would not give Cuba free access to the American market. Under existing U.S. law, congress cannot restore the Cuban sugar quota until confiscated American property is paid for. A total of $1.8 billion in American claims for expropriated property are outstanding.

- To qualify for normal trade status, Cuba must allow freedom of emigration. Under the trade act of 1974, Congress adopted the so-called Jackson amendment, which was aimed at the Soviet Union. But its provisions, requiring free movement of peoples, apply to all non-market economies, which Cuba clearly is. Cuban groups in the United States estimate 200,000 of their countrymen want to leave the island.

- Political prisoners. Eight

U.S. citizens are held in Cuban jails, and Castro acknowledged at a 1975 Swedish embassy reception that there are a minimum of 10,000 Cuban political prisoners. Cuban exile groups in the United States estimate there are 40,000.

Those are not insoluble problems, but they are difficult problems, and the talks leading to normalization would of necessity be long and arduous. Neither could they operate on a quid pro quo basis, because there are many more American quids than Cuban quos.

What would be the advantages to the United States? Authorities in Washington cite these:

- The reunion of Cuban families separated by the Florida Straits and the end to the cruel separation of the aged and the ailing from their loved ones.

- The end of Cuba's isolation from the western world.

- Relieving a situation that contributes to political instability and uncertainty in the Caribbean.

- A modest sale of technology, but little other trade.

Cubans and Americans interviewed for this article agreed that time is running out for normalizing the relationship. Cuba is being steadily Sovietized. Her economy is closely inter-twined with the USSR.

Most of its middle management and many of its present leaders were children at the time of Castro's revolution. They are the product of Soviet educations. Younger Cubans, in particular, show little curiosity and zero interest in the United States.

If the sugar cane curtain remains in place, these observers say, the ideological straitjacket in which Cubans seem to be comfortable will be almost impossible to remove.

Castro's interest in resuming relations indicates his confidence that his revolution has succeeded and has solid backing from the Cuban people.

FOR ALL the austerity that is visible in Havana — the blackouts, shortages of consumer goods and high prices of non-rationed items — the Cuban people clearly believe in Castro. Most of those accessible to American visitors — and that includes virtually anyone on the street willing to talk — honestly reluctant to set standards, but, with the vast amount of oil coming into the country, the time has come to set more stringent standards," said Russell E. Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

The Coast Guard said it learned of the latest incident Saturday when the 790-foot Mary Ann, carrying only ballast, reported that an explosion and fire had occurred while the vessel was cleaning its tanks.

The Coast Guard said the Liberian ship, built to carry oil or metallic ore, was moving again to ward the East Coast under its own power and did not appear to be in danger of sinking.

A helicopter was en route to the Mary Ann to evacuate an injured crew member.

Meanwhile, the discovery of debris and fuel oil from the Grand Zenith narrowed the search for possible survivors from the vessel's 38-man crew.

The Grand Zenith was last heard from Dec. 30 and is presumed sunk. Searchers have found two life jackets, a trunk and mattress from the tanker about 330 miles east southeast of Cape Cod.

Sinatra flies in as hunt for mom fails

PALM SPINGS (AP) — Authorities held out little hope Saturday that Frank Sinatra's mother or three other persons on a missing private jet might be found alive.

Mountain climbers fought snow and high winds to search for the missing twin-engine airplane on the highest reaches of Southern California's tallest peak. But there was no word of any sighting.

Sinatra rode in a helicopter from daybreak until late afternoon, participating in the search, a spokesman said.

The white Lear Jet disappeared from radar screens Thursday evening on a flight from Palm Springs to Las Vegas, where the entertainer's 82-year-old mother, Natalie "Dolly" Sinatra, was going to watch his opening at Caesars Palace. Also on the plane were another passenger and a two-man crew.

San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department spokesmen said they believed that the chartered jet had slammed into the 9,000-foot level of Mt. San Geronimo, which is 11,502 feet high.

Deputy Vic Brimmer said radar data indicated that the plane had hit the mountain at about 345 miles an hour.

"YOU CAN make your own guess about the chances for surviving a crash at that speed into granite," he said.

Rocky trails on the slope are buried under six feet of snow, and the helicopter sent up to look for wreckage reported heavy turbulence from winds.

Officials said the search would be abandoned at nightfall and resumed at dawn today. A sheriff's spokesman said the search would continue until the plane and its passengers are found.

"We don't ever give up," he declared.

The owner of the missing jet, Chris Karamanos of Jet Aviation in Las Vegas, said the plane had carried some supplies, including blankets, pillows, fruit, cheese, crackers and liquor. He said it was not equipped with an emergency locator device that helps officials find downed aircraft.

"IF THE plane went down intact, (the supplies) would be of some help," the sheriff's spokesman said. "The danger in this type of thing is people try to walk away from the wreck. Normally if they stay with the aircraft they have a better chance of surviving."

Crew members of the flight were identified as Donald J. Weier, 36, the pilot, and Jerold Foley, 43, both of Las Vegas.

Sinatra, who performed on schedule Thursday night after being told the plane was missing, flew to his Palm Springs home Friday. He was joined there by his son, Frank Sinatra Jr. The younger Sinatra told reporters he believed the other passenger was Mrs. Anthony Carboni, widow of a physician and a friend of Mrs. Sinatra's.

Sunny skies foreseen after 3-day storm

Clear skies are expected to help dry out the Southland today and Monday, but mountain driving may still be tricky for snow-lovers as highway crews work to clean up after a three-day storm.

The National Weather Service said the high in Long Beach would be near 65 this afternoon, about 5 degrees warmer than Saturday's high, and tonight's low in the low 40s.

The forecast for the Super Bowl in Pasadena was for sunny skies and a temperature of about 64 at kickoff time, with light winds blowing throughout the game.

Lowland sightseers jammed mountain roads leading to recreation areas Saturday, continuing a traffic jam on the Interstate 5 Grapevine route at Gorman, which had been snowbound for 30 hours.

Tow trucks labored to pull more than a dozen cars and several heavy trucks from snowbanks along the road. The California Highway Patrol said off-ramps along the highway were closed, making it difficult to exit and get fuel.

Eden very ill

Associated Press

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Former British Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden became seriously ill during a visit to this resort area. A Royal Air Force plane was dispatched from London Saturday to take him home. The 79-year-old Eden, who has the title of Lord Avon, was taken from an ambulance and placed aboard the RAF jet shortly after it arrived at Palm Beach International Airport.

You, too, can have a Ph.D.

"I can assure you the Bureau of School Approvals will investigate." For $60, Pal Mar Enterprises offers a diploma from Franklin University of Philadelphia, Penn., or Bradford University of Pasadena.

"You will receive your degree in two weeks' time or less!" boasts Pacific Southern Corp., claiming its $200 bachelor's and $225 doctorates are "documents you can be proud of."

By Saturday, Career Counseling, Pal Mar Enterprises and Pacific Southern Corp. had failed to answer I.P.T. requests for interviews. The requests were made, in writing, in early December.

However, the director of Evaluations & Management International (EMI) in Inglewood agreed to talk.

"WE'VE BEEN scrutinized by the police, the FBI and postal inspectors," said John Ansah. "They have all tried to get degrees while undercover, but we know who they are."

Ansah said EMI bears "absolutely no relation to diploma mills."

"A diploma mill is like a printing press," he asserted. "You cannot get a degree here unless you're competent. Our certification (degree-conferring) does not represent a printing press."

Hood, however, countered that, "I personally feel EMI is a diploma mill. Diploma mills are defined in the Education Code as persons or organizations selling or giving academic degrees and similar documents without requiring any real academic achievement."

"EMI is blatantly phony," Hood added. "It's just begging to have some legal action taken."

According to Ansah, EMI issues diplomas that bear the name of a university which has been accredited by the International Accreditation Association (IAA).

AS FOR IAA, Hood says it is "a worthless outfit whose accreditation is not worth a hill of beans."

An example of a legitimate accreditation team is the Western Association of Schools and Colleges, he said.

The EMI promotional brochures state, "We provide no telephone number or street address because such contacts would require additional staff and increase the cost of the service."

It adds, "Yes, you may acquire a class ring." EMI offers a money-back guarantee for its diplomas, which cost $1,000 for a bachelor's, $1,500 for a master's and $2,000 for a Ph.D.

"According to the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education," said EMI director Ansah, "some 78 million Americans between the ages of 21 and 65 have one or more years of college but no college degree."

"OUR PURPOSE," he explained, "is to allow these people the opportunity to evaluate their own achievements and then grant a degree based on our evaluation."

In Sacramento, Assistant Atty. Gen. Eugene Hill said, "We haven't had citizen complaints in this area in years."

Hill, in charge of the attorney general's public welfare section, said an investigation would be launched "if (these) diploma mills are brought to our attention."

The U.S. Postal Service can investigate improper use of the mails if the buyer claims he or she was defrauded.

"Who in the public wants to admit they bought something making them a felon?" asked Los Angeles postal inspector Dailing Webb.

"We've investigated diploma mills forever, but unless the state takes firm action, they will bloom."

WHY WOULD someone buy such a degree?

"It's a short cut to success," said Hood, who wrote his doctoral dissertation on diploma mills in 1970 at UCLA.

"Many people like the title. It's an ego thing. They go into a restaurant and like to be called doctor when ordering a table."

Well, why shouldn't those who buy worthless degrees be allowed to waste their money? Hood and other educators have several reasons:

— Many diploma mill outfits use misleading advertising in foreign countries, causing students to think they can get a bona-fide education by enrolling in unregistered American schools.

— Victims are often financially or educationally disadvantaged.

— Phony degrees flooding the post-college job market decrease the value and integrity of legitimately earned diplomas.

— Employers cannot always tell the difference between degrees from diploma mills and those earned at legitimate colleges.

— Many private non-traditional schools have opened their doors in the last half-dozen years to meet demands of a credentials-crazed society.

Home boogaloos to sea

Associated Press

Their home may not set records for the 100-yard dash, but Margaret and Don Fraser's Palos Verdes place overlooking the Pacific might win a dance contest.

In 20 years their place has boogaloosed 85 feet toward the sea and is still moving — four to five feet a year — on a slow-moving landslide.

"Some people get dizzy when they visit us," said Mrs. Fraser. "Some even get a sensation like seasickness."

"My daughter can't get used to the kitchen," she said. "When she comes to visit, she'll chop vegetables and they all fall on the floor. You have to hold onto the pan when you're cooking. You put dishes on the table and they start sliding toward the floor."

She said periodically the house tips so badly that beds slide up against the wall.

About every two or three years the home is leveled with hydraulic jacks.

"The kitchen tips. We have to keep raising the porch. And sometimes we can't open doors, so we have to jack up an area to get them open," Mrs. Fraser says.

Even so, living on a landslide has its advantages. Taxes on the high-risk property are low. Nobody will build next door and ruin their "gorgeous view of the Pacific," Mrs. Fraser said. Law forbids any new construction in the slide area.

Homes of some neighbors have moved as much as 150 feet and some have tipped into the ocean. In the late 1950s, a major slide damaged or destroyed 125 homes in the area.

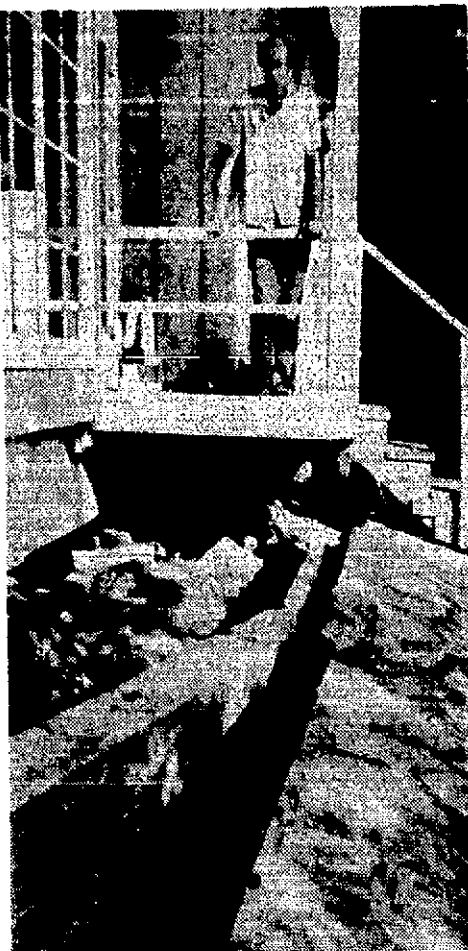

Fraser, a 60-year-old boat insurance salesman, and his wife are among 30 families still living in the Portuguese Bend area of the Palos Verdes Peninsula. They are among the few original owners, having moved there in 1950.

"We stay because we both love the country, and we couldn't possibly afford to buy a place now with this beautiful view," she said.

Fraser added, "The house cracks and groans, but we're accustomed to it."

There's no real danger, added his wife.

"We're not going to just slide into the ocean," she said. "The houses that were near the ocean did slide off, but we've got a long way to go."

DON FRASER stands on front steps of his Palos Verdes home, which has moved 85 feet toward the ocean in the past 20 years.

CIA specter hovers over Cuba

Castro depends on it to preserve unity

tal machinery recently installed mean that Castro is now in a position to contemplate a serious change in his foreign policy, one of the diplomats said.

Economic developments also pressure for change. Since 1974, the world sugar price has dropped from 65.5 cents per pound to 7.5. Meanwhile drought hit Cuba, pinching production. As the rising price of world oil forced the costs of needed imports upward, Cuba has found itself in critical shape. It is short of hard currencies to pay for the industrial equipment ordered when times were better.

Consequently, Cuba has become more dependent on the Soviet Union. Current estimates put Soviet support at about $2.5 million per day or $1 billion per year. And the Russians, some diplomats here say, seem to be encouraging Cuba to ward relations with the United States because they are weary of the burden.

That trade with the United States would help ease the strains a conclusion verified by Cuba's Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez in an interview. He said there are two other reasons Cuba wants relations with the United States: access to advanced U.S. technology and the absurdity of two countries 90 miles apart remaining hostile when their peoples are not in conflict.

A number of major barriers stand in the way of normalization:

— Elimination of the current U.S. sugar embargo would not give Cuba free access to the American market. Under existing U.S. law, congress cannot restore the Cuban sugar quota until confiscated American property is paid for. A total of $1.8 billion in American claims for expropriated property are outstanding.

— To qualify for normal trade status, Cuba must allow freedom of emigration. Under the trade act of 1974, Congress adopted the so-called Jackson amendment, which was aimed at the Soviet Union. But its provisions, requiring free movement of peoples, apply to all non-market economies, which Cuba clearly is. Cuban groups in the United States estimate 200,000 of their countrymen want to leave the island.

— Political prisoners. Eight

U.S. citizens are held in Cuban jails, and Castro acknowledged at a 1975 Swedish embassy reception that there are a minimum of 10,000 Cuban political prisoners. Cuban exile groups in the United States estimate there are 40,000.

Those are not insoluble problems, but they are difficult problems, and the talks leading to normalization would of necessity be long and arduous. Neither could they operate on a quid pro quo basis, because there are many more American quids than Cuban quos.

What would be the advantages to the United States? Authorities in Washington cite these:

— The reunion of Cuban families separated by the Florida Straits and the end to the cruel separation of the aged and the ailing from their loved ones.

— The end of Cuba's isolation from the western world.

— Relieving a situation that contributes to political instability and uncertainty in the Caribbean.

— A modest sale of technology, but little other trade.

Cubans and Americans interviewed for this article agreed that time is running out for normalizing the relationship. Cuba is being steadily Sovietized. Her economy is closely inter-twined with the USSR.

Most of its middle management and many of its present leaders were children at the time of Castro's revolution. They are the product of Soviet educations. Younger Cubans, in particular, show little curiosity and zero interest in the United States.

If the sugar cane curtain remains in place, these observers say, the ideological straitjacket in which Cubans seem to be comfortable will be almost impossible to remove.

Castro's interest in resuming relations indicates his confidence that his revolution has succeeded and has solid backing from the Cuban people.

FOR ALL the austerity that is visible in Havana — the blackouts, shortages of consumer goods and high prices of non-rationed items — the Cuban people clearly believe in Castro. Most of those accessible to American visitors — and that includes virtually anyone on the street willing to talk — honestly reluctant to set standards, but, with the vast amount of oil coming into the country, the time has come to set more stringent standards," said Russell E. Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

The Coast Guard said it learned of the latest incident Saturday when the 790-foot Mary Ann, carrying only ballast, reported that an explosion and fire had occurred while the vessel was cleaning its tanks.

The Coast Guard said the Librarian ship, built to carry oil or metallic ore, was moving again to ward the East Coast under its own power and did not appear to be in danger of sinking.

A helicopter was en route to the Mary Ann to evacuate an injured crew member.

Meanwhile, the discovery of debris and fuel oil from the Grand Zenith narrowed the search for possible survivors from the vessel's 38-man crew.

The Grand Zenith was last heard from Dec. 30 and is presumed sunk. Searchers have found two life jackets, a trunk and mattress from the tanker about 330 miles east southeast of Cape Cod.

Sinatra flies in as hunt for mom fails

PALM SPINGS (AP) — Authorities held out little hope Saturday that Frank Sinatra's mother or three other persons on a missing private jet might be found alive.

Mountain climbers fought snow and high winds to search for the missing twin-engine airplane on the highest reaches of Southern California's tallest peak. But there was no word of any sighting.

Sinatra rode in a helicopter from daybreak until late afternoon, participating in the search, a spokesman said.

The white Lear Jet disappeared from radar screens Thursday evening on a flight from Palm Springs to Las Vegas, where the entertainer's 82-year-old mother, Natalie "Dolly" Sinatra, was going to watch his opening at Caesars Palace. Also on the plane were another passenger and a two-man crew.

San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department spokesmen said they believed that the chartered jet had slammed into the 9,000-foot level of Mt. San Geronimo, which is 11,502 feet high.

Deputy Vic Brimmer said radar data indicated that the plane had hit the mountain at about 345 miles an hour.

"YOU CAN make your own guess about the chances for surviving a crash at that speed into granite," he said.

Rocky trails on the slope are buried under six feet of snow, and the helicopter sent up to look for wreckage reported heavy turbulence from winds.

Officials said the search would be abandoned at nightfall and resumed at dawn today. A sheriff's spokesman said the search would continue until the plane and its passengers are found.

"We don't ever give up," he declared.

The owner of the missing jet, Chris Karamanos of Jet Aviation in Las Vegas, said the plane had carried some supplies, including blankets, pillows, fruit, cheese, crackers and liquor. He said it was not equipped with an emergency locator device that helps officials find downed aircraft.

"IF THE plane went down intact, (the supplies) would be of some help," the sheriff's spokesman said. "The danger in this type of thing is people try to walk away from the wreck. Normally if they stay with the aircraft they have a better chance of surviving."

Crew members of the flight were identified as Donald J. Weier, 36, the pilot, and Jerold Foley, 43, both of Las Vegas.

Sinatra, who performed on schedule Thursday night after being told the plane was missing, flew to his Palm Springs home Friday. He was joined there by his son, Frank Sinatra Jr. The younger Sinatra told reporters he believed the other passenger was Mrs. Anthony Carboni, widow of a physician and a friend of Mrs. Sinatra's.

Sunny skies foreseen after 3-day storm

Clear skies are expected to help dry out the Southland today and Monday, but mountain driving may still be tricky for snow-lovers as highway crews work to clean up after a three-day storm.

The National Weather Service said the high in Long Beach would be near 65 this afternoon, about 5 degrees warmer than Saturday's high, and tonight's low in the low 40s.

The forecast for the Super Bowl in Pasadena was for sunny skies and a temperature of about 64 at kickoff time, with light winds blowing throughout the game.

Lowland sightseers jammed mountain roads leading to recreation areas Saturday, continuing a traffic jam on the Interstate 5 Grapevine route at Gorman, which had been snowbound for 30 hours.

Tow trucks labored to pull more than a dozen cars and several heavy trucks from snowbanks along the road. The California Highway Patrol said off-ramps along the highway were closed, making it difficult to exit and get fuel.

Eden very ill

Associated Press

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Former British Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden became seriously ill during a visit to this resort area. A Royal Air Force plane was dispatched from London Saturday to take him home. The 79-year-old Eden, who has the title of Lord Avon, was taken from an ambulance and placed aboard the RAF jet shortly after it arrived at Palm Beach International Airport.

Election-rule chief under probe

Charged with illegally feeding data to GOP

By WARREN WEAVER JR.
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Vernon W. Thomson, chairman of the Federal Election Commission, finds himself in the embarrassing position of being investigated by the Department of Justice for a violation of the campaign law he is charged with enforcing.

The five other members of the bipartisan agency voted unanimously last week to refer to the attorney general a detailed report concluding that there was "reason to believe" Thomson had disclosed confidential investigative information to a partisan political operative and was thus subject to a $3,000 fine.

The report, by John G. Murphy Jr., the commission's general counsel, said that there was "some evidence on this record that perjury may have been committed and obstruction of justice attempted in the course of this investigation" but did not suggest that these questions be referred to the Justice Department.

THE RECIPIENT of the confidential information was Melvin R. Laird, the former secretary of defense and Republican representative from Wisconsin who now serves as senior counselor for Reader's Digest here.

According to the Murphy report, Thomson indicated to Laird at a mid-October Washington cocktail party that the election commission was actively pursuing a complaint of illegal campaign practices made against James Sasser, the Democratic Senate candidate in Tennessee in the 1976 primary.

This information passed from Laird through a series of individuals to officials of the campaign of Sen. Bill Brock, the Republican incumbent, and formed the basis for a Nashville newspaper article six days later that indicated there was substance to the two-month-old charges against his Democratic opponent.

Despite this unfavorable publicity just before the election, Sasser defeated Brock by 80,000 votes, out of 1.4 million cast.

THE CHARGES against Thomson are regarded as serious by commission officials. Although the information leak did not affect the outcome of the election, it raised significant questions about the agency's capacity to keep its private investigations from becoming a factor in partisan politics.

With Thomson not participating, the commission voted last week to refer the entire inquiry to Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

Thomas E. Harris, the agency chairman, concluded in a letter to Levi that it would "not be appropriate" for the five commissioners to investigate their colleague in "a problem of such delicacy and difficulty."

In a statement issued at that time, Thomson said: "I categorically deny wrongdoing in the matter and am confident that the final resolution will so demonstrate." He said that he supported the decision to refer the inquiry to the Justice Department "for further outside examination."

THOMSON SAID that he had "cooperated fully with the investigation thus far" and would continue to do so. The Murphy report, however, listed "six significant discrepancies" between the chairman's early description of the information leak and facts that the investigation later disclosed.

In the course of the investigation, Thomson engaged Jerris Leonard, an assistant attorney general in the Nixon administration, to represent him and subsequently changed his testimony about the Laird episode in several respects.

Two days before the Aug. 5 Tennessee primary, Sasser's opponent, Harry Sadler, filed a complaint with the commission charging Sasser with receiving illegal bank loans and failing to report campaign use of corporate aircraft. Newspaper articles about the charges appeared at that time.

THE CAMPAIGN law prohibits the commission and its employees or "any person" from making public any subsequent details of a commission investigation without the consent of its target. The purpose is to prevent the use of unsubstantiated charges to influence the outcome of an election.

According to the Murphy report, Laird approached Thomson at a cocktail party at the University Club on Oct. 19 and charged that the commission was not actively pursuing complaints against Democratic candidates in Tennessee, Minnesota and Maryland. Thomson, a former Republican governor of Wisconsin, defended the agency but has since been unclear about what he said.

Later, word reached the Brock campaign from Laird through a series of political functionaries, that the commission had subpoenaed some of Sasser's primary campaign records. Brock aides gave the report to The Nashville Banner, a daily newspaper.

Early in the investigation, according to Murphy, Laird declined to disclose the source of his information on the complaint against Sasser, citing "the Reader's Digest policy against revealing the identity of confidential news sources, although he stopped short of invoking a newsman's privilege."

The election commission still has before it the original complaint against Sasser for improper primary activity. The results of such investigations and enforcement procedures are not announced until the case is closed.

Envoys, kin show blood abnormality

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tests of some 300 U.S. diplomats and their dependents who served in Moscow show a more than 40 per cent increase in white blood cell counts, the State Department has disclosed.

However, department officials said, the abnormally high counts were temporary and medical authorities have concluded they "bore no relationship" to the beaming of Soviet microwaves at the U.S. Embassy.

In the Moscow group of Americans the average lymphocyte count was 2,947. In a comparison group of Americans returning from other foreign posts the average was 2,091.

Department medical specialists said two possible explanations are a low-grade upper respiratory infection and a parasite in the drinking water in the Soviet Union. These specialists said there was no greater incidence of cancer in the group from Moscow and no cancers have been found that are related to the microwave radiation.

1st black, several other women are ordained priests

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a spirit of reconciliation, the Episcopal Church on Saturday ordained its first black woman priest and added several other women to the ranks of its clergy.

The service at Washington Cathedral at which the Rev. Pauli Murray, the first black woman priest, was ordained was among several similar installation ceremonies across the country.

The Rev. Beverly Messinger-Harris, 29, was ordained in Rome, N.Y., and the Rev. Natalia Vonnegut, 44, entered the priesthood at Crawfordsville, Ind.

In all, the Episcopal Church plans to ordain 30 women as priests this month.

The service in Washington was watched by hundreds of friends and family members, who applauded as three women and three men ordinants completed the rituals that made them priests. Then all six were surrounded and embraced by well-wishers.

"THIS IS THE END of a long series of firsts for me," the Rev. Miss Murray said afterward. "It isn't being the first Negro woman; it is being a priest that frightens me."

The Rev. Miss Murray said it is the responsibility of the task that concerns her.

She is an attorney, scholar and social activist who has been involved in the struggles to end racial and sexual discrimination for the past 40 years. Now 66, she gave up a professorship at Brandeis University to become a candidate for the priesthood.

She said she planned to hold her first service as a priest at the Old Chapel of the Cross in Chapel Hill, N.C., Feb. 13, because that is where her grandmother was baptized in 1854.

Others ordained were the Rev. Elizabeth Wiesner, 59, affiliated with the Washington Cathedral; the Rev. Carole Crumley, 32, Christ Church in Washington; the Rev. Rayford W. Ellis, Washington; the Rev. Joel A. Gibson, Silver Spring, Md., and the Rev. John Leslie Rabb, Gaithersburg, Md.

Each candidate wore flowing white or bone-colored robes. Each one vowed "to conform to the doctrine, discipline and worship" of the Protestant Episcopal Church, USA, as it is formally known.

Bishop William F. Creighton and dozens of other priests laid their hands upon each candidate for a final prayer to complete the ceremony.

Then each new priest was covered in the richer embroidered ceremonial robes and vestments of the priesthood.

BEING ORDAINED Saturday is Rev. Pauli Murray, first black woman Episcopal priest.

THE SERVICE ALSO included a ceremony to recognize two women who were ordained as priests last September before the church general counsel had approved the admission of women to the clergy.

They were the Rev. Eleanor Lee McGee, a chaplain at American University here, and the Rev. Elizabeth Rosenberg, a native of Wilmington, Del.

The church has formally permitted the ordination of women priests only since Jan. 1.

Before the service a small number of Episcopalians from the Washington Diocese passed out leaflets expressing their disapproval.

The Rev. Edward Raffetto, rector of St. Thomas Parish in Prince Georges County, Md., said they represented about 40 persons in the diocese who oppose the ordination of women but have no plans to take further action.

Coffee price slowdown asked

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — President Alfonso Lopez, noting the New York call for a coffee boycott, proposed Saturday that Colombia and Brazil join to stabilize coffee prices at "reasonable levels."

In a telegram to Brazilian President Ernesto Geisel, Lopez said the New York City Department for Consumer Affairs supports a coffee boycott and "if this boycott is somehow successful, it would represent a serious blow for the policy of accord sponsored by your government and mine."

"It is for this reason that I consider it indispensable to ask you if the most convenient thing for our countries, and in general for all producers, would not be to try to stabilize prices at present levels or at those levels that we judge more appropriate."

In his reply, Geisel suggested instead the calling of a special meeting of the International Coffee Organization (ICO), which represents both exporters and importers, "to review the supply problem in the critical years of 1977-78."

Brazil and Colombia are by far the world's biggest coffee exporters. ICO figures for the "coffee year," from October 1975 through September 1976, show that Brazil exported 13.01 million bags and Colombia 7.02 million. A bag contains 132 pounds of coffee.

The price of coffee in the United States jumped from $1.25 a pound to $3 in the past year.

Producers say supply and demand is the reason for the price hikes, and one reason the supply is dwindling is a frost that killed much of Brazil's crop in 1975.

In his message, Lopez said he wanted "to see if we can jointly find a just, timely and satisfactory solution to the high levels reached by coffee prices abroad, which seem to have begun having an impact on consumption."

He added that if Brazil and Colombia would take the market "under our control" they would be taking it away from speculators "who may act either in favor of big increases or of dangerous and sharp decreases in prices."

Lopez said that "by doing this it would be perhaps the first time that producers of a popular product decide to work together for a temporary freeze in prices, a precedent that would put us in a position to limit, as well, any decrease in the future."

He offered to send a mission to Brazil to discuss the proposal but also said, "We could nevertheless adopt joint steps with the United States, Mexico, Central America, Uganda and the Ivory Coast."

Geisel agreed that "we should unite our efforts in search of a policy that guarantees the tranquility of the coffee market, whose present prices stem from the shortage of the product, due to natural and known causes."

But he said he preferred expanding any meeting to the IOC.

"The problem arising from the market cannot be solved exclusively by the producers," he said, and "the best way would be to submit this matter to a forum of our own, by means of calling a special meeting" of the ICO. "I therefore propose we jointly call this meeting."

Swine flu shot inquiry asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Paul G. Rogers, chairman of the House Commerce Committee's health panel, has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the stalled swine flu vaccination program.

The Florida Democrat wants to know the pitfalls, benefits and other facts of the controversial program.

He said he requested the congressional watchdog agency to expedite the report in view of the paralytic syndrome which affected some recipients of the shots.

Lost city may be Atlantis

Advanced civilization existed on Greek isle

By LINDA KOHL
Knight News Service

ST. PAUL, Minn. — A highly sophisticated prehistoric city which now lies buried in the dust of an ancient volcano may be the key to unearthing the legendary "lost continent" of Atlantis.

Greek archeologist Christos Doumas, head of excavations on the island of Thera, said that the standard of living in the city buried in 1500 B.C. matches that described for Atlantis.

Doumas, visiting the U.S. to lecture at the University of Minnesota, described work on Thera, an island off the coast of Greece near Athens.

THE SITE was discovered in 1967 by a University of Athens professor, S.P. Marinatos. In the bed of a ravine, wind erosion had exposed parts of buildings, some of which later were discovered to be three and four stories high. They had been buried when the volcano Santorini erupted.

Upper floors of the buildings were decorated with rich paintings of scenes from everyday life, Doumas said. Among them were pictures of women collecting crocuses, the coming of spring, a procession "which we don't understand yet," a fleet in the harbor and various kinds of wildlife.

Also preserved for more than three millennia were thousands of pottery vases, unbroken and in several shapes and sizes. Metal tools were found in workshops in what would have been the basements of the buildings, along with bronze vessels.

Many of the buildings had toilets and the city had a complex drainage system of cylindrical clay pipes underneath the paved streets.

EVEN THE impressions of wooden furniture have been preserved in the dust, and workers have been able to reconstruct two beds, several chairs and a table.

Scholars have theorized that Thera may have been the Atlantis which Plato described in dialogues written in about 355 B.C. The lost Atlantis had been a powerful and wealthy island community peopled by peaceful farmers and fishermen who later became arrogant with power and set out to conquer the Mediterranean, Plato wrote.

They finally were defeated by the Athenians and, in retaliation, the gods sent violent earthquakes and floods and sank their homeland in a single day and night, according to Plato.

Plato's account of the lost continent has been inspiration for modern novelists, and several expeditions seeking the legendary island have been launched.

THERE ARE some similarities between ancient Thera and the legendary Atlantis, Doumas said, but Plato's description cannot be taken too literally.

"Plato was a philosopher and a politician and he wanted to advance his political views on how his home city-state of Athens should be governed," Doumas said.

Plato gave the date of the island's demise as 9,000 years before the time of Solon, a seventh century B.C. Athenian statesman. But that would have put it in the post-glacial age, before any civilization existed.

It is more likely that Plato misunderstood the legend and should have dated the collapse at 900 years before Solon, putting it exactly at 1500 B.C. which was the date of the Santorini eruption, Doumas said.

MODERN-DAY Thera is a half-moon-shaped island about 20 miles long and five miles wide. The part of the island where the volcano was located has sunk beneath the ocean. No ships can anchor there because of the depth — 1,000 feet.

On one side of the island are 900-foot high cliffs, into which steps have been carved which are climbed by donkeys. The main economic activity on the island is tourism and the mining of the volcanic ash.

Fishing and farming were part of ancient Thera, but to accumulate the riches found, the city must have been a trading and shipbuilding center, Doumas said.

The diet probably included lots of seafood, judging from preserved shell remains, and dried fish. Sheep and goats probably also were used for food. Although bones of cows were found, they were most likely used for labor and not for meat.

THE SITE excavated so far covers about 10,000 square yards and the edge of the city has not yet been reached. Doumas said the excavation, which is being financed by the Greek government, could go on for centuries before the entire city is unearthed.

Work is slow because of the painstaking study that must accompany the actual digging.

Shift to mid-road seen at Berkeley

BERKELEY (AP) — For the first time in 10 years, University of California at Berkeley freshmen who consider themselves politically "middle-of-the-road" outnumber substantially those listing themselves in any other category.

The trend toward moderate attitudes and a "practical" outlook is more pronounced among women than men, a university spokesman said Saturday in releasing results of a survey of 2,128 Berkeley freshmen conducted last summer.

Over the last two years, the self-described middle-of-the-road group increased from 46 to 43 per cent, and the conservative category from 11 to 14 per cent, while those who categorized themselves as "liberal" declined from 45 to 39 per cent.

Fewer than one per cent of Berkeley freshmen consider themselves "far right," and the "far left" group was down from 4 to 3 per cent.

IN TWO YEARS, the percentage of freshmen who believe "there is too much concern in the courts for the rights of criminals" jumped from 37 to 49 per cent.

And in the same period, the group that agreed "people should not obey laws which violate their personal values" declined from 34 to 29 per cent.

There was an increase from 14 to 17 per cent in those who believe the campus has the right to ban some speakers and from 5 to 8 per cent in those who feel college officials have the right to regulate students' off-campus behavior.

More freshmen are favoring business careers — 12 per cent for both men and women, compared with 9 per cent of men and 6 per cent of women two years ago.

THOSE WHO SAY they never expect to have any children comprised 27 per cent of the total, compared with 20 per cent in 1973, while the percentage who expect to have two children fell from 56 to 48.

It was considered all right for new acquaintances to have sex "if two people really like each other" by 70 per cent of the men but by only 43 per cent of the women freshmen. The men's percentage was up 6 per cent from 1974, and the women's down by 2 per cent.

Turmoil in DMV is a family affair

SACRAMENTO (AP) — David Brown's transfer in the State Department of Motor Vehicles from Pomona to Sacramento started smoothly enough, but it ruffled the department's hiring practices before it was settled.

Brown's father, Elmer, heads the DMV driver-license division into which David was transferring with no pay raise involved, after working as an examiner in the Pomona office.

Doris Seese, a supervisor under Elmer Brown, told the son the job was his. Then another applicant for the supervisory clerk position, Tom Carly, complained.

The job had been advertised last Aug. 9, and the DMV's equal opportunities office was to approve before Ms. Seese could commit the job. Three others applied besides David Brown.

"I got a lot of hell for it," she told The Sacramento Bee in its account of the case Saturday.

"I wish he would work somewhere else," said Elmer Brown, a 35-year veteran of the department. He said he had been unaware his son had applied for the job and been assured he had it. He said he doesn't talk much with him.

He said he anticipated talk of favoritism, because he has nine children and four stepchildren, and all of them have at some time worked for DMV. None of the allegations had merit, he said, including the accusation that he once took written promotional tests for his mother.

Meanwhile, Doris Alexis, department deputy director, said the department's administrative manual does not rule out close relatives working for the DMV, as long as they are not assigned to positions where one relative could influence the status of another.

David Brown's wife, Diane, complained to Alexis that David wasn't being treated fairly, only to be told that she would have to give up the job she had just transferred to, in the DMV division headed by her father-in-law.

David Brown was placed in a compliance division supervisory clerk job, for which he was deemed qualified, but this job had not been advertised.

Herman Sillas, DMV director, said of this move: "It really bothers me that we bent a policy that I'm so strong about."

Benny Ellis, a DMV hiring officer, found David's new job for him. He said since David and Diane had moved to Sacramento relying on a job promise, the department owed the job.

Ms. Seese made "honest mistakes," Ellis said. "There's no proof to the contrary."

Paper in Sacramento sues the competition

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Sacramento Union Corp. has filed a $43-million antitrust suit against McClatchy Newspapers, contending it illegally monopolizes the newspaper and mass-media market in the state's central valley.

The Union reported Saturday that the suit was filed Friday in U.S. District Court in San Francisco.

The suit names as defendants Eleanor McClatchy, president, and C.K. McClatchy, editor, of the Sacramento, Fresno and Modesto Bees. McClatchy also owns several radio and television stations.

C.K. McClatchy said that "while we have not received a copy of the complaint, based on the only information available to us, the suit is completely without merit."

He said McClatchy Newspapers "have not and never will indulge in monopolistic practices."

The court was asked to require McClatchy to divest itself of alleged monopolistic holdings and pay three times the $43 million which The Union claims it has suffered in damages.

The Sacramento Bee has earned a substantial profit annually for at least 20 years while the Union and its related weeklies have lost about $26 million in the past decade, the suit said.

The Union publisher is John P. McGoff of Detroit, who purchased the morning newspaper two years ago.

The suit cites direct operating losses of $5 million and lost profits in excess of $12 million in the last four years.

The suit said McClatchy Newspapers has for 20 years "engaged in a variety of tactics, legal and illegal, acquisitions, rate cuttings, combination rates, forced tie-ins, sales below cost and preferential rates."

Decade's biggest quake in S.F. series

BERKELEY (AP) — A spate of earthquakes, including the strongest one in more than a decade, rattled the San Francisco Bay area during the weekend, awakening thousands of residents but causing little damage.

Authorities received hundreds of telephone calls but no reports of injuries.

The University of California Seismographic Station here reported the strongest tremor at 1:38 a.m. Saturday. It measured 4.6 on the Richter scale and was capable of causing moderate damage.

The station first reported a reading of 5.0, but director Bruce Bolt said the figure was revised downward after new calculations.

The quake, centered between Berkeley and nearby Walnut Creek, was felt at the western edge of San Francisco, 25 miles away.

The quake was the strongest in this area since May 5, 1965, when a comparable earthquake hit Antioch, 35 miles northeast of Berkeley.

Bolt said the biggest quake was the fourth in a series between 10:55 p.m. Friday and 1:52 a.m. Saturday. He said the other seven, ranging from 2.9 to 4.1 on the Richter scale, were followed by a series of very small quakes every half hour.

"This is what is known as a swarm of earthquakes," Bolt said. "I expect there will more during the next 24 hours, but they will probably be of lesser magnitude."

The San Francisco Police Department said it had a call from one resident who reported a cracked ceiling and another who said his chandelier had been knocked down.

Ruth Brockman, chief police telephone operator, said: "The two girls on last night said they couldn't answer the phones fast enough. The switchboard was lit up, and some people said it took them 20 minutes to get through."

Police in the East Bay cities of Oakland, Berkeley, Walnut Creek, Pleasant Hill and Concord reported many calls but no damage.

Contra Costa County sheriff's dispatcher Jessie Wilson said: "It was felt severely in the area. One clerk said she never prayed before in this building, but she did last night. It really rocked the place."

Shift to mid-road seen at Berkeley

BERKELEY (AP) — For the first time in 10 years, University of California at Berkeley freshmen who consider themselves politically "middle-of-the-road" outnumber substantially those listing themselves in any other category.

The trend toward moderate attitudes and a "practical" outlook is more pronounced among women than men, a university spokesman said Saturday in releasing results of a survey of 2,128 Berkeley freshmen conducted last summer.

Over the last two years, the self-described middle-of-the-road group increased from 40 to 43 per cent, and the conservative category from 11 to 14 per cent, while those who categorized themselves as "liberal" declined from 45 to 39 per cent.

"Wherever possible we should spread the word that NATO is nothing but an obedient weapon of American imperialism and (word of) the violent nature of capitalist society."

A more mellow Anthony Quinn is still compelling

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — Anthony Quinn, sporting a tuxedo, struts into the Kennedy Center's garden terrace.

At his side is his Italian-born wife, Iolanda, gowned in flowing white jersey.

There are lots of heads turning, lots of elbows nudging, lots of oohs and aahs. Quinn cannot walk into a room without kidnapping everyone's attention. Six-foot-three. Rugged. Silver-streaked hair. Burning coffee eyes.

He surveys the crowd, shakes hands. How he hates these social gatherings. He doesn't drink, except for a glass or two of wine. And all that small talk — as he once put it — "aargh!"

IT'S ANOTHER public event, but for this one, Quinn has taken a back seat as host of 10 hour-long dramas about the world's adventures. "Ten Who Dared," a new syndicated series produced by the BBC in conjunction with Time-Life films, premieres on Chicago television this week. The first episode examines the frustration of Christopher Columbus in his search for Asia.

The dramas have been filmed on location, where possible. The dialogue is taken from the diaries, journals, and letters of such men as Francisco Pizarro, conqueror of Peru, Capt. James Cook, and South Pole discoverer Roald Amundsen.

It's an appropriate venture for Quinn, who always has taken dares and has had a zest for work and a variety of experiences. In addition to appearing in 140 films, he also has worked as a mixer of cement, a ditch digger, fruit picker, boxer, factory worker, and taxi driver.

MAYBE that's only a beginning, though, for Quinn wrote in his autobiography, "The Original Sin," that he wanted to be Napoleon, Michelangelo, Shakespeare, Martin Luther, and Jack Dempsey "all rolled into one."

He doesn't like to be safe and comfortable. "People have forgotten to dare today. We have built up a fear of failure."

Yet he says he was surprised when he was approached to do the television series because in his role, similar to that of a reporter, it would be difficult to remain objective.

Objectivity would be hard because he is so intense. As he takes on reporters, he sits back in an easy chair, holding court — quiet at first, smiling, eyes hypnotic.

He says he enjoyed doing research for the TV series. He has visited most places filmed, except the South Pole (but he has been to the North Pole and says "both are white and terribly cold"), and he loves to read history ("my wife bawls me out every night — I keep the light on until three in the morning").

SOMEONE asks whether he has a favorite role, and whether he identifies with the characters he plays. Although he won't concede it now, he once called "Zorba the Greek" his favorite. "I always gain something," says the actor also of "Viva Zapata," "The Shoes of the Fisherman," and "Lust for Life." The characters leave their marks on me."

'Genius' Ray Charles can't explain success

By BILL COSFORD Knight News Service

The man's been called a genius so long it has become part of his billing. And in a time and business characterized by the glorification of the mediocre and near-worship of the merely good, Ray Charles is real, title and all.

The 1,000-watt Charles Smile, the big sunglasses and the pounding, soulful piano style are all flashy enough to nearly hide his biggest asset: a blues vocal style versatile enough to take on every popular musical genre — and emotional enough to start the chills running up and down the spine.

Blinded by glaucoma when he was six, orphaned by the age of 15, Charles steamrollered the obstacles with talent, becoming in the '50s a soul artist of sufficient strength to break in newer artists with his traveling show, a sort of musical farm team to his own major league success. By the '60s, he had had so many "cross-over" successes — songs that jumped from the "soul" charts to Top-10 popularity among the wider, white audiences — that he was one of pop's brightest lights. At the same time, he broke a precedent or two with his tremendously successful move to country music, a change shift to try at a time a decade before country shook off its "sodbuster" stigma.

THAT Ray Charles held down the "genius" concession in pop music has long been well accepted; that he should still command such respect, at 46 a 30-year veteran of "the business," is extraordinary. But there he was, picking up a Grammy for last year's "Living for the City" — and there he was again, stepping out with Cleo Laine in a sizzling new recording of "Porgy and Bess."

RAY CHARLES "That Extra Stuff"

to explain his durability. "If you come to see Ray Charles, you know what you're going to get. You're not gambling. You know he'll play the favorites — 'Georgia' ('Georgia on My Mind'), 'Ruby' — and also you know he'll do something new, something he's working on."

But that's true of a great many performers, none of whom can point to 20 years of stardom. "Well, it's a strange thing. There are times when things just come to me, emotions come to me, and I don't know where they come from. You can't make them happen, you really can't. It's the electricity that is generated between the artist and the audience, and I have no idea how it happens."

"I'VE HAD nights when I'll go out on stage, and I don't feel well, or I'm tired, and yet when I get up there and the audience starts to generate, I get a strength — from somewhere — I didn't think I had."

"You can't do it alone, of course. You can go out there and do your best — you always do — but that extra stuff, nobody can do that alone."

To call it "extra stuff" is to be about as eloquent as anyone can be in pinning down the soul of the Genius. He tips the head back, directs the Super-Trouper smile beacon, and makes a room full of people feel as lonely as the man with 'Georgia on His Mind.' Once he explained that everybody he met thought he'd lost a lover named Georgia. Actually, he'd never known — much less lost — anyone by that name; he just made it feel that way.

IN FACT, he says, "You have to be real actor" when making a studio recording. Without that audience to kick him along, says Charles "you get absolutely no help — it's just just you and the machines in there. Of course, it's a challenge — and I like that."

"But — and it may sound strange — I DON'T like doing television. I understand the importance of it. You got to do it. But television is very confining — you spend a lot of time doing nothing, and wind up spending two or three days working on 12 or 13 minutes of a show. It's tele-VISION — and the people will sacrifice an awful lot of audio to get their picture."

For reasons beyond the fact of his blindness, Charles has little use for the emphasis on visual over audio. He is, he repeats throughout an interview, a musician. That's why, having heard the results, he says that "out of all the ways you can bring a sound to people, television is the poorest."

AND THAT is also why — ultimately — he feels he's stayed on top. As a musician.

"If you can make those people, your audience, happy, by whatever means, whether it's showing a bunch of lights or having little birds jump out of the ceiling — if the people have a good time, then that's marvelous. I've even heard of guys that use snakes in the act. Well, that's entertainment. I don't know what it has to do with music, but it's entertaining."

"But I thank the Lord — if I had to do that to get my point over, then I wouldn't be a musician."

Laughing a little, Charles thought about his fans, the ones "who know what to expect" from a Ray Charles concert. And he said there was something else.

"It won't be too loud." THAT SOUNDED just a trifle odd from a blues man, since blues means screamers as well as moaners. Charles explained that the decibel levels of modern music occasionally baffle his musical sense.

"I cannot explain this, but I can't HEAR music after it becomes so loud. It becomes noise to me, and I can't tell if it's bad or good. I went to see (pianist and singer) Billy Preston, who used to work with me, and now does a lot with the Rolling Stones. Now, I'm not a Stones fan, but I am a Preston fan, and I was curious about what Mick Jagger did anyway. But it was so loud, I just couldn't tell. I just don't know if it was bad or good — I couldn't hear music."

Nature helps out as theater opens

By ROBERT C. WYLDER

Thunder rolled impressively and sheets of lightning brightened the sky far better than spotlights could have done as the new Solari Theater opened in Beverly Hills Wednesday night. Thus did the heavens mark the event. Even the rain that accompanied the display, welcome after so long a drought, was a friendly omen.

The Solari Theater, new home of the well established Solari Theater Ensemble, is a former movie house converted over the last 11 months, mostly by volunteers, into an adequate legitimate theater. The present bill is the first offering of the troupe under its new roof.

WHAT happened on stage had almost as much electricity as what was happening outside.

The designer of the theater wisely provided wide aisles. They were an absolute necessity on Wednesday night to give people space to roll in, for the two one-acts presented in the initial performance were thigh-slapping, belly-hurting funny. First came Tom Stoppard's "The Real Inspector Hound," surely one of the zaniest and most amusing comedies in the contemporary repertory.

A combined satire on mystery plays, theater critics, plays within plays, and much else, its plot, if one can call it that, is so complex and intertwining that I won't even try to sketch it in.

IT IS outrageous in its flouting of theatrical convention and unfailingly funny in the process.

The mirth comes both from the script and from the members of the acting company, all accomplished professionals. Lew Horn and Guy Stockwell as critics, Elizabeth Dartmoor as the maid, Judith-Marie Bergan, Antoinette Bower, Martin Speer, Gene Gynarski, John Delner — all are seasoned performers who can give comic lines the little extra nudge that makes them explode.

They do the same in the second offering, Peter Shaffer's "Black Comedy," although in that circus the lines are not nearly so important as the actions.

1. There are so many good movies these days. Why miss even one?
2. Your mother-in-law is coming to see the baby. Take advantage.
3. Now that you know "Legend of the Lost" and "Inn of the Sixth Happiness" by heart, it's time to see something new.
4. Good 'n Plenty. Raisinets. Jujubes. Dots. Remember how good they were? They still are.

A more mellow Anthony Quinn is still compelling

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — Anthony Quinn, sporting a tuxedo, struts into the Kennedy Center's garden terrace.

At his side is his Italian-born wife, Iolanda, gowned in flowing white jersey.

There are lots of heads turning, lots of elbows nudging, lots of oohs and aahs. Quinn cannot walk into a room without kidnapping everyone's attention. Six-foot-three. Rugged. Silver-streaked hair. Burning coffee eyes.

He surveys the crowd, shakes hands. How he hates these social gatherings. He doesn't drink, except for a glass or two of wine. And all that small talk — as he once put it — "fargh!"

The first episode examines the frustration of Christopher Columbus in his search for Asia.

The dramas have been filmed on location, where possible. The dialogue is taken from the diaries, journals, and letters of such men as Francisco Pizarro, conqueror of Peru, Capt. James Cook, and South Pole discoverer Roald Amundsen.

It's an appropriate venture for Quinn, who always has taken dares and has had a zest for work and a variety of experiences. In addition to appearing in 140 films, he also has worked as a mixer of cement, a ditch digger, fruit picker, boxer, factory worker, and taxi driver.

MAYBE that's only a beginning, though, for Quinn wrote in his autobiography, "The Original Sin," that he wanted to be Napoleon, Michelangelo, Shakespeare, Martin Luther, and Jack Dempsey "all rolled into one."

He doesn't like to be safe and comfortable. "People have forgotten to

ANTHONY QUINN
"Forgotten to Dare"

dare today. We have built up a fear of failure."

Yet he says he was surprised when he was approached to do the television series because in his role, similar to that of a reporter, it would be difficult to remain objective.

Objectivity would be hard because he is so intense. As he takes on reporters, he sits back in an easy chair, holding court — quiet at first, smiling, eyes hypnotic.

He says he enjoyed doing research for the TV series. He has visited most places filmed, except the South Pole (but he has been to the North Pole and says "both are white and terribly cold"), and he loves to read history ("my wife hawls me out every night — I keep the light on until three in the morning").

SOMEONE asks whether he has a favorite role, and whether he identifies with the characters he plays. Although he won't concede it now, he once called "Zorba the Greek" his favorite. "I always gain something," says the actor also of "Viva Zapata," "The Shoes of the Fisherman," and "Lust for Life." The characters leave their marks on me.

'Genius' Ray Charles can't explain success

By BILL COSFORD
Knight News Service

The man's been called a genius so long it has become part of his billing. And in a time and business characterized by the glorification of the mediocre and near-worship of the merely good, Ray Charles is real, title and all.

The 1,000-watt Charles Smile, the big sunglasses and the pounding, soulful piano style are all flashy enough to nearly hide his biggest asset: a blues vocal style versatile enough to take on every popular musical genre — and emotional enough to start the chills running up and down the spine.

Blinded by glaucoma when he was six, orphaned by the age of 15, Charles steamrollered the obstacles with talent, becoming in the '50s a soul artist of sufficient strength to break in newer artists with his traveling show, a sort of musical farm team to his own major league success. By the '60s, he had had so many "cross-over" successes — songs that jumped from the "soul" charts to Top-10 popularity among the wider, white audiences — that he was one of pop's brightest lights. At the same time, he broke a precedent or two with his tremendously successful move to country music, a change shift to try at at time a decade before country shook off its "sodbuster" stigma.

THAT Ray Charles held down the "genius" concession in pop music has long been well accepted; that he should still command such respect, at 46 a 30-year veteran of "the business," is extraordinary. But there he was, picking up a Grammy for last year's "Living for the City" — and there he was again, stepping out with Cleo Laine in a sizzling new recording of "Porgy and Bess."

Talking by phone from San Diego, Charles tried to explain his durability. "If you come to see Ray Charles, you know what you're going to get. You're not gambling. You know he'll play the favorites — 'Georgia' ('Georgia on My Mind'), 'Ruby' — and also you know he'll do something new, something he's working on."

RAY CHARLES
"That Extra Stuff"

But that's true of a great many performers, none of whom can point to 20 years of stardom. "Well, it's a strange thing. There are times when things just come to me, emotions come to me, and I don't know where they come from. You can't make them happen, you really can't. It's the electricity that is generated between the artist and the audience, and I have no idea how it happens."

"I'VE HAD nights when I'll go out on stage, and I don't feel well, or I'm tired, and yet when I get up there and the audience starts to generate, I get a strength — from someplace — I didn't think I had."

"You can't do it alone, of course. You can go out there and do your best — you always do — but that extra stuff, nobody can do that alone."

To call it "extra stuff" is to be about as eloquent as anyone can be in pinning down the soul of the Genius. He tips the head back, directs the Super-Trouper smile beacon, and makes a room full of people feel as lonely as the man with 'Georgia on His Mind.' Once he explained that everybody he met thought he'd lost a lover named Georgia. Actually, he'd never known — much less lost — anyone by that name; he just made it feel that way.

IN FACT, he says, "You have to be real actor" when making a studio recording. Without that audience to kick him along, says Charles "you get absolutely no help — it's just just you and the machines in there. Of course, it's a challenge — and I like that."

"But — and it may sound strange — I DON'T like doing television. I understand the importance of it. You got to do it. But television is very confining — you spend a lot of time doing nothing, and wind up spending two or three days working on 12 or 13 minutes of a show. It's tele-VISION — and the people will sacrifice an awful lot of audio to get their picture."

For reasons beyond the fact of his blindness, Charles has little use for the emphasis on visual over audio. He is, he repeats throughout an interview, a musician. That's why, having heard the results, he says that "out of all the ways you can bring a sound to people, television is the poorest."

AND THAT is also why — ultimately — he feels he's stayed on top. As a musician.

"If you can make those people, your audience, happy, by whatever means, whether it's showing a bunch of lights or having little birds jump out of the ceiling — if the people have a good time, then that's marvelous. I've even heard of guys that use snakes in the act. Well, that's entertainment. I don't know what it has to do with music, but it's entertaining."

"But I thank the Lord — if I had to do that to get my point over, then I wouldn't be a musician."

Laughing a little, Charles thought about his fans, the ones "who know what to expect" from a Ray Charles concert. And he said there was something else.

"It won't be too loud." THAT SOUNDED just a trifle odd from a blues man, since blues means screamers as well as moaners. Charles explained that the decibel levels of modern music occasionally baffle his musical sense.

"I cannot explain this, but I can't HEAR music after it becomes so loud. It becomes noise to me, and I can't tell if it's bad or good. I went to see (pianist and singer) Billy Preston, who used to work with me, and now does a lot with the Rolling Stones. Now, I'm not a Stones fan, but I am a Preston fan, and I was curious about what Mick Jagger did anyway. But it was so loud, I just couldn't tell. I'm not knocking it, I just don't know if it was bad or good — I couldn't hear music."

Nature helps out as theater opens

By ROBERT C. WYLDER

Thunder roiled impressively and sheets of lightning brightened the sky far better than spotlights could have done as the new Solari Theater opened in Beverly Hills Wednesday night. Thus did the heavens mark the event. Even the rain that accompanied the display, welcome after so long a drought, was a friendly omen.

The Solari Theater, new home of the well established Solari Theater Ensemble, is a former movie house converted over the last 11 months, mostly by volunteers, into an adequate legitimate theater. The present bill is the first offering of the troupe under its new roof.

WHAT happened on stage had almost as much electricity as what was happening outside.

The designer of the theater wisely provided wide aisles. They were an absolute necessity on Wednesday night to give people space to roll in; for the two one-acts presented in the initial performance were thigh-slapping, belly-hurting funny.

First came Tom Stoppard's "The Real Inspector Hound," surely one of the zaniest and most amusing comedies in the contemporary repertory.

A combined satire on mystery plays, theater critics, plays within plays, and much else, its plot, if one can call it that, is so complex and intertwining that I won't even try to sketch it in. IT IS outrageous in its flouting of theatrical convention and unfailingly funny in the process.

The mirth comes both from the script and from the members of the acting company, all accomplished professionals. Lew Horn and Guy Stockwell as critics, Elizabeth Dartmoor as the maid, Judith-Marie Bergan, Antoinette Bower, Martin Speer, Gene Gynarski, John Dehner — all are seasoned performers who can give comic lines the little extra nudge that makes them explode.

They do the same in the second offering, Peter Shaffer's "Black Comedy," although in that circus the lines are not nearly so important as the actions.

RCA closing L.A., Nashville studios

NEW YORK (AP) — RCA Records has announced that it will close its Los Angeles and Nashville recording studios this month to save money and give its artists more flexibility.

This means the artists will record at independent studios or at RCA's New York studios. But RCA said its New York studios also may be closed. "More and more artists have been recording elsewhere, with the result that our studios have had limited utilization," the announcement said.

Beatles are still big on charts and in 'fests'

EDITOR'S NOTE— There are some who believe that the Beatles will get back together again. Meanwhile, until they do, there are "Beatleests."

By ABE PECK

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Beatles may be with us forever.

Never mind that they last played together in America in 1966, or that they haven't even been a group since 1969. During the holidays, the former Fab Four had no less than nine albums on the Billboard Magazine Top 200 chart, and Beatle material recorded by other artists for the movie "All This & World War II" put the total into double figures.

As a group, the Beatles scored in 1976 with "Rock 'n' Roll Music" and "The Beatles '67-'70" anthologies and the classic "White Album" and "Sgt. Pepper," first released in the '60s.

Paul McCartney and Wings were represented by "Band on the Run," "Wings at the Speed of Sound" and the brand new "Wings Over America," a triple album that went gold (500,000 copies) its first week in the record stores despite a $13.98 list price.

George Harrison's "Thirty-Three & 1/3" and

Their fans believe in yesterday—and maybe tomorrow

"Best of George Harrison" did well, and "This Song," his jolly riposte to being sued for plagiarism, was both a successful single and, in film form, the highlight of a recent episode of "NBC's Saturday Night."

JOHN LENNON and Ringo Starr were not charted, but the mere mention of a possible Lennon tour of Australia was enough to set the rumor mills churning. And even if "Ringo's Rotogravure" doesn't make it, those who attended the Band's recent "Last Waltz" had no trouble recognizing a certain unimproved drummer.

Even Beatle spinoffs seem to succeed. "All This & World War II" may be a basically silly merger of Beatles songs and documentary war footage, but it's certain to earn a profit. And "Linda's Pictures," a volume by Linda Eastman, a photographer, singer and McCartney's wife, is only one of several new Beatles books.

So it's no surprise that this hoopla has led to institutionalized Beatlemania. "Beatleests" and rallies by the International Committee to Reunite the Beatles occur regularly around the country, each demonstrating that the Beatles are still special after all these years.

at San Francisco's Hilton Hotel Dec. 19 and 20. The idea came to life in 1974, after two Beatle maniacs named Mark Lapidos and Irwin Beer met while working at a record store in New York.

"It was April 28," recalled Lapidos, a 28-year-old in a George Harrison promo shirt. "I knocked on the door of John's hotel room in New York. 'I told him about it, and he agreed. He said: 'I'm all for it. I'm a Beatles fan, too.'"

Since then, the two professional fans have put together "Beatleests" in New York, Los Angeles and Philadelphia. The December gathering was typical. Over two days, several thousand people—teen-agers and older Beatles fans—wandered around hotel rooms in which were displayed a few early and valuable Beatle records and other Beatle artifacts.

But most of the action took place in the grand ballroom. An array of speakers answered questions like "Is Paul dead?" (only if you hate Wings) or "Will John tour?" (maybe). People cheered such films as 1968's "Yellow Submarine" and 1976's "Silly Love Songs." There were Beatle trivia contests, Beatle look-alike contests, Beatle sound-alike contests and Beatle auctions.

"The older people," Lapidos explained, "remember the Beatles from the first time around. The kids are here because they heard of them from their older brothers and sisters, and there's nothing else like them in the '70s."

Because this is more than a little true, the inevitable question at "Beatleests" is, "Will the Beatles get back together?" The big move of 1976 was last January's offer by Los Angeles promoter Bill Sargeant, who promised $30 million should the boys want to do a TV special. Lawyers for the various Beatles rejected it, but Lapidos, who's met all the Beatles save Ringo, is still optimistic. "I personally feel they'll get back together to record an album, and then they'll tour and do a worldwide TV special. I get an indication that there are no animosities." Meanwhile, until they get together, Lapidos and Beer are preparing for "Beatleests" in New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Houston and St. Louis for the likes of Alexis Anastasi, who is 9 and attended the one last month.

Why does he like the Beatles, who last played in America a few months before his birth?

"I don't know," he said. "I just like their music, and my Mom almost got me in to meet with one of their cousins."

RCA closing L.A., Nashville studios

NEW YORK (AP) — RCA Records has announced that it will close its Los Angeles and Nashville recording studios this month to save money and give its artists more flexibility.

This means the artists will record at independent studios or at RCA's New York studios. But RCA said its New York studios also may be closed. "More and more artists have been recording elsewhere, with the result that our studios have had limited utilization," the announcement said.

Beatles are still big on charts and in 'fests'

By ABE PECK

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Beatles may be with us forever.

Never mind that they last played together in America in 1966, or that they haven't even been a group since 1969. During the holidays, the former Fab Four had no less than nine albums on the Billboard Magazine Top 200 chart, and Beatle material recorded by other artists for the movie "All This and World War II" put the total into double figures.

As a group, the Beatles scored in 1976 with "Rock 'n' Roll Music" and "The Beatles '67-'70" anthologies and the classic "White Album" and "Sgt. Pepper," first released in the '60s.

Paul McCartney and Wings were represented by "Band on the Run," "Wings at the Speed of Sound" and the brand new "Wings Over America," a triple album that went gold (500,000 copies) its first week in the record stores despite a $13.98 list price.

George Harrison's "Thirty-Three & 1/3" and

Their fans believe in yesterday—and maybe tomorrow

"Best of George Harrison" did well, and "This Song," his jolly riposte to being sued for plagiarism, was both a successful single and, in film form, the highlight of a recent episode of "NBC's Saturday Night."

JOHN LENNON and Ringo Starr were not charted, but the mere mention of a possible Lennon tour of Australia was enough to set the rumor mills churning. And even if "Ringo's Rotogravure" doesn't make it, those who attended the Band's recent "Last Waltz" had no trouble recognizing a certain untroubled drummer.

Even Beatle spinoffs seem to succeed. "All This & World War II" may be a basically silly merger of Beatles songs and documentary war footage, but it's certain to earn a profit. And "Linda's Pictures," a volume by Linda Eastman, a photographer, singer and McCartney's wife, is only one of several new Beatles books.

So it's no surprise that this hoopla has led to institutionalized Beatlemania. "Beatlefeasts" and rallies by the International Committee to Reunite the Beatles occur regularly around the country, each demonstrating that the Beatles are still special after all these years.

at San Francisco's Hilton Hotel Dec. 19 and 20. The idea came to life in 1974, after two Beatle maniacs named Mark Lapidus and Irwin Beer met while working at a record store in New York.

"It was April 28," recalled Lapidus, a 28-year-old in a George Harrison promo shirt. "I knocked on the door of John's hotel room in New York. 'I told him about it, and he agreed. He said: 'I'm all for it. I'm a Beatles fan, too.'"

Since then, the two professional fans have put together "Beatlefeasts" in New York, Los Angeles and Philadelphia. The December gathering was typical. Over two days, several thousand people—teen-agers and older Beatles fans—wandered around hotel rooms in which were displayed a few early and valuable Beatle records and other Beatle artifacts.

But most of the action took place in the grand ballroom. An array of speakers answered questions like "Is Paul dead?" (only if you hate Wings) or "Will John tour?" (maybe). People cheered such films as 1968's "Yellow Submarine" and 1976's "Silly Love Songs." There were Beatle trivia contests, Beatle look-alike contests, Beatle sound-alike contests and Beatle auctions.

"The older people," Lapidus explained, "remember the Beatles from the first time around. The kids are here because they heard of them from their older brothers and sisters, and there's nothing else like them in the '70s."

Because this is more than a little true, the inevitable question at "Beatlefeasts" is, "Will the Beatles get back together?" The big move of 1976 was last January's offer by Los Angeles promoter Bill Sargeant, who promised $30 million should the boys want to do a TV special. Lawyers for the various Beatles rejected it, but Lapidus, who's met all the Beatles save Ringo, is still optimistic.

"I personally feel they'll get back together to record an album, and then they'll tour and do a worldwide TV special. I get an indication that there are no animosities." Meanwhile, until they get together, Lapidus and Beer are preparing for "Beatlefeasts" in New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Houston and St. Louis for the likes of Alexis Anast, who is 9 and attended the one last month.

Why does he like the Beatles, who last played in America a few months before his birth?

"I don't know," he said. "I just like their music, and my Mom almost got me in to meet with one of their cousins."

Center's aim is to ensure the deaf get a fair hearing

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP)—As Sy DuBow lectures to the eight students in the classroom, he holds his hands before him in the semblance of a tipping pair of scales, the sign for a trial.

He cups two fingers in the shape of a letter "G" and strikes his heart, the sign for guilty.

DuBow, relying on sign language and lip-reading, is teaching a course in "street law" to college undergraduates who will face even more difficulty than most people with the intricacies of legal procedures.

HIS students are deaf. The course, the only one of its kind in the country, is a project of the National Center for Law and the Deaf (NCLD). It is jointly sponsored by Gallaudet College and the National Law Center of George Washington University.

Located in a white trailer house on the campus of Gallaudet, the world's only liberal arts college for the deaf, the center also operates a walk-in legal clinic for deaf people, works for legislation and court rulings to help the deaf and conducts deaf rights workshops.

"We hope that after too many years of the law being used against you, the NCLD can help you to use the law for yourselves," Glenn A. Goldberg, executive director, said in an open letter to the deaf and hearing-impaired this year.

Until the center was established in October 1975, there was no national organization to help deaf people solve their special legal problems. And there are 13.4 million people in this country suffering from deafness or hearing impairment.

THE problems arise mainly from the communications barriers between the deaf and the hearing. Deaf people, for example, often are denied automobile insurance or are charged excessive premiums, say spokesmen for the center, even though they might have excellent driving records. Their deafness is sometimes mistaken for mental deficiency, and they are placed in mental institutions or schools for the retarded. In court, they have trouble getting adequate interpreters and sometimes lawyers who understand their problems.

The center grew out of a project undertaken by three students in a legal activism class at George Washington.

It operates under a 30-month grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The appropriation for the current fiscal year is $80,000, down 15 per cent because of cuts by the last Congress.

The clinic is open on Friday afternoons, with students from Washington area law schools handling individual cases under the supervision of DuBow, a young lawyer who specializes in public interest law and is the center's legal director.

THERE have been more than 300 cases, beginning with one involving a Gallaudet student who had been raped. Personnel of the center helped her to obtain a qualified sign language interpreter.

In another case, by obtaining an interpreter who could translate Hebrew sign language, they blocked the deportation of a foreign visitor who had lost her U.S. visa.

They effected an out-of-court settlement in a Maryland couple's dispute with a landlord who was seeking to evict them because of their hearing-ear dog.

Workshops have been held in various cities on landlord-tenant relations, problems of deaf people in dealing with the police and consumer protection.

"MOST of our clinic cases stem from communication failures, rather than from outright discrimination," says Liz Renaut, student director of the clinic.

The center is seeking to set up similar clinics in cooperation with organizations in Philadelphia, Chicago and San Francisco.

On the legislative front, the center has lobbied successfully for a pioneering Maryland law guaranteeing deaf persons in state courts the right to a qualified interpreter.

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: See you well along a moderately easy path to natural prosperity according to how well you fit into existing local conditions. Temptation is toward drift, underuse of opportunity. Don't neglect spiritual values or you tip subtle balances unfavorably. Today's natives have nimble minds, mercurial dispositions, much curiosity about what others are thinking. Those born this year develop strong intuition to supplement their inherent political skills.

Aries (March 21-April 19): The less you do by way of innovation, the better. Alert listening brings perception, as slips of the tongue are the norm. Don't waste money on luxury purchases.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You work toward meaningless complexity unless people can use their systems of analysis. Let the summer undisturbed, with a chance to reverse opinions, become positive.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): What is said in public is risky. Others misunderstand or assume you refer to what they assume but you don't. Reveal private matters. Pay bills, get adequate receipts.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Stick to well-worn routines and all is deceptively easy. Apply bright ideas and nothing comes out as planned. Exaggerated gestures lack proper interpretation.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Leave your guile, long-shot gambles to others. Reinspect your position, recent moves. See if corrections should be offered before others ask it. Friends are moody.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today's decisions are knocked out by something more important tomorrow, a factor not now recognized. Not everybody at hand belongs in your future, make choices.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Relations run a cycle from one extreme to another, some dramatically visible, others subtly expressed. Details must be repeated outside normal sequence.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Regroup inner energy for a huge step forward. Join forces, yes; accept more responsibility, no. Use current drift patterns for discreet social relaxation.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be patient with imperfection. Long-range efforts progress unevenly, need revisions soon. Lesser people try to help, expect tremendous compensation.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Theory prevails, crowds out practical activities that bring immediate results. Unsound projects outdated by technical advances fatter, aren't worth fresh investment.

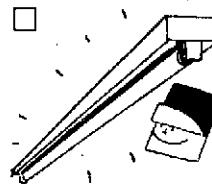

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tearing down is far easier than assembling anything of importance. Moneymaking schemes must be genuinely original, well thought out now for launching later.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Explanations create more confusion than the unanswered problems. Avoid showdown encounters, experimental procedures. Your team isn't ready to take the field yet.

Center's aim is to ensure the deaf get a fair hearing

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP)—As Sy DuBow lectures to the eight students in the classroom, he holds his hands before him in the semblance of a tipping pair of scales, the sign for a trial.

He cups two fingers in the shape of a letter "G" and strikes his heart, the sign for guilty.

DuBow, relying on sign language and lip-reading, is teaching a course in "street law" to college undergraduates who will face even more difficulty than most people with the intricacies of legal procedures.

HIS students are deaf. The course, the only one of its kind in the country, is a project of the National Center for Law and the Deaf (NCLD). It is jointly sponsored by Gallaudet College and the National Law Center of George Washington University.

Located in a white trailer house on the campus of Gallaudet, the world's only liberal arts college for the deaf, the center also operates a walk-in legal clinic for deaf people, works for legislation and court rulings to help the deaf and conducts deaf rights workshops.

"We hope that after too many years of the law being used against you, the NCLD can help you to use the law for yourselves," Glenn A. Goldberg, executive director, said in an open letter to the deaf and hearing-impaired this year.

'Little old lady' in landmark snarl

Pacific Coast Club operation queried

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Silly Olshane's dress and demeanor is that of a little old lady who could use help.

But the oft-wed woman of many aliases is really a mover and a shaker.

Lawsuits, angry creditors and irate stepchildren attest to her tangled dealings with people and property.

AND NOW such a tangle involves a famous Long Beach landmark: the Pacific Coast Club.

A little over a year ago, Mrs. Olshane acquired the aged, shoreline Pacific Coast Club at 850 E. Ocean Ave. — valued by city appraisers at $5.5 million — for $510,000, less than a tenth of that appraised worth. She bought it from Great Western Savings and Loan Association.

Included as part of the $51,000 down payment were oil leases which the 64-year-old grandmother agreed to transfer to Great Western Savings, according to escrow papers filed by the lender, but those records indicate the leases were never transferred.

ALSO PART of the purchase deal was an agreement that she would not pay any principal or interest for a year. The contract called for payments to begin in December, 1976, but she didn't start her payments, according to a source who was ready to buy the property in the event Mrs. Olshane was foreclosed. She got Great Western to give her a 60-day reprieve, the source said.

A year ago, Mrs. Olshane promised the city that she would begin restoration of the 50-year-old structure "immediately." Other electrical contractor, a plumbing contractor, an attorney and a retired general contractor. They must decide what needs to be done with the building.

THE BUILDING currently is a shambles, with nothing of value left, yet Mrs. Olshane is alleged to be still soliciting memberships in the club and looking for "partners" to share in the building, according to persons who have been asked to buy memberships.

How many memberships have been sold is unclear. Mrs. Olshane refuses to discuss the subject in detail. She also refuses to discuss how many, if any, "partners" have bought into the building.

Although the grey-haired woman initially claimed that no memberships had been sold in the club, she later amended the statement to claim that all those who had asked for a refund of their membership fees have been satisfied.

AND WHILE Mrs. Olshane has repeatedly maintained that workmen were cleaning out the structure, readying it for restoration crews, there is little sign of any such preparation.

The only persons observed in the building for the past several months have been young transients in need of a place to sleep.

Most of the windows and doors are broken and boarded shut. Much of the once beautiful parquet flooring has been torn up; statuary is defaced; chandeliers have been torn down; graffiti mar the once-colorful walls; the plumbing has been stripped, and most of the once-impressive entry hall is blackened by fire.

Despite its condition, and despite the fact that nothing appears to have been done to improve it, Mrs. Olshane still sells memberships.

SHE apparently relinquished ownership of the property just before two liens were to be placed on it by creditors. And she neglected to tell anyone, including the building's mortgage holder or city officials, that she had done so.

According to an unrecorded grant deed, she sold the building June 1, 1976, to a longtime friend and escrow company owner, John W. Samuel, for less than $100, thereby avoiding any transfer taxes.

But she apparently still continued to sign official documents as owner and continued to make promises that have kept her solvent.

STRANGELY, the grant deed giving the property to Samuel is dated June 1, 1976, while a subsequent notarized agreement selling Samuel 10 per cent interest in the same building for $25,000 is dated 17 days later, June 18, 1976.

When specifically challenged on the ownership, Mrs. Olshane refuses to answer, saying only that she is general manager and that Samuel "doesn't want any telephone calls." Numerous attempts to contact Samuel at his escrow firm in Los Angeles have failed.

DONALD FREED... The American illness: 'Consumerism'

Mary Hartman analyzed

Is this America, America?

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

"Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" had a nervous breakdown last TV season.

Critic Donald Freed says America is having one, too.

Freed said the controversial soap opera, now in its second year, mirrors the madness and yearning of Americans today. It's successful not because it's a parody on soap operas but because it portrays the psychological desperation of most of its viewers and their desire to grow, Freed said.

Freed, a playwright, novelist and teacher, is teaching a Continuing Education course next month at Long Beach State University called "The World of Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman: Reflections in the New American Looking Glass."

He says he'll use "Mary Hartman" to point out the agonizing inner problems that so many Americans face and which get little discussion in standard college courses or in the media—problems he sees as partly caused by and greatly aggravated by commercial television.

FREED is author of the novel "Executive Action" with Mark Lane. His play, "Bapu," won him a position among the finalists among writers participating in the 1969 International Gandhi Centennial celebration.

He has written recent plays, books and films on Watergate, the Patricia Hearst kidnapping and the assassination of Robert Kennedy.

He uses "Mary Hartman" as a vehicle to take students on a psychological journey through contemporary America.

"Even though we live here, we are really lost—we don't realize that television land is both a mirror of our world and a window into another world," he said.

On one level, "Mary Hartman" is a blue-collar soap opera, full of the woes that beset average families, workers, housewives.

BUT ON another level, Freed sees "Mary Hartman" herself as "trying to wake up from a nightmare" of being a passive, role-playing, brainwashed, programmed consumer who is fighting to survive, wake up, talk back.

"Instead of laughing at her, TV viewers took her seriously," Freed said. "The gags they got or they didn't get—the gags are irrelevant. What people responded to was the 'Mary' in between the jokes, the 'Mary' who winds up in a strait-jacket repeating her name over and over and over again."

"This symbolizes that the American public—from Dallas to Watergate—has slowly edged toward a nervous breakdown."

THE ILLNESS that Americans are suffering from is "consumerism," Freed said.

He explains consumerism as the idea that happiness can be bought and values set through purchasing products. And TV is the agent through which consumerism has conquered the country, he said.

Freed said consumerism has replaced the nation's old values of democracy, hard work, morality.

The message that television carries is that every desire should be gratified—as quickly as possible—by buying something.

"Mary Hartman's" nervous breakdown came partially from the gap between Mary's personal misery and the constant TV messages that she should be happy, he said.

FOR MANY people, television has replaced reality and replaced actual living, he said.

People who are afraid to walk to the corner for fear of being mugged see crimes solved on the TV police shows.

"An entire fantasy world is replacing reality of the earlier America," he said.

So how can the average benumbed TV viewer—whom Freed says Mary Hartman symbolizes—talk back to TV?

Freed wants people to wake up to the hidden messages that TV carries—that's the purpose of the course. He said he'll try to make it happen with the help of guest

Ex-senator, realtor seen as port board 'shoo-ins'

Former State Sen. Joseph Kennick and Long Beach businessman Robert Westmyer are virtual shoo-ins as the newest Long Beach harbor commissioners, according to a source on the harbor board.

With two board seats opening up as a result of the resignation of Llewellyn Bixby Jr. and the impending resignation of James Craig Jr., the statement added a new and surprising element to the growing speculation on the subject.

THE TWO POSTS are regarded as among the most prestigious and powerful commission jobs in the city, and the speculation has centered on several names, including those of attorney Borgny Baird and Planning Commission member Robert Pierce.

"I've heard so many names myself," said Craig, who plans to resign Monday, "that I can't remember all of them."

The source of the statement, however, said Kennick and Westmyer (who owns a real estate brokerage firm in Long Beach) were far more than speculative possibilities, adding that they were almost certain to be named to the two posts.

CRAIG SAID he had heard Westmyer's name mentioned as a contender, and added that he wouldn't be surprised if the former chamber of commerce president received the manager's and City Council's nod. But he said he personally had no evidence to suggest that either appointment was locked up.

The outgoing commissioner said that if anyone had a lock on the appointment, that person would have to have a majority of the council members behind him.

The fact that John Dever, Long Beach's new city manager, will make the appointment is not nearly as important, Craig said, as who the council favors — since the council must confirm the appointment.

"DEVER got here the first of the year, and because of the short time he's been here, and the fact that he doesn't know the candidates, he'll be guided by the council's judgment," said Craig.

Craig's impending resignation was prompted by his refusal to disclose his financial holdings under the state's Political Reform Act.

The scion of a shipbuilding family and a harbor commissioner

JOSEPH KENNICK

ROBERT C. WESTMYER

for 11 years, Craig denied that he had any conflicts of interest. He said he was resigning because he didn't think his financial position was "any of the public's business."

Bixby offered a similar explanation. He said the law's financial disclosure requirement amounted to "an unnecessary invasion of what little privacy remains to me." Bixby is president of Bixby Land Co., which has large holdings in the city.

DEVER, commenting on the report that Kennick and Westmyer had the appointments all but sewed up, said he hadn't considered anyone for either of the two posts.

He also said he'd heard of Kennick because of the latter's long association with the state senate, but he said he didn't know Westmyer.

"I'm not going to consider anyone (for Bixby's vacated seat) until a whole range of responses are in," he declared.

Dever said notices were sent out to various community organizations this week, asking them for nominations.

In addition, he said, he had spoken to a number of council members in order to solicit suggestions.

HE ALSO said he spoke to a potential candidate for the existing opening. He declined to identify the candidate, but it was later learned that attorney Borgny Baird was the person he met with.

Mrs. Baird, who was introduced to Dever by a councilman, said she had a cordial talk with the new manager and, while given encouragement, felt that Dever had not yet committed himself to any one candidate.

Mrs. Baird, who was one of 11 candidates for a harbor board vacancy that opened up last September, was recommended for the position by the Long Beach chapter of the American Association of University Women. She is understood to have the support of Councilwoman Renee Simon.

Mrs. Baird discounted the claim that Kennick and Westmyer had the appointments locked up. She said the claim sounded to her like wishful thinking or speculation.

KENNICK said he understood that his name had been submitted for consideration by Councilman Russell Rubley, but he added that no one had spoken to him about the job.

"I'm not sure I'd accept it," he declared.

The retired legislator said he'd want to know more about the job and the work it entailed before he made any decisions.

Westmyer was out of the country and could not be reached for comment.

If Westmyer gets the nod for one of the seats, it won't be the first time a former chamber of commerce president has been appointed to the harbor board.

Lakewood links reopen Wednesday

New landscaping, an irrigation system, safety and security systems also were installed.

A spokeswoman for Hayes said The Rev. William Rogers and The Rev. John Bonner of Lakewood are scheduled to deliver the invocation, and the Poly High School Band is scheduled to perform during the brief reopening ceremonies.

Following the program, Supervisor Hayes and Lakewood Councilman Larry Van Nostran will tee off and play nine of the course's 18 holes.

Architect William P. Bell designed the course, which rambles over 175 acres at Carson Street just west of Lakewood Boulevard. A par of 71 has been set for the 18 holes.

The course will be open during daylight hours seven days a week. Fees are $5.25 weekdays and $6.25 weekends and holidays, with senior citizens and students receiving a discount.

Golfers may begin reserving starting times on the course immediately following Wednesday's ceremonies.

'Little old lady' in landmark snarl

Pacific Coast Club operation queried

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Sally Olshane's dress and demeanor is that of a little old lady who could use help.

But the oft-wed woman of many aliases is really a mover and a shaker.

Lawsuits, angry creditors and irate stepchildren attest to her tangled dealings with people and property.

AND NOW such a tangle involves a famous Long Beach landmark: the Pacific Coast Club.

A little over a year ago, Mrs. Olshane acquired the aged, shoreline Pacific Coast Club at 850 E. Ocean Ave. — valued by city appraisers at $5.5 million — for $510,000, less than a tenth of that appraised worth. She bought it from Great Western Savings and Loan Association.

Included as part of the $51,000 down payment were oil leases which the 64-year-old grandmother agreed to transfer to Great Western Savings, according to escrow papers filed by the lender, but those records indicate the leases were never transferred.

ALSO PART of the purchase deal was an agreement that she would not pay any principal or interest for a year. The contract called for payments to begin in December, 1976, but she didn't start her payments, according to a source who was ready to buy the property in the event Mrs. Olshane was foreclosed. She got Great Western to give her a 60-day reprieve, the source said.

A year ago, Mrs. Olshane promised the city that she would begin restoration of the 50-year-old structure "immediately." Other than painting a small part of the once-impressive entry, nothing has been done, and the entire structure — interior and exterior — has continued to deteriorate.

(THE PAINTED area subsequently burned — arson investigators say it was "torched" — and the fire insurance carrier said Mrs. Olshane has filed a $65,000 claim.)

So far, Mrs. Olshane has convinced city officials to grant her delay after delay from their initial order — now almost two years old — to "restore it or demolish it."

Her next session before the city Board of Examiners, to explain why she hasn't done something, is scheduled for tomorrow.

The seven-man board of examiners, appointed by the city manager, is made up of members of the community and includes a general engineering contractor, an architect, a structural engineer, an electrical contractor, a plumbing contractor, an attorney and a retired general contractor. They must decide what needs to be done with the building.

THE BUILDING currently is a shambles, with nothing of value left, yet Mrs. Olshane is alleged to be still soliciting memberships in the club and looking for "partners" to share in the building, according to persons who have been asked to buy memberships.

How many memberships have been sold is unclear. Mrs. Olshane refuses to discuss the subject in detail. She also refuses to discuss how many, if any, "partners" have bought into the building.

Although the grey-haired woman initially claimed that no memberships had been sold in the club, she later amended the statement to claim that all those who had asked for a refund of their membership fees have been satisfied.

AND WHILE Mrs. Olshane has repeatedly maintained that workmen were cleaning out the structure, readying it for restoration crews, there is little sign of any such preparation.

The only persons observed in the building for the past several months have been young transients in need of a place to sleep.

Most of the windows and doors are broken and boarded shut. Much of the once beautiful parquet flooring has been torn up; statuary is defaced; chandeliers have been torn down; graffiti mar the once-colorful walls; the plumbing has been stripped, and most of the once-impressive entry hall is blackened by fire.

Despite its condition, and despite the fact that nothing appears to have been done to improve it, Mrs. Olshane still sells memberships.

SHE apparently relinquished ownership of the property just before two liens were to be placed on it by creditors. And she neglected to tell anyone, including the building's mortgage holder or city officials, that she had done so.

According to an unrecorded grant deed, she sold the building June 1, 1976, to a longtime friend and escrow company owner, John W. Samuel, for less than $100, thereby avoiding any transfer taxes.

But she apparently still continued to sign official documents as owner and continued to make promises that have kept her solvent.

STRANGELY, the grant deed giving the property to Samuel is dated June 1, 1976, while a subsequent notarized agreement selling Samuel 10 per cent interest in the same building for $25,000 is dated 17 days later, June 18, 1976.

When specifically challenged on the ownership, Mrs. Olshane refuses to answer, saying only that she is general manager and that Samuel "doesn't want any telephone calls." Numerous attempts to contact Samuel at his escrow firm in Los Angeles have failed.

DONALD FREED... The American illness: 'Consumerism'

Mary Hartman analyzed

Is this America, America?

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

"Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" had a nervous breakdown last TV season.

Critic Donald Freed says America is having one, too.

Freed said the controversial soap opera, now in its second year, mirrors the madness and yearning of Americans today. It's successful not because it's a parody on soap operas but because it portrays the psychological desperation of most of its viewers and their desire to grow, Freed said.

Freed, a playwright, novelist and teacher, is teaching a Continuing Education course next month at Long Beach State University called "The World of Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman: Reflections in the New American Looking Glass."

He says he'll use "Mary Hartman" to point out the agonizing inner problems that so many Americans face and which get little discussion in standard college courses or in the media—problems he sees as partly caused by and greatly aggravated by commercial television.

FREED is author of the novel "Executive Action" with Mark Lane. His play, "Bapu," won him a position among the finalists among writers participating in the 1969 International Gandhi Centennial celebration.

He has written recent plays, books and films on Watergate, the Patricia Hearst kidnapping and the assassination of Robert Kennedy.

He uses "Mary Hartman" as a vehicle to take students on a psychological journey through contemporary America.

"Even though we live here, we are really lost—we don't realize that television land is both a mirror of our world and a window into another world," he said.

On one level, "Mary Hartman" is a blue-collar soap opera, full of the woes that beset average families, workers, housewives.

BUT ON another level, Freed sees "Mary Hartman" herself as "trying to wake up from a nightmare" of being a passive, role-playing, brainwashed, programmed consumer who is fighting to survive, wake up, talk back.

"Instead of laughing at her, TV viewers took her seriously," Freed said. "The gags they got or they didn't get—the gags are irrelevant. What people responded to was the 'Mary' in between the jokes, the 'Mary' who winds up in a strait-jacket repeating her name over and over and over again."

"This symbolizes that the American public—from Dallas to Watergate—has slowly edged toward a nervous breakdown."

THE ILLNESS that Americans are suffering from is "consumerism," Freed said.

He explains consumerism as the idea that happiness can be bought and values set through purchasing products. And TV is the agent through which consumerism has conquered the country, he said.

Freed said consumerism has replaced the nation's old values of democracy, hard work, morality.

The message that television carries is that every desire should be gratified—as quickly as possible—by buying something.

"Mary Hartman's" nervous breakdown came partially from the gap between Mary's personal misery and the constant TV messages that she should be happy, he said.

FOR MANY people, television has replaced reality and replaced actual living, he said.

People who are afraid to walk to the corner for fear of being mugged see crimes solved on the TV police shows.

"An entire fantasy world is replacing reality of the earlier America," he said.

So how can the average benumbed TV viewer—whom Freed says Mary Hartman symbolizes—talk back to TV?

Freed wants people to wake up to the hidden messages that TV carries—that's the purpose of the course. He said he'll try to make it happen with the help of guest

Ex-senator, realtor seen as port board 'shoo-ins'

Former State Sen. Joseph Kennick and Long Beach businessman Robert Westmyer are virtual shoo-ins as the newest Long Beach harbor commissioners, according to a source on the harbor board.

With two board seats opening up as a result of the resignation of Llewellyn Bixby Jr. and the impending resignation of James Craig Jr., the statement added a new and surprising element to the growing speculation on the subject.

THE TWO POSTS are regarded as among the most prestigious and powerful commission jobs in the city, and the speculation has centered on several names, including those of attorney Borgny Baird and Planning Commission member Robert Pierce.

"I've heard so many names myself," said Craig, who plans to resign Monday, "that I can't remember all of them."

The source of the statement, however, said Kennick and Westmyer (who owns a real estate brokerage firm in Long Beach) were far more than speculative possibilities, adding that they were almost certain to be named to the two posts.

CRAIG SAID he had heard Westmyer's name mentioned as a contender, and added that he wouldn't be surprised if the former chamber of commerce president received the manager's and City Council's nod. But he said he personally had no evidence to suggest that either appointment was locked up.

The outgoing commissioner said that if anyone had a lock on the appointment, that person would have to have a majority of the council members behind him.

The fact that John Dever, Long Beach's new city manager, will make the appointment is not nearly as important, Craig said, as who the council favors — since the council must confirm the appointment.

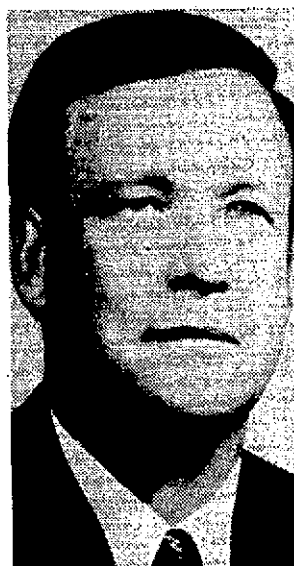

"DEVER got here the first of the year, and because of the short time he's been here, and the fact that he doesn't know the candidates, he'll be guided by the council's judgment," said Craig.

Craig's impending resignation was prompted by his refusal to disclose his financial holdings under the state's Political Reform Act.

The scion of a shipbuilding family and a harbor commissioner

JOSEPH KENNICK

for 11 years, Craig denied that he had any conflicts of interest. He said he was resigning because he didn't think his financial position was "any of the public's business."

Bixby offered a similar explanation. He said the law's financial disclosure requirement amounted to "an unnecessary invasion of what little privacy remains to me." Bixby is president of Bixby Land Co., which has large holdings in the city.

DEVER, commenting on the report that Kennick and Westmyer had the appointments all but sewed up, said he hadn't considered anyone for either of the two posts.

He also said he'd heard of Kennick because of the latter's long association with the state senate, but he said he didn't know Westmyer.

"I'm not going to consider anyone (for Bixby's vacated seat) until a whole range of responses are in," he declared.

Dever said notices were sent out to various community organizations this week, asking them for nominations.

In addition, he said, he had spoken to a number of council members in order to solicit suggestions.

HE ALSO said he spoke to a potential candidate for the existing opening. He declined to identify the candidate, but it was later learned that attorney Borgny Baird was the person he met with.

Mrs. Baird, who was introduced to Dever by a councilman, said she had a cordial talk with the new manager and, while given encouragement, felt that Dever had not yet committed himself to any one candidate.

Mrs. Baird, who was one of 11 candidates for a harbor board vacancy that opened up last September, was recommended for the position by the Long Beach chapter of the American Association of University Women. She is understood to have the support of Councilwoman Renee Simon.

Mrs. Baird discounted the claim that Kennick and Westmyer had the appointments locked up. She said the claim sounded to her like wishful thinking or speculation.

KENNICK said he understood that his name had been submitted for consideration by Councilman Russell Rubley, but he added that no one had spoken to him about the job.

"I'm not sure I'd accept it," he declared.

The retired legislator said he'd want to know more about the job and the work it entailed before he made any decisions.

Westmyer was out of the country and could not be reached for comment.

If Westmyer gets the nod for one of the seats, it won't be the first time a former chamber of commerce president has been appointed to the harbor board.

Good idea, bad law

A major revision of California's juvenile court law went into effect Jan. 1 and, while we agree with its intent of keeping non-criminal minors out of the juvenile court system, the measure is another example of the State Legislature acting without adequate thought.

The new law says non-criminal minors can't be kept in a "secured" facility, but must be placed in "sheltered care facilities and crisis resolution homes."

The problem is there are no unsecured facilities in this area. The nearest ones are in Chino for boys and Los Angeles for girls. Further, the new law does not allow for any additional funds to pay for such facilities — but it ordered that they be available and that staffs be hired by Jan. 1.

THE NEW LAW, Assembly Bill 3121, establishes two different categories of youth:

- Minors under the age of 18 accused of committing acts which, were they committed by adults, would be considered crimes. This group is referred to as "602s," from Section 602 of the Welfare and Institution Code.
- Minors classified as "status offenders" or "601s," such as incorrigibles, truants, runaways and disciplinary problems.

The major effect of the new law on 602s is to provide adult treatment when they commit adult crimes. For 601s, the goal is to remove them from the juvenile court system wherever possible. We agree with both of these aims — but not with the way the legislators handled the law.

It used to be that when police picked up a young runaway or a curfew violator, they would take him or her to the police station and detain them until the parents arrived. Under the new law, police cannot do this.

A special order has been drafted by Captain A. W. LaRue of the Long Beach Juvenile Division and issued by Police Chief

Ralph G. Kortz to guide Long Beach officers in handling 601 juveniles. Only in special circumstances are the minors to be brought to the police station.

Curfew violators, if that is the only charge, will not be brought to the station. If they are 15 years or older, the officer is to advise and release them. If they are under 15 years, they are to be taken to their home, if this is "possible and reasonable."

Local runaways, if this is the only charge, also are to be taken to their homes if "possible and reasonable," while "foreign" runaways are to be taken to the police station "until other alternatives exist."

In the cases of incorrigibles — youngsters who refuse to respond to guidance from parents or teachers — parents are to be referred to the Probation Department, 415 W. Ocean Blvd., or the probation officer now assigned to the Juvenile Division.

The new law, however, creates situations such as this: Police pick up a 10-year-old curfew violator. They cannot contact his parents, and the new law prohibits them from detaining him at the police station. So he is taken to the approved boys' facility at Chino. If the boy chooses, he can just walk out the door of that facility the minute police leave.

"WE WILL NOT ignore these youngsters," said Captain LaRue. "We will work with them, but we are working under a handicap with this new law."

The logical action of the state legislators would have been to establish the program — which had support in principle from police and juvenile officers — but to require that it be implemented by a certain deadline, July 1, for example.

That would have given communities time to establish the necessary facilities — if the state also had seen fit to provide funds for the program.

Seek safest way to ship oil

WASHINGTON — There are some lessons to be learned from the recent series of oil tanker accidents, but unfortunately the wrong conclusions are being drawn.

There seems to be a hysteria developing concerning the tankers, a hysteria which may well just complicate the problem.

Some basic facts have to be faced. This nation needs oil and it does not produce enough oil on its own.

For autos, factories, homes, imported oil is a fact of life. The shipment of oil can't be stopped.

SO THE PROBLEM is to make that shipment as safe as possible, recognizing that some accidents will occur. Because accidents will occur, the terminals and shipping routes should be placed where damage will be minimal.

Obviously tanker inspection and tanker equipment need to be improved. Obviously new safety precautions are needed.

The recent spills and accidents have occurred at a time when there is a growing debate over Alaskan oil which will shortly begin to pour off the Alaskan pipeline.

Incredibly, no decision has been made on where that oil is to be shipped.

There are proposals to take it by tanker to the Port of Long Beach. From there it would be sent by pipeline to Midland, Tex., for refining and shipment to oil-short Midwest points.

Conservationists are fighting this plan, partially out of fears of spills and other accidents. Those fears are real, but have not been tested against a study of where accidents are least likely and would do the least harm if they occur.

Gil Bailey

View from our National Bureau

The Port of Long Beach presents a controlled situation where relatively little marine, animal, or human life would be endangered and where rescue and fire fighting equipment would be available.

Other suggested sites along wild coasts offer much greater risks of spills and a certainty of much greater ecological damage from spills.

The recent oil tanker explosion in the Port of Los Angeles killed seven workmen. However, because that explosion was in a port area, homes and lives of those not associated with the ship escaped, except that some nearby homes suffered broken windows.

THE OIL SPILLS in the Atlantic are serious because they flow into the path of schools of fish and endanger coastal areas. Again, a spill within, say, the Port of Long Beach can be confined at least by the breakwater so that major ecological damage is unlikely.

Finally, if this oil is shipped from one United States port to another United States port, then, under law, American ships and American crews, under American regulation, must be used.

As yet, Americans have not decided on strict conservation of fuels to reduce the amount of oil being used.

So the question is simply one of finding the safest method of shipping oil. No more, no less.

Conscience vs. constituency

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Brown's announcement last week that he intended to veto any bill giving the state authority to impose the death penalty focuses attention on one of the most vexing questions with which people in public office must deal.

That is, what does an elected official do when there is a conflict between his or her conscience and the clearly expressed will of a majority of the official's constituency?

Californians, in the November election of 1972, left no doubt that they considered the death penalty to be a suitable punishment in appropriate cases. More than eight million voters expressed an opinion on what was Proposition 17 that year, an initiative declaring that the death penalty was not to be deemed a cruel or unusual punishment, and 67.5 per cent — 5,447,165 as against 2,617,514 — cast "yes" ballots.

YET, TWO YEARS later, those same California voters elected Edmund G. Brown Jr., a known death-penalty opponent, to the governor's office.

Last Thursday, Brown said, in effect, that his conscience must be more of a guide for him on the death penalty question than that 67.5-per-cent vote in 1972.

There was an immediate outcry, as the politically astute Brown certainly knew there would be, and he was charged with, among other things, being an "elitist" who felt his own views of the world to be superior to those of the people he had sworn to serve.

Well, setting aside the death-penalty issue and the subject of Jerry Brown's psyche, there remains the question of what we expect from our elected representatives.

Certainly we don't expect them to pick up a telephone every time they must cast a vote and inquire of their constituents what they should do.

The argument could be made that when a citizen votes for a candidate, he or she is saying, in effect, "Go explore the issues, examine the available evidence on both sides of each issue, and then use your judgment as to which course of action would be in the best interests of the community."

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

Isn't that the unspoken directive given to every elected official, whether the official is to serve on the city council, library board, mosquito abatement district, in the State Legislature or the Congress, or as governor or president?

Not every public official agrees, obviously. On the subject of the death penalty, for instance, state legislators have often been heard to say, "I personally oppose capital punishment, but the 1972 vote and response to my district questionnaires clearly indicate that my constituents favor it, so I feel obliged to support a death-penalty bill."

That approach to government can be defended, and it is certainly a safe route to take if re-election is considered one of the objectives of holding office.

BUT SOMEHOW, the way the process was put together, it seems that the founding fathers had the idea that whole human beings — consciences, personal points of view and individual idiosyncracies included — should be the holders of positions of leadership.

And every two years or four years or six years or whenever, the people decide whether or not to retain the whole human beings who have been making those judgments in their positions of leadership.

In some 22 months, Jerry Brown, should he decide to seek re-election, will lay the judgment he has made on the death penalty issue alongside other judgments he has made and ask whether an evaluation of those judgments merit four more years' opportunity to make additional judgments.

Regardless of how Californians feel politicians should answer the conscience vs. constituency conflict question, Jerry Brown is telling us that he has answered the question, and he is telling us what the answer is.

Blanket amnesty unpardonable

WASHINGTON — President Ford is getting heaps of advice these days to declare a "blanket amnesty" before he leaves office. The advice comes from Mrs. Philip Hart, from Congressman John Conyers, and from various sub-sisters in the press. It is bad advice and ought to be rejected.

The line of argument is to this effect: The United States' involvement in Vietnam was immoral and wrong. Those who opposed the involvement, and actively resisted such involvement, were therefore moral and right. To punish persons for being moral and right is unjust. Whatever the supposed offenses of the resisters may have been, these offenses should now be forgotten by the extension of amnesty to all draft evaders, to non-criminal deserters, and to an estimated 790,000 persons who received less than honorable discharges over a 16-year period. By extending such amnesty, Mr. Ford would secure a place in history as statesman and emancipator. With a stroke of his pen, Mr. Ford could heal the last of the wounds of Vietnam.

WHAT THESE well-meaning petitioners are saying, put another way, is that Mr. Ford should discard his own principles and put on theirs instead. To listen to their shrill and plaintive arguments, you would never suppose that Mr. Ford had lifted a finger in behalf of Vietnam offenders, or that any case whatever could be made for his position.

Thus Mr. Ford's clemency program is condemned out of hand as a "disaster," or a "fiasco," or as mere "entrapment." It was nothing of the sort. His program led to a careful review of 14,500 cases. More than 6,000 pardons were granted, with full restoration of civil liberties. In only 911 cases did the President's board recommend against clemency. The program was at once humane and fair. While it was denounced by the all-or-nothing apostles of universal amnesty, it was well accepted by the thousands who applied and by the families and survivors of Vietnam veterans who obeyed the law. Mr. Ford has every reason to defend his record in this regard, and he has no reason to apologize for it.

The case for "universal amnesty," in my own view, falls on three grounds: fact, law and precedent.

Fritz Eflaw, a leading draft resister, quotes the Democratic platform and asks that amnesty be granted all those "who are in legal or financial jeopardy because of their peaceful opposition to the Vietnam war." He says there are "more than a million" of these, including "790,000

Vietnam-era veterans with less-than-honorable discharges."

But there is no evidence whatever to support the notion that all 790,000 of the "less-than-honorable" cases were motivated by "peaceful opposition to the Vietnam war." On the contrary, findings of the clemency board indicate that this was the least of motivations. The board's study of those who deserted found that "less than five per cent committed their AWOL offenses because of opposition to the war."

On the issue of motivation, we simply do not know what the facts are. The proponents reduce their own case to a travesty by equating the principled objector, discharged LTH for passing out leaflets, with the malingering goof-off, discharged for refusing to make his bed.

THE VIETNAM WAR, right or wrong, moral or immoral, is not the last war we will know. It is not the last war that will be "resisted." To grant the kind of sweeping amnesty demanded by the Vietnam offenders would set a precedent fatal to military discipline and to future conscription laws. Such amnesty would amount to an invitation to persons subject to induction hereafter: Defy the law. Nothing will happen. Remember amnesty after Vietnam.

President-elect Carter has promised a new pardon plan. To the extent that he builds upon the Ford program and retains distinctions among principled resisters, ordinary deserters and petty thieves, few persons will make bitter objections. But "more than a million" pardons? This would be, in itself, an unpardonable act.

Soviet-Chinese intrigue at party

It is difficult to imagine the tall and robust chief of mission of the People's Republic of China, General Huang Chen, as the "beau of the ball" — but that is what he is in diplomatic circles in Washington.

A few days ago, the Ambassador of Mexico and Mrs. de Olloqui gave a farewell party because he will become Mexico's undersecretary of state.

It was intriguing to foreign diplomats and Americans when the Iranian ambassador, Ardeshir Zahedi, asked General Huang, who has ambassadorial rank, for an appointment the next day. It is not the usual diplomatic protocol for one envoy to approach another ambassador at a party to discuss a future meeting. Those matters are handled by more junior diplomats. The conclusion drawn was that the matter was of importance. Diplomats from other countries who observed the incident were perplexed.

The USSR's ambassador, Anatoly Dobrynin, a witty and genial giant with a "ho-ho-ho" Santa Claus-type laugh, a brilliant and subtle diplomat, was also a guest at the reception. He greeted General and Mrs. Huang cordially.

Because General Huang uses an interpreter, they spoke in English. The Chinese and Russian ambassadors had a jovial conversation that went on and on for at least 20 minutes. It was much more friendly than the usual formal exchange of diplomatic greetings.

The U. S. Department of State is receiving "the word" that Soviet ambassadors in a number of countries are going out of their way to be publicly cordial at receptions to ambassadors from the People's Republic of China.

Diplomats and Americans who move in diplomatic circles know that anything unusual that occurs is motivated by important reasons. Several questions are being asked. Are the Russians signaling to the leaders of the People's Republic of China that, like Bartles in "David Copperfield," the USSR "is willing"? That would be a delicate way of testing the climate for a rapprochement without risking the rebuff of formal meetings.

Are the Russians sending a message to the United States to move fast in the SALT negotiations, or the Soviets will proceed with plans to reestablish closer relations with mainland China?

Under any circumstances, these interesting events around the world must please the Chinese leaders.

Ralph G. Kortz to guide Long Beach officers in handling 601 juveniles. Only in special circumstances are the minors to be brought to the police station.

Curfew violators, if that is the only charge, will not be brought to the station. If they are 15 years or older, the officer is to advise and release them. If they are under 15 years, they are to be taken to their home, if this is "possible and reasonable."

Local runaways, if this is the only charge, also are to be taken to their homes if "possible and reasonable," while "foreign" runaways are to be taken to the police station "until other alternatives exist."

In the cases of incorrigibles — youngsters who refuse to respond to guidance from parents or teachers — parents are to be referred to the Probation Department, 415 W. Ocean Blvd., or the probation officer now assigned to the Juvenile Division.

The new law, however, creates situations such as this: Police pick up a 10-year-old curfew violator. They cannot contact his parents, and the new law prohibits them from detaining him at the police station. So he is taken to the approved boys' facility at Chino. If the boy chooses, he can just walk out the door of that facility the minute police leave.

"WE WILL NOT ignore these youngsters," said Captain LaRue. "We will work with them, but we are working under a handicap with this new law."

The logical action of the state legislators would have been to establish the program — which had support in principle from police and juvenile officers — but to require that it be implemented by a certain deadline, July 1, for example.

That would have given communities time to establish the necessary facilities — if the state also had seen fit to provide funds for the program.

Seek safest way to ship oil

WASHINGTON — There are some lessons to be learned from the recent series of oil tanker accidents, but unfortunately the wrong conclusions are being drawn.

There seems to be a hysteria developing concerning the tankers, a hysteria which may well just complicate the problem.

Some basic facts have to be faced. This nation needs oil and it does not produce enough oil on its own.

For autos, factories, homes, imported oil is a fact of life. The shipment of oil can't be stopped.

SO THE PROBLEM is to make that shipment as safe as possible, recognizing that some accidents will occur. Because accidents will occur, the terminals and shipping routes should be placed where damage will be minimal.

Obviously tanker inspection and tanker equipment need to be improved. Obviously new safety precautions are needed.

The recent spills and accidents have occurred at a time when there is a growing debate over Alaskan oil which will shortly begin to pour off the Alaskan pipeline.

Incredibly, no decision has been made on where that oil is to be shipped.

There are proposals to take it by tanker to the Port of Long Beach. From there it would be sent by pipeline to Midland, Tex., for refining and shipment to oil-short Midwest points.

Conservationists are fighting this plan, partially out of fears of spills and other accidents. Those fears are real, but have offer much greater risks of spills and a certainty of much greater ecological damage from spills.

The recent oil tanker explosion in the Port of Los Angeles killed seven workmen. However, because that explosion was in a port area, homes and lives of those not associated with the ship escaped, except that some nearby homes suffered broken windows.

THE OIL SPILLS in the Atlantic are serious because they flow into the path of schools of fish and endanger coastal areas. Again, a spill within, say, the Port of Long Beach can be confined at least by the breakwater so that major ecological damage is unlikely.

Finally, if this oil is shipped from one United States port to another United States port, then, under law, American ships and American crews, under American regulation, must be used.

As yet, Americans have not decided on strict conservation of fuels to reduce the amount of oil being used.

So the question is simply one of finding the safest method of shipping oil. No more, no less.

The Port of Long Beach presents a controlled situation where relatively little marine, animal, or human life would be endangered and where rescue and fire fighting equipment would be available.

Conscience vs. constituency

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Brown's announcement last week that he intended to veto any bill giving the state authority to impose the death penalty focuses attention on one of the most vexing questions with which people in public office must deal.

That is, what does an elected official do when there is a conflict between his or her conscience and the clearly expressed will of a majority of the official's constituency?

Californians, in the November election of 1972, left no doubt that they considered the death penalty to be a suitable punishment in appropriate cases. More than eight million voters expressed an opinion on what was Proposition 17 that year, an initiative declaring that the death penalty was not to be deemed a cruel or unusual punishment, and 67.5 per cent — 5,447,165 as against 2,617,514 — cast "yes" ballots.

YET, TWO YEARS later, those same California voters elected Edmund G. Brown Jr., a known death-penalty opponent, to the governor's office.

Last Thursday, Brown said, in effect, that his conscience must be more of a guide for him on the death penalty question than that 67.5-per-cent vote in 1972.

There was an immediate outcry, as the politically astute Brown certainly knew there would be, and he was charged with, among other things, being an "elitist" who felt his own views of the world to be superior to those of the people he had sworn to serve.

Well, setting aside the death-penalty issue and the subject of Jerry Brown's psyche, there remains the question of what we expect from our elected representatives.

Certainly we don't expect them to pick up a telephone every time they must cast a vote and inquire of their constituents what they should do.

The argument could be made that when a citizen votes for a candidate, he or she is saying, in effect, "Go explore the issues, examine the available evidence on for instance, state legislators have often been heard to say, "I personally oppose capital punishment, but the 1972 vote and response to my district questionnaires clearly indicate that my constituents favor it, so I feel obliged to support a death-penalty bill."

That approach to government can be defended, and it is certainly a safe route to take if re-election is considered one of the objectives of holding office.

BUT SOMEHOW, the way the process was put together, it seems that the founding fathers had the idea that whole human beings — consciences, personal points of view and individual idiosyncrasies included — should be the holders of positions of leadership.

And every two years or four years or six years or whenever, the people decide whether or not to retain the whole human beings who have been making those judgments in their positions of leadership.

In some 22 months, Jerry Brown, should he decide to seek re-election, will lay the judgment he has made on the death penalty issue alongside other judgments he has made and ask whether an evaluation of those judgments merit four more years' opportunity to make additional judgments.

Regardless of how Californians feel politicians should answer the conscience vs. constituency conflict question, Jerry Brown is telling us that he has answered the question, and he is telling us what the answer is.

both sides of each issue, and then use your judgment as to which course of action would be in the best interests of the community."

Isn't that the unspoken directive given to every elected official, whether the official is to serve on the city council, library board, mosquito abatement district, in the State Legislature or the Congress, or as governor or president?

Not every public official agrees, obviously. On the subject of the death penalty,

Blanket amnesty unpardonable

WASHINGTON — President Ford is getting heaps of advice these days to declare a "blanket amnesty" before he leaves office. The advice comes from Mrs. Philip Hart, from Congressman John Conyers, and from various sob-sisters in the press. It is bad advice and ought to be rejected.

The line of argument is to this effect: The United States' involvement in Vietnam was immoral and wrong. Those who opposed the involvement, and actively resisted such involvement, were therefore moral and right. To punish persons for being moral and right is unjust. Whatever the supposed offenses of the resisters may have been, these offenses should now be forgotten by the extension of amnesty to all draft evaders, to non-criminal deserters, and to an estimated 790,000 persons who received less than honorable discharges over a 16-year period. By extending such amnesty, Mr. Ford would secure a place in history as statesman and emancipator. With a stroke of his pen, Mr. Ford could heal the last of the wounds of Vietnam.

WHAT THESE well-meaning petitioners are saying, put another way, is that Mr. Ford should discard his own principles and put on theirs instead. To listen to their shrill and plaintive arguments, you would never suppose that Mr. Ford had lifted a finger in behalf of Vietnam offenders, or that any case whatever could be made for his position.

Thus Mr. Ford's clemency program is condemned out of hand as a "disaster," or a "fiasco," or as mere "entrapment." It was nothing of the sort. His program led to a careful review of 14,500 cases. More than 6,000 pardons were granted, with full restoration of civil liberties. In only 911 cases did the President's board recommend against clemency. The program was at once humane and fair. While it was denounced by the all-or-nothing apostles of universal amnesty, it was well accepted by the thousands who applied and by the families and survivors of Vietnam veterans who obeyed the law. Mr. Ford has

But there is no evidence whatever to support the notion that all 790,000 of the "less-than-honorable" cases were motivated by "peaceful opposition to the Vietnam war." On the contrary, findings of the clemency board indicate that this was the least of motivations. The board's study of those who deserted found that "less than five per cent committed their AWOL offenses because of opposition to the war."

On the issue of motivation, we simply do not know what the facts are. The proponents reduce their own case to a travesty by equating the principled objector, discharged LTH for passing out leaflets, with the malingerer goof-off, discharged for refusing to make his bed.

THE VIETNAM WAR, right or wrong, moral or immoral, is not the last war we will know. It is not the last war that will be "resisted." To grant the kind of sweeping amnesty demanded by the Vietnam offenders would set a precedent fatal to military discipline and to future conscription laws. Such amnesty would amount to an invitation to persons subject to induction hereafter: Defy the law. Nothing will happen. Remember amnesty after Vietnam.

President-elect Carter has promised a new pardon plan. To the extent that he builds upon the Ford program and retains distinctions among principled resisters, ordinary deserters and petty thieves, few persons will make bitter objections. But "more than a million" pardons? This would be, in itself, an unpardonable act.

James J. Kilpatrick

every reason to defend his record in this regard, and he has no reason to apologize for it.

The case for "universal amnesty," in my own view, falls on three grounds: fact, law and precedent.

Fritz Eflaw, a leading draft resister, quotes the Democratic platform and asks that amnesty be granted all those "who are in legal or financial jeopardy because of their peaceful opposition to the Vietnam war." He says there are "more than a million" of these, including "790,000

It is difficult to imagine the tall and robust chief of mission of the People's Republic of China, General Huang Chen, as the "beau of the ball" — but that is what he is in diplomatic circles in Washington.

A few days ago, the Ambassador of Mexico and Mrs. de Olloqui gave a farewell party because he will become Mexico's undersecretary of state.

It was intriguing to foreign diplomats and Americans when the Iranian ambassador, Ardeshir Zahedi, asked General Huang, who has ambassadorial rank, for an appointment the next day. It is not the usual diplomatic protocol for one envoy to approach another ambassador at a party to discuss a future meeting. Those matters are handled by more junior diplomats. The conclusion drawn was that the matter was of importance. Diplomats from other countries who observed the incident were perplexed.

The USSR's ambassador, Anatoly Dobrynin, a witty and genial giant with a "ho-ho-ho" Santa Claus-type laugh, a brilliant and subtle diplomat, was also a guest at the reception. He greeted General and Mrs. Huang cordially.

Because General Huang uses an interpreter, they spoke in English. The Chinese and Russian ambassadors had a jovial conversation that went on and on for at least 20 minutes. It was much more friendly than the usual formal exchange of diplomatic greetings.

The U. S. Department of State is receiving "the word" that Soviet ambassadors in a number of countries are going out of their way to be publicly cordial at receptions to ambassadors from the People's Republic of China.

Diplomats and Americans who move in diplomatic circles know that anything unusual that occurs is motivated by important reasons. Several questions are being asked. Are the Russians signaling to the leaders of the People's Republic of China that, like Barkis in "David Copperfield," the USSR "is willing"? That would be a delicate way of testing the climate for a rapprochement without risking the rebuff of formal meetings.

Are the Russians sending a message to the United States to move fast in the SALT negotiations, or the Soviets will proceed with plans to reestablish closer relations with mainland China?

Under any circumstances, these interesting events around the world must please the Chinese leaders.

TV football: a soporific ritual

I am in front of the television set watching football. I cannot say why, but it is certainly not, as certain sociologists insist, because football is a metaphor for combat. Surely a man does not want to go to sleep during combat, and watching football usually leads to a stupor somewhere between exhaustion and deep slumber.

Yet one sits here hour after hour. Why? Perhaps because televised football is the American equivalent of Chinese opera. We have all seen it so many times that surprise is no longer possible, yet we are mesmerized by the ritual into a state transcending boredom.

We know by heart all the lines of the script starting with the traditional opening speeches by the game announcers, who function as the Chorus. "Both teams are up today. They have come to play. They have the will to win. They are sky high. There is no tomorrow."

Yes, there is always no tomorrow, and although there always turns out to be a tomorrow anyhow, we hear the line uttered and feel absolute satisfaction with its rightness. If this game were being played and the announcer failed to say, "There is no tomorrow," we would feel the event spoiled, as we do in certain performances of "La Traviata" which omit "Di Provenza" in the interests of efficiency.

Not much 'Georgia touch'

WASHINGTON — A new year, a new Congress and a new administration are descending upon this city. According to currently popular mythology, the latter is the most important of the political and social changes which are to give the nation's capital a new and presumably more friendly look.

Columns upon columns are being written about the hordes of Georgians who are primed to take over Washington on Jan. 20 and who will, it is said, change the customs and mores of this Potomac River Sodom. Our life style, it is predicted, will be altered as we seek to emulate the Southern graciousness with which the White House will suddenly be imbued.

Food sections of Washington newspapers are already supplying us with recipes for the new staples of our diets. At breakfast, we will be eating grits, whether or not we like them (or it). Catfish will be a regular visitor to our dinner tables. Nobody would be seen dead without having had yams for either lunch or supper. Cornpone will replace bread, and peanut butter will be the delicacy of every meal. Naturally we are expected to be topping our meals with pecan pie.

Our speech habits are to undergo sudden and drastic change. We are supposed to be practicing the correct pronunciation, inflection and usage of "Y'all." The sounding of "g" at the end of a word such as "running" will be out. We are to pull ourselves together and substitute the dulcet sounds of the Deep South for the nasal twangs of the Midwest or the atrocities perpetrated upon our language by those from Brooklyn or Montana. We'd better shape up by adopting new life styles.

Blue denim will reputedly be the uniform of the day and stuffy old tuxedos will be stored with the family heirlooms in cedar closets. Forget the golf clubs, Buster, and get with it on the tennis court or, more probably, the softball diamond.

High falutin' dances such as the tango or the fox-trot will be supplanted by the waltz and the square dance. Candle lights will supplant neon lights. Washington will, in short, be suffused with the sentimental aura of southern romanticism.

IT ALL MAKES, I suppose, for a charming, idealistic picture. Of one thing I am sure, however, it ain't goin' to happen.

Washington has endured new administrations in the past and undoubtedly will in the future. We've lived through invasions from Kansas and Missouri and New York and California and Massachusetts. After they've gone, we are pretty much the same as we were before they arrived.

True, some surface differences do momentarily emerge. The Kennedys

Generally speaking Democrats are more avid partygoers than Republicans (yes, that generality can be defended), so the social scene in Washington can be expected to pick up under the new administration whether or not its coloration be of the Deep South.

One other thing is also certain. Suggestions that it will become a sort of "People's White House" under the Carters will not materialize as fact. The hopes of some appear to be that the populace will somehow or other wander in and out of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. to gab informally with the President and his family. Forget it. It's

"That's right! Mr. Carter DOES plan to serve only wine at the White House. If we need a 'taster' we'll be in touch!"

Whose half-truths?

The most recent letter over Douglas Lemons' name (I, P-T, Jan. 5) accuses our group of misleading half-truths. We will answer the accusations in order.

1. All Alaskan oil needed on the West Coast may stay here, but Mr. Lemons' people know as well as we how little that is. The Port of Long Beach Environmental Impact Report says on Page 1: "Sohio T.C. anticipates . . . approximately 200,000 barrels per day distributed to Los Angeles area refineries for regional consumption. The remaining surplus will be transported to Midland, Texas, because Sohio T.C. anticipates the total crude oil supply available on the West Coast will exceed demand once the Alaskan crude begins to flow from the north slope (Prudhoe Bay) area. . . ."

The Lemons letter agrees that ultimately 1.2 million barrels per day will come out of Alaska. The Environmental Impact Report says at page 59 that the through-put capacity of the proposed pipeline system could be expanded from 500,000 barrels per day to approximately 1 million per day and further states at page 80 that "California should be aware of the impetus which will likely exist for an expansion of the Sohio project" to 1 million barrels. The whole reason Sohio agreed to give British Petroleum 54 per cent control of Sohio was to get BP's Alaskan oil to Sohio Midwest refineries. (L.A. Times, 12/27/76, quoting Sohio.)

2. The claim that Sohio Midwest refineries are not designed to refine Alaskan Crude is misleading, as Mr. Lemons, whose company (Gammaloy Ltd.) is a supplier to the oil industry, surely knows. California's refineries are no more designed to refine Alaskan Crude than Sohio's. As the Port Environmental Impact Report points out on page 81, "process adaptations" are required to run Alaskan oil. The same process adaptations will be made at BP/Sohio's Midwest refineries. The whole point to the pipeline is to get the oil to BP Sohio Midwest refineries.

3. The Sohio board chairman's remarks about how little there is for Long Beach in this project were not paraphrased and taken out of context. I, P-T Washington reporter, Gil Bailey, stated in an article in the Press-Telegram on December 10, 1976:

"He (Sohio's board chairman) conceded that there would be relatively little benefit to the state or to Long Beach in construction of the terminal."

"California's incentive is really whether it wants to be part of the United States" he said, noting the need for the oil in the Midwest and East.

"In the case of Long Beach, he was asked how many jobs the terminal would produce."

"There would not be a great many. This is not of significance to Long Beach," he said. . . ."

The fact is as the Sohio board chairman's remarks make clear, that the figures in the Port Environmental Impact Report on jobs and revenues are inflated and unrealistic. A full analysis is impossible in this letter, but take just one example; the Lemons claim that the terminal will create 1,750 permanent jobs. About 1,400 of those supposed jobs are tanker crewmen, who have nothing to do with Long Beach.

4. The argument that American-built tankers are safer than the foreign tankers so extensively used (and mostly owned) by U.S. oil companies is flatly refuted by P.J. Loree, chairman of the Federation of American Controlled Shipping, who says that FACS foreign-built tankers rigidly adhere to U.S. standards in construction, maintenance, and competence of officers and crew. The Argo Merchant and Sansinena disasters were caused by human errors. The Sansinena passed a fire department safety check the day before it exploded. Who's trying to kid whom?

5. It is a mystery why the Lemons article disputes that British Petroleum controls Sohio when their own figures show exactly that. When a corporation has 40,000 shareholders, 10 per cent is control. BP has 25 per cent and will ultimately obtain 54 per cent. As Dan Fisher of the L.A. Times said on 12/12/76:

"The price Sohio paid (for Alaska oil) was immediate 25 per cent interest in the company and the eventual relinquishment of 54 per cent control to British Petroleum Co., Ltd."

6. A bigger mystery is why the Lemons letter would deny that the oil is going to be distributed from Midland, Texas, to other areas. As the Port of Long Beach Environmental Impact Report says on page 1, the proposal is to transport Alaskan crude oil "ultimately to the midcontinent and eastern markets via Midland, Texas." Incidentally, we note that the letter does not dispute that a pipeline through Canada would cost at least $50 a barrel less ($200 million a year) than the Long Beach-Texas route. BP/Sohio prefers the Long Beach route only because it will make profits on transportation tariffs and refining; others will pay the extra delivery costs.

7. And the biggest mystery is why the Lemons letter asks where our 100-tanker explosion claim came from. A Chamber staff member asked us, and we told him where we got the figure; from an article by L.A. Times writer Larry Pryor on 12/18/76. Mr. Pryor tells us, as he would have been happy to tell the Chamber, that the figure came from a study, Tank Ship Accidents and Resulting Oil Outflows, 1969-1973 made for Congress by Lt. Cdr. Card, U.S. Coast Guard.

In your article, "Mexico protests tourist warnings," there is a basic question concerning violence: Is Mexico trying to give us North Americans competition in violence?

If the American Automobile Association deems itself the protector of the highways, it certainly should publish the same warning about the killers loose on the highways and streets of California.

The woman who witnessed the murder of her husband as he repaired a flat tire in Compton just the other day can attest to the need to post warning signs on the dangers of traveling Compton's streets.

It is stealing

According to your letter, he finally offered to carry home the groceries. This indicates he could have managed to do so. Why didn't he in the first place? Even at Alpha Beta, $16 probably does not buy all that much bulk and weight. If your purchases did indeed put too much burden on your poor son, not to forget his skateboard, then the error lies with you.

In the matter of the officer stating the signs were posted incorrectly — hogwash! Since when should it be necessary for anyone to post a sign saying "You may not steal?" Yes, I said steal. Of course, you were perhaps going to see that the cart was returned promptly. In which case, that puts you squarely on the wrong side with your son. Shades of the Miranda Decision!

The cart is for your convenience while shopping, not a personal conveyance to your home. And I'm aghast at the verbiage describing a police officer, while in the performance of his duties, purporting to advise filing charges against an employee for protecting his employer's property. If he did so, no wonder law-abiding citizens are losing faith in their "protectors." Or did the manager keep your son's skateboard, the groceries and your $16 as well?

On any given day, a general cruise within a five-block radius of any supermarket will show these carts are lying in the gutters, in people's front yards, in vacant lots and I once saw one on a front porch. Do you have any idea what the maintenance, repair and recovery of this "shoppers' service" costs the store? Obviously not. You are too busy justifying an illegal, and if not illegal, certainly immoral maneuver by your son. If he was treated like a common criminal, the bad judgment is yours. If he can properly purchase $16 worth of groceries, his is certainly old enough to be taught that others' possessions are not for his personal use.

Perhaps a harassed store manager might be forgiven for not saying Merry Christmas during the season which brings the heaviest rip-offs of the year under the curdled guise of milk of human kindness.

Right on, Mr. Manager — a few of us are with you.

Why no guidelines?

In December, the Long Beach Recreation Department celebrated the end of the Bicentennial year by "democratically" handing down a decision to eliminate drag-boat racing from the 1977 Marine Stadium calendar of events. Although somewhat unexpected, it was inevitable due to the wealth and influence of the Alamitos Heights Homeowners Association.

When I questioned the cause, I was informed the noise factor was the primary topic. I also discovered that a letter requesting noise limit guidelines was sent to all members of the Recreation Commission and has not received a response. Fair play?

As a resident of Long Beach for 28 years and an avid fan of drag-boat racing, I feel the least I can expect to see is an answer to this legitimate request and see the noise guidelines published.

Lions Drag Strip was closed with this same "blitzkrieg" tactic as used on the stadium, and I can't sit back and watch Marine Stadium closed in this manner.

Spark plugs are always sold between fantastic catches in the end zone, and if they were not, if we moved from one fantastic catch immediately to another fantastic catch without pausing to sell spark plugs, I would feel that the ritual had been violated by a profane alteration in its prescribed pace.

Columns upon columns are being written about the hordes of Georgians who are primed to take over Washington on Jan. 20 and who will, it is said, change the customs and mores of this Potomac River Sodom. Our life style, it is predicted, will be altered as we seek to emulate the Southern graciousness with which the White House will suddenly be imbued.

Food sections of Washington newspapers are already supplying us with recipes for the new staples of our diets. At breakfast, we will be eating grits, whether or not we like them for it. Catfish will be a regular visitor to our dinner tables. Nobody would be seen dead without having had yams for either lunch or supper. Cornpone will replace bread, and peanut butter will be the delicacy of every meal. Naturally we are expected to be topping our meals with pecan pie.

Our speech habits are to undergo sudden and drastic change. We are supposed to be practicing the correct pronunciation, inflection and usage of "Y'all." The sound of "g" at the end of a word such as "running" will be out. We are to pull ourselves together and substitute the dulcet sounds of the Deep South for the nasal twangs of the Midwest or the atrocities perpetrated upon our language by those from Brooklyn or Montana. We'd better shape up by adopting new life styles.

Blue denim will reputedly be the uniform of the day and stuffy old tuxedos will be stored with the family heirlooms in cedar closets. Forget the golf clubs, Buster, and get with it on the tennis court or, more probably, the softball diamond.

High falutin' dances such as the tango or the fox-trot will be supplanted by the waltz and the square dance. Candle lights will supplant neon lights. Washington will, in short, be suffused with the sentimental aura of southern romanticism.

IT ALL MAKES, I suppose, for a charming, idealistic picture. Of one thing I am sure, however: It ain't goin' to happen. Washington has endured new administrations in the past and undoubtedly will in the future. We've lived through invasions from Kansas and Missouri and New York and California and Massachusetts. After they've gone, we are pretty much the same as we were before they arrived.

True, some surface differences do momentarily emerge. The Kennedys

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

brought glamor and sparkle to the White House and it rubbed off on the rest of Washington society. Truman had a robust earthiness which resulted in an earthy robust lady, Perle Mesta, becoming "the hostess with the mostest."

Generally speaking Democrats are more avid partygoers than Republicans (yes, that generality can be defended), so the social scene in Washington can be expected to pick up under the new administration whether or not its coloration be of the Deep South.

One other thing is also certain. Suggestions that it will become a sort of "People's White House" under the Carters will not materialize as fact. The hopes of some appear to be that the populace will somehow or other wander in and out of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. to gab informally with the President and his family. Forget it. It's been tried and it never has worked. The President of the United States, whether he wants to be or not, must of necessity be a kind of recluse, if only for security reasons. The idea of his mingling easily and freely with his constituents is appealing in theory, but utterly impractical. So don't expect the White House lawn to look like Central Park during the Carter administration.

Most of the higher-ups in the new regime have been in or around Washington before. They are not at first glance likely to produce any great revolutionary thoughts on the form and operations of our government and certainly none of them is capable of, or desirous of, effecting any great social changes. Most of them will, as they have in the past, accept the social system as it is and those among them who don't like it can simply stay in their offices or at their homes.

For the next few weeks then, we Washingtonians will probably try out our camellias: Southern accents, Rhett Butler gazes and have Georgia on our minds. It's a pretty good guess that phase will pass quickly and that, say, three or four months from now, everything in Washington will be back to normal.

Letters to the editor

Whose half-truths?

The most recent letter over Douglas Lemons' name (I, P-T, Jan. 5) accuses our group of misleading half-truths. We will answer the accusations in order.

1. All Alaskan oil needed on the West Coast may stay here, but Mr. Lemons' people know as well as we how little that is. The Port of Long Beach Environmental Impact Report says on page 1: "Sohio T.C. anticipates . . . approximately 200,000 barrels per day distributed to Los Angeles area refineries for regional consumption. The remaining surplus will be transported to Midland, Texas, because Sohio T.C. anticipates the total crude oil supply available on the West Coast will exceed demand once the Alaskan crude begins to flow from the north slope (Prudhoe Bay) area. . . . The Lemons letter agrees that ultimately 1.2 million barrels per day will come out of Alaska. The Environmental Impact Report says at page 59 that the through-put capacity of the proposed pipeline system could be expanded from 500,000 barrels per day to approximately 1 million per day and further states at page 80 that "California should be aware of the impetus which will likely exist for an expansion of the Sohio project" to 1 million barrels. The whole reason Sohio agreed to give British Petroleum 54 per cent control of Sohio was to get BP's Alaskan oil to Sohio Midwest refineries. (L.A. Times, 12/2/76, quoting Sohio.)

2. The claim that Sohio Midwest refineries are not designed to refine Alaskan Crude is misleading, as Mr. Lemons, whose company (Gammaloy Ltd.) is a supplier to the oil industry, surely knows. California's refineries are no more designed to refine Alaskan Crude than Sohio's. As the Port Environmental Impact Report points out on page 81, "process adaptations" are required to run Alaskan oil. The same process adaptations will be made at BP/Sohio's Midwest refineries. The whole point to the pipeline is to get the oil to BP/Sohio Midwest refineries.

3. The Sohio board chairman's remarks about how little there is for Long Beach in this project were not paraphrased and taken out of context. I, P-T Washington reporter, Gil Bailey, stated in an article in the Press-Telegram on December 10, 1976:

"He (Sohio's board chairman) conceded that there would be relatively little benefit to the state or to Long Beach in construction of the terminal."

"California's incentive is really whether it wants to be part of the United States," he said, noting the need for the oil in the Midwest and East.

"In the case of Long Beach, he was asked how many jobs the terminal would produce."

"There would not be a great many. This is not of significance to Long Beach," he said. . . .

The fact is as the Sohio board chairman's remarks make clear, that the figures in the Port Environmental Impact Report on jobs and revenues are inflated and unrealistic. A full analysis is impossible in this letter, but take just one example; the Lemons claim that the terminal will create 1,750 permanent jobs. About 1,400 of those supposed jobs are tanker crewmen, who have nothing to do with Long Beach.

4. The argument that American-built tankers are safer than the foreign tankers so extensively used (and mostly owned) by U.S. oil companies is flatly refuted by P.J. Loree, chairman of the Federation of American Controlled Shipping, who says that FACS foreign-built tankers rigidly adhere to U.S. standards in construction, maintenance, and competence of officers and crew. The Argo Merchant and Sinsinara disasters were caused by human errors. The Sinsinara passed a fire department safety check the day before it exploded. Who's trying to kid whom?

5. It is a mystery why the Lemons article disputes that British Petroleum controls Sohio when their own figures show exactly that. When a corporation has 40,000 shareholders, 10 per cent is control. BP has 25 per cent and will ultimately obtain 54 per cent. As Dan Fisher of the L.A. Times said on 12/12/76:

"The price Sohio paid (for Alaska oil) was immediate 25 per cent interest in the company and the eventual relinquishment of 54 per cent control to British Petroleum Co., Ltd."

6. A bigger mystery is why the Lemons letter would deny that the oil is going to be distributed from Midland, Texas, to other areas. As the Port of Long Beach Environmental Impact Report says on page 1, the proposal is to transport Alaskan crude oil "ultimately to the midcontinent and eastern markets via Midland, Texas." Incidentally, we note that the letter does not dispute that a pipeline through Canada would cost at least $.50 a barrel less ($200 million a year) than the Long Beach-Texas route. BP/Sohio prefers the Long Beach route only because it will make profits on transportation tariffs and refining; others will pay the extra delivery costs.

7. And the biggest mystery is why the Lemons letter asks where our 100-tanker explosion claim came from. A Chamber staff member asked us, and we told him where we got the figure; from an article by L.A. Times writer Larry Pryor on 12/18/76. Mr. Pryor tells us, as he would have been happy to tell the Chamber, that the figure came from a study, Tank Ship Accidents and Resulting Oil Outflows, 1969-1973 made for Congress by Lt. Cdr. Card, U.S. Coast Guard.

Post U.S. warnings

In your article, "Mexico protests tourist warnings," there is a basic question concerning violence: Is Mexico trying to give us North Americans competition in violence?

If the American Automobile Association deems itself the protector of the highways, it certainly should publish the same warning about the killers loose on the highways and streets of California.

The woman who witnessed the murder of her husband as he repaired a flat tire in Compton just the other day can attest to the need to post warning signs on the dangers of traveling Compton's streets.

It is stealing

According to your letter, he finally offered to carry home the groceries. This indicates he could have managed to do so. Why didn't he in the first place? Even at Alpha Beta, $16 probably does not buy all that much bulk and weight. If your purchases did indeed put too much burden on your poor son, not to forget his skateboard, then the error lies with you.

In the matter of the officer stating the signs were posted incorrectly — hogwash! Since when should it be necessary for anyone to post a sign saying "You may not steal?" Yes, I said steal. Of course, you were perhaps going to see that the cart was returned promptly. In which case, that puts you squarely on the wrong side with your son. Shades of the Miranda Decision!

The cart is for your convenience while shopping, not a personal conveyance to your home. And I'm aghast at the verbiage describing a police officer, while in the performance of his duties, purporting to advise filing charges against an employee for protecting his employer's property. If he did so, no wonder law-abiding citizens are losing faith in their "protectors." Or did the manager keep your son's skateboard, the groceries and your $16 as well?

On any given day, a general cruise within a five-block radius of any supermarket will show these carts are lying in the gutters, in people's front yards, in vacant lots and I once saw one on a front porch. Do you have any idea what the maintenance, repair and recovery of this "shopper's service" costs the store? Obviously not. You are too busy justifying an illegal, and if not illegal, certainly immoral maneuver by your son. If he was treated like a common criminal, the bad judgment is yours. If he can properly purchase $16 worth of groceries, his is certainly old enough to be taught that others' possessions are not for his personal use.

Perhaps a harassed store manager might be forgiven for not saying Merry Christmas during the season which brings the heaviest rip-offs of the year under the curdled guise of milk of human kindness.

Right on, Mr. Manager — a few of us are with you.

Why no guidelines?

In December, the Long Beach Recreation Department celebrated the end of the Bicentennial year by "democratically" handing down a decision to eliminate drag-boat racing from the 1977 Marine Stadium calendar of events. Although somewhat unexpected, it was inevitable due to the wealth and influence of the Alamitos Heights Homeowners Association.

When I questioned the cause, I was informed the noise factor was the primary topic. I also discovered that a letter requesting noise limit guidelines was sent to all members of the Recreation Commission and has not received a response. Fair play?

As a resident of Long Beach for 28 years and an avid fan of drag-boat racing, I feel the least I can expect to see is an answer to this legitimate request and see the noise guidelines published.

Lions Drag Strip was closed with this same "hitzkrieg" tactic as used on the stadium, and I can't sit back and watch Marine Stadium closed in this manner.

Another Kennedy

An item in the I, P-T's Parade magazine (Jan. 2) indicates that youthful Joe Kennedy, a son of Robert and Ethel, quite possibly will seek a congressional seat in 1978, representing Boston's 11th District.

It is difficult for many to understand just how the "shanty" Irish Kennedys have become so popular in that "wonderful city of Boston, the home of the bean and the cod, where the Cabots speak only to Lowells, and the Lowells speak only to God," as some irreverent rhymester so aptly put it once long ago.

Life savers

On Dec. 30 at 5:45 a.m. my sister had a heart problem and needed help, so I called the paramedic number and it was answered on the first ring. Within four minutes, the most courteous, kind, gentle and efficient firemen arrived, with the doctor made and an IV started while she was on her bed. An ambulance transport put her safely in Community Hospital where she is now fine in the coronary care unit.

We would like to thank these wonderful firemen for a job well done.

Slightly deceased

I would like to respond to the letter by Ray Hernandez about the huge salary raises about to be given to high-ranking officials. Ray, don't hold your breath, hoping these increases won't go through, because you will be a long time dead. I'll assure you they will go through.

Also, if you are a property owner and hoping for a reduction in property taxes, in spite of all you hear and read, don't hold your breath on that one either, or you will be slightly deceased.

The transfer of ownership, Mrs. Olshane has told creditors, was for legal reasons because of suits brought against her by her husband's family.

WHEN SHE speaks of having angry step-children, the record backs up her claim.

Her octogenarian husband, Moe Olshane, is confined to a convalescent hospital, and she is embroiled in a suit with his two children over some Las Vegas property and the family home in Los Angeles.

Before her marriage to Olshane, she had confrontations with a former husband's children, who said they put out a "wanted" poster for her, claiming she had taken their father's life savings before divorcing him a month after their marriage.

In an interview in the November edition of Long Beach Magazine, which apparently is scheduled to open offices in the Pacific Coast Club, Mrs. Olshane said that 47 organizations had already planned to meet at the club.

SHE WAS quoted as saying the club would also host the Miss Hemisphere Contest, the Miss World Contest and the State Beauty Pageant, along with everything from art exhibits to track meets.

Forty members of the Los Angeles Rams, she said in the magazine interview, are prospective club members, and she said the club's new bar will be named for the team: The Rams Den.

Rams officials say they know nothing about the club or the Den, but Long Beach attorney Ed Gottlieb, who represents several Rams players, said that he and two of the Rams — Tom Mack and Cody Jones — had agreed to become charter members at a fee of $3,500 each.

"She," Gottlieb said of Mrs. Olshane, "said she is buying up the building in stages — and that the Rams Den will be finished well in advance of the rest of it — she said by the end of this (1976) season."

LAWSUITS against Mrs. Olshane continue to spring up as her promises dissolve.

The lawsuits facing Mrs. Olshane — also known as Sally Surratt, Sally Cahan, Sally Kohn, Sally Mesnick, Sally Latham, Sally Goldberg and Ruth Cowan, among names shown on marriage certificates and other documents — stem from more than the defunct Pacific Coast Club.

While she controlled the nearby Kona Hotel, 530 E. Ocean Blvd., she borrowed $26,000 from Security Pacific National Bank and never paid back the loan, according to a suit filed by the bank.

The bank loan was made using the hotel's furnishings as collateral, yet the people who sold her the furnishings are suing, too. They claim she never paid for the furniture she used as collateral to get the bank loan.

EVEN THE real estate firm, Rex L. Hodges Realty Co., which was supposed to handle the sale of the Kona Hotel for Mrs. Olshane, isn't happy. In a lawsuit, the firm claims Mrs. Olshane sold the hotel while it was listed with the realtors, without paying a commission.

At least two lawsuits against Mrs. Olshane concerning the Pacific Coast Club currently are on file in Long Beach Superior Court.

One is a $35,000 suit filed by the architectural-engineering firm that did the initial survey of the building. The second is a $24,000 suit filed by the contractor who was to do the work.

Both say she reneged on their contracts and "secretly" transferred ownership of the property to Samuel to avoid going ahead with the restoration of the building.

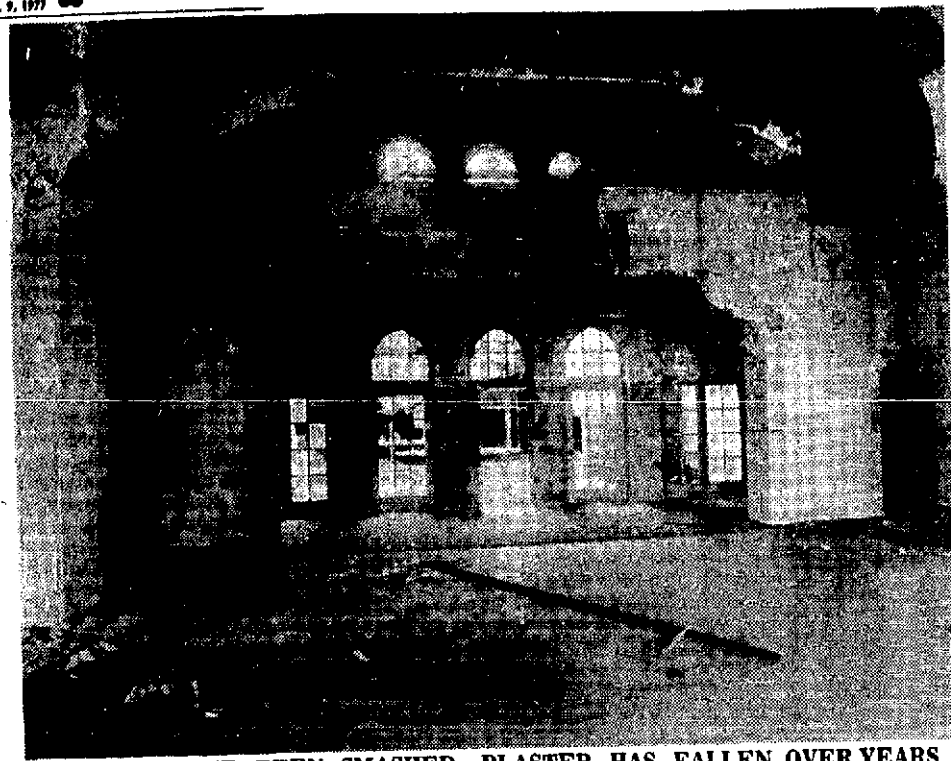

Only the city seems to be unaware of what is happening.

Documents on file with the city's Building and Safety Department show the continuous problems:

— On Nov. 24, 1975, Great Western Savings & Loan notified the city that it had sold the Pacific Coast Club to Sally Olshane, and that it was therefore no longer its problem to abandon or demolish the building within 10 days, as ordered.

— On Nov. 26, two days later, Mrs. Olshane requested and was granted a six-month extension for the repairing. Grand opening, she said, would be Dec. 31, 1975, with limited access to areas forward of the tower until structural repairs were completed.

— On Dec. 3, the city's electrical expert outlined the "substandard and dangerous conditions" in the building.

— On Jan. 13, 1976, Fire Marshal C.A. Jones set forth, in a memorandum, a set of reconstruction requirements establishing "minimum fire and life safety standards" for the property.

— On Feb. 18, 1976, the city's plumbing superintendent, in a memorandum, outlined similar dangerous and substandard conditions as it pertained to plumbing.

— On Feb. 19, the superintendent of Housing and Conservation wrote a similar memo.

— On Feb. 24, the city granted a time extension, expiring July 1, 1976, to repair the structure, provided the building remained unoccupied.

— On March 24, the fire marshal declared the building unsafe and a public nuisance.

— On March 29, five days later, the fire chief asked that the Building Department revoke the Certificate of Occupancy on the building, which had apparently been issued despite the February order of vacancy.

— On March 29 — the same day — the fire department was informed that the department would prepare an Order of Abatement of Nuisance to submit to the Board of Examiners, Appeals and Condemnation.

— On June 24, the fire marshal ordered Mrs. Olshane to comply with the Fire Code and correct hazardous conditions before July 7.

— On Aug. 10, the Department of Building and Safety noted that Mrs. Olshane had not submitted a plan of action in regard to the building, and the next day revoked the Certificate of Occupancy.

— On Aug. 16, the Appeals Board "discussed" the Olshane-Pacific Coast Club case and decided to hear the case.

— On Sept. 27, Mrs. Olshane appeared before the Appeals Board as owner and indicated that while final plans were being prepared, plastering and painting would begin. She was given a 60-day extension of time to complete her plan of action.

— On Oct. 6, Mrs. Olshane was sent an "excessive hazard notice."

— The final item in the Building Department files is a notation that "it was determined that the structure must be demolished or repaired by Jan. 1, 1977."

That date has passed, as have other scheduled "hearings" by the Appeals Board.

The last date for a hearing, in December, was cancelled when Mrs. Olshane notified the board her husband was ill.

And because of her husband, Mrs. Olshane indicated in an interview, she may not make it to the hearing set for Monday.

"My husband has been dying for the past four months and I have to feed him three times a day . . .," she said.

DECORATIVE EXTERIOR ALSO DAMAGED

A LETTER from the Long Beach convalescent hospital where Olshane was committed by his wife in early 1976 indicated that he had no visitors from March 1 to May 25 at which time he — along with his bill — was released to the custody of his children.

Nurses who feed Olshane at Midtown Convalescent Hospital in Los Angeles, where he currently is a patient, said he has had only one visitor, his son.

"I never knew he had a wife," one nurse said. "If she says she has to come here to feed him three times a day, that's hard to believe."

THE REAL message of TV is that "you are a child in relation to the machine—passive, programmed, a sleepwalker," he said. "When you see that or rebel against that—once you are nauseated and frightened—a desire will come to grow up."

Freed hopes to foment a little "judicious rebellion" that will cause viewers to clamor for something more than the standard TV fare and seek satisfaction through quality of life—less crime and better air—instead of through buying more gadgets.

Unfortunately, "Mary" as a character isn't making much progress in her second season, Freed said. Her friends and family are having their own nervous breakdowns, but Mary seems to have adjusted to the insane world around here instead of growing.

In the first season's series, "they told her the way to get out of the asylum was to watch TV, to get along, go along," Freed said.

The outcome Freed would have liked to have seen was Mary escaping from the asylum, traveling across America and finding herself, finding her sanity, not adjustment.

— On Aug. 10, the Department of Building and Safety noted that Mrs. Olshane had not submitted a plan of action in regard to the building, and the next day revoked the Certificate of Occupancy.

— On Aug. 16, the Appeals Board "discussed" the Olshane-Pacific Coast Club case and decided to hear the case.

— On Sept. 27, Mrs. Olshane appeared before the Appeals Board as owner and indicated that while final plans were being prepared, plastering and painting would begin. She was given a 60-day extension of time to complete her plan of action.

— On Oct. 6, Mrs. Olshane was sent an "excessive hazard notice."

— The final item in the Building Department files is a notation that "it was determined that the structure must be demolished or repaired by Jan. 1, 1977."

That date has passed, as have other scheduled "hearings" by the Appeals Board.

The last date for a hearing, in December, was cancelled when Mrs. Olshane notified the board her husband was ill.

And because of her husband, Mrs. Olshane indicated in an interview, she may not make it to the hearing set for Monday.

"My husband has been dying for the past four months and I have to feed him three times a day ...," she said.

A LETTER from the Long Beach convalescent hospital where Olshane was committed by his wife in early 1976 indicated that he had no visitors from March 1 to May 25 at which time he — along with his bill — was released to the custody of his children.

Nurses who feed Olshane at Midtown Convalescent Hospital in Los Angeles, where he currently is a patient, said he has had only one visitor, his son.

"I never knew he had a wife," one nurse said. "If she says she has to come here to feed him three times a day, that's hard to believe."

Druggist Wolter, 81, dies

Services for Oscar H. Wolter, 81, a former councilman and a leader in the development of North Long Beach, will be held 11 a.m. Tuesday at the First Lutheran Church, 905 Atlantic Avenue.

Wolter, who died Friday at St. Mary Medical Center after a short illness, established the Wolter Pharmacy at South Street and Atlantic Avenue in the mid-1920s. It was one of the first businesses in North Long Beach.

HE WAS often referred to as the longest-tenured practicing pharmacist in Long Beach. He worked at his son's Medical Arts Pharmacy, 411 E. 10th St., until a few months ago.

He was elected to one four-year term on the City Council in 1930, and in 1935 he was appointed to the Civil Service Commission, serving as a commissioner for 12 years.

PORT BOARD SHOO-INS

Port Commissioner H.E. "Bud" Ridings is a former chamber president, and James Gray, the newest member of the board, is the current president of the chamber.

"THEY usually pick leaders in the business community," said Craig. He added that the job requires a business background because the harbor is, in fact, a large business. The harbor commissioners have to deal with a $270 million facility and a $100 million budget, he said.

writers, actors, critics and media specialists who will talk about TV in general and "Mary Hartman" in particular.

THE REAL message of TV is that "you are a child in relation to the machine—passive, programmed, a sleepwalker," he said. "When you see that or rebel against that—once you are nauseated and frightened—a desire will come to grow up."

Freed hopes to foment a little "judicious rebellion" that will cause viewers to clamor for something more than the standard TV fare and seek satisfaction through quality of life—less crime and better air—instead of through buying more gadgets. Unfortunately, "Mary" as a character isn't making much progress in her second season, Freed said. Her friends and family are having their own nervous breakdowns, but Mary seems to have adjusted to the insane world around here instead of growing.

In the first season's series, "they told her the way to get out of the asylum was to watch TV, to get along, go along," Freed said.

The outcome Freed would have liked to have seen was Mary escaping from the asylum, traveling across America "and from her adventures finding herself, finding her sanity, not adjustment."

Summary of Secret Witness cases, rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 69 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial.

Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness—that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST—either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jack Adamson, 49-year-seaman beaten to death with a tire iron during a street robbery on Anaheim Street near Flint Avenue in Wilmington at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and kidnap-robbery conviction, or $2,000 for the arrest and murder conviction, of persons responsible for the disappearance of Wilmington camper manufacturer Glenn Doughty, apparent victim of a robbery and kidnapping. Police checking Doughty's Fleet Aire agency at 1321 Alameda St. on Nov. 3, 1976, found the doors open and the safe standing open. Doughty's car, a 1976 Buick Regal with landau top, license 927-RCV, was missing.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the purse thief who attacked and knocked down Ruth Tournat, 78, of Long Beach, as she was walking on First Street at Atlantic Avenue at 7:20 p.m. May 14, 1976, causing injuries that resulted in her death on June 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Euland King, of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst, of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the

$2,000 reward in Compton slaying

Henry Quezada, 38, of Compton, was changing a flat tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on New Year's Eve when he was killed by a bullet fired into the back of his head.

Police said they have determined that a man passing on foot fired the shot, but have no suspects in the slaying.

Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Henry Quezada.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 between 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 6604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

How to be Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column.

How to be Secret Witness

Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

L.A. hearing Jan. 17 may air Hughes wills mystery

By WALLACE TURNER
New York Times Service

Did Howard Hughes sign a will in 1938? Was it lost? Do attorneys for his Summa Corp. have an unsigned copy supported by evidence that could be accepted to show this as Hughes' final wishes?

These are among questions which may be answered at a Los Angeles court hearing Jan. 17 as the "lost will" of 1938 supplants the somewhat tarnished "Mormon will" as the will on which court decisions are to be based out in the struggle for control of the Hughes estate.

The "Mormon will" has fallen under suspicion since the Nevada attorney general, Robert List, announced that he had started a criminal investigation of its origins because a thumbprint of Melvin Dummer, a beneficiary, was found on the envelope containing the will.

The "lost will" was only hinted at in court proceedings initiated by relatives and lawyers of Hughes last spring, soon after his death April 5 aboard an ambulance plane.

A Los Angeles County official has asserted to the probate court there that he believes the will exists and has urged the court to require that it be produced. A motion to produce the will is expected to be resisted by lawyers for Summa, the holding company through which Hughes handled almost everything he owned.

WHAT IS known about the lost will was summed up in a petition filed in Los Angeles probate court on Dec. 22 by Gordon W. Trehame, a deputy county counsel. His petition attacked the appointment by the probate court of Richard C. Gano Jr. of Anaheim, a Hughes cousin, as temporary administrator of the Hughes interests in this state instead of the Los Angeles public administrator.

"The will of Howard R. Hughes exists, and the special administrator (Gano) has constructive possession of it," Trehame said in his petition. "The will and a codicil to the will are in the actual possession of officials of Summa Corp. The particular persons who probably have actual possession of the will and codicil are Chester C. Davis (Summa's chief counsel) and Howard M. Jaffee."

Trehame asked that the probate court order Gano to produce "said will and codicil," to testify on the results of a search for a Hughes will and to testify as to "all knowledge he has concerning any will, proposed or purported or signed or unsigned, of Howard R. Hughes."

petition a declaration made under penalty of perjury by Michael McCarthy Gless, a Los Angeles lawyer who is co-executor of the estate of the late Neil S. McCarthy, who was a Hughes lawyer for many years.

The declaration sets out that Paul B. Winn, an officer and lawyer of Summa, had asked permission to search McCarthy's files for a Hughes will. Gless said he had been told by Winn that "an unsigned, typewritten copy of a formal will" had been found.

"Mr. Winn said that certain specific bequests were made, but the residue of the estate was bequeathed to medical science," Gless said under oath. There also was a codicil in Hughes' own hand deleting a beneficiary from the will, he said. He added that a locked safe used by McCarthy had been forced open and it had been found a copy of a transmittal letter to a Texas bank with directions on what to do with the signed copies of a Hughes will, the so-called "lost will."

GLESS' statement confirms with one made in a court petition by Gano last April. He said he had received evidence that a will had been made and that it had been mailed, along with a letter of instructions, to a Texas bank about March 3, 1938. The bank has disappeared through merger, Gano said, and the will cannot be found. He was asking permission, which was granted, to continue a national search for the lost will.

Trehame said in an interview that California probate law permits any person named as beneficiary or executor in a will to petition for "letters of administration with the will annexed." This is a legal term meaning that the holder would have authority in regard to administration of the estate.

Last April Gano filed a copy of the transmittal letter to the Texas bank and a copy of the registered-mail receipt, but he did not file any copy of any unsigned will such as that described by Gless.

A spokesman said Gano had no comment on questions about the "unsigned will."

Escaped cons thought to have new hostage

Associated Press

Two of the four recent fugitives from the Arizona State Prison registered at an Albuquerque, N.M., motel using identification belonging to a suspected hostage, authorities said.

Police reported Michael Clary, 26, and John Lamb, 41, also used the license number of a car belonging to Michael Stark, 21, of Tucson, Ariz., in registering Friday night. Stark is believed a hostage of the prisoners.

But the whereabouts of Stark and two inmates who escaped with Clary and Lamb, Paul Jorgenson, 30, and Richard Benfield, 28, was not known.

Inmate hangs himself in cell

VACAVILLE (AP) — A 32-year-old inmate hanged himself in his cell in the California Medical Facility, prison officials report.

James Steelman was found Thursday night hanging from a piece of sheet tied to a cell door half an hour after a guard had seen him alive and well, spokesman Thomas Charleston said Saturday.

Steelman was serving sentences for a second-degree murder in Tehachapi in January 1963 and an assault with a deadly weapon in Atascadero State Hospital in December 1975, Charleston said.

Summary of Secret Witness cases, rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 69 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial.

Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jack Adamson, 49-year-seaman beaten to death with a tire iron during a street robbery on Anaheim Street near Flint Avenue in Wilmington at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and kidnap-robbery conviction, or $2,000 for the arrest and murder conviction, of persons responsible for the disappearance of Wilmington camper manufacturer Glenn Doughty, apparent victim of a robbery and kidnapping. Police checking Doughty's Fleet Aire agency at 1321 Alameda St. on Nov. 3, 1976, found the doors open and the safe standing open. Doughty's car, a 1976

Buick Regal with landau top, license 927-RCV, was missing.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the purse thief who attacked and knocked down Ruth Tournat, 78, of Long Beach, as she was walking on First Street at Atlantic Avenue at 7:20 p.m. May 14, 1976, causing injuries that resulted in her death on June 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Euland King, of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst, of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith, of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5086 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arnette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

$2,000 reward in Compton slaying

Henry Quezada, 38, of Compton, was changing a flat tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on New Year's Eve when he was killed by a bullet fired into the back of his head.

Police said they have determined that a man passing on foot fired the shot, but have no suspects in the slaying.

Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Henry Quezada.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 between 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 6604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

L.A. hearing Jan. 17 may air Hughes wills mystery

By WALLACE TURNER
New York Times Service

Did Howard Hughes sign a will in 1938? Was it lost? Do attorneys for his Summa Corp. have an unsigned copy supported by evidence that could be accepted to show this as Hughes' final wishes?

These are among questions which may be answered at a Los Angeles court hearing Jan. 17 as the "lost will" of 1938 supplants the somewhat tarnished "Mormon will" as the anvil on which court decisions are to be pounded out in the struggle for control of the Hughes estate.

The "Mormon will" has fallen under suspicion since the Nevada attorney general, Robert List, announced that he had started a criminal investigation of its origins because a thumbprint of Melvin Dummer, a beneficiary, was found on the envelope containing the will.

The "lost will" was only hinted at in court proceedings initiated by relatives and lawyers of Hughes last spring, soon after his death April 5 aboard an ambulance plane.

A Los Angeles County official has asserted to the probate court there that he believes the will exists and has urged the court to require that it be produced. A motion to produce the will is expected to be resisted by lawyers for Summa, the holding company through which Hughes handled almost everything he owned.

WHAT IS known about the lost will was summed up in a petition filed in Los Angeles probate court on Dec. 22 by Gordon W. Trehanne, a deputy county counsel. His petition attacked the appointment by the probate court of Richard C. Gano Jr. of Anaheim, a Hughes cousin, as temporary administrator of the Hughes interests in this state instead of the Los Angeles public administrator.

The will of Howard R. Hughes exists, and the special administrator (Gano) has constructive possession of it," Trehanne said in his petition. "The will and a codicil to the will are in the actual possession of officials of Summa Corp. The particular persons who probably have actual possession of the will and codicil are Chester C. Davis (Summa's chief counsel) and Howard M. Jaffee."

Trehanne asked that the probate court order Gano to produce "said will and codicil," to testify on the results of a search for a Hughes will and to testify as to "all knowledge he has concerning any will, proposed or purported or signed or unsigned, of Howard R. Hughes."

IF SUPERIOR Court Judge Neil Lake, who presides in probate matters in Los Angeles, grants the petition at a hearing scheduled for Jan. 17, the effect will be to air in public all the quiet matters that up to now have been only rumors or authoritative "source reports" about Hughes wills.

"No reports concerning the search for a will of Howard Hughes have been made by any of the special or temporary administrators appointed in California, Texas or Nevada," Trehanne told Lake. "It is now time that there be disclosure of the results of that will search, and perhaps testimony concerning the details and methods of the search."

Meantime, lawyers representing Hughes' cousins have worked out formulas to divide what is left after inheritance taxes are paid, assuming that no will was left. Reports from inside Summa are that the plan is to try to generate enough cash each year to meet installment payments over the next 10 years on those taxes.

ONE SOURCE said the appraisal of the Hughes estate likely would be far below published estimates because the Summa management would argue taxes with the Internal Revenue Service.

If a will is produced, all those plans and relationships would be upset. It is virtually certain that no signed will exists, and the question remains whether an unsigned will can be made to stand up.

It is this matter that Trehanne's petition concerns. He attached to the petition a declaration made under penalty of perjury by Michael McCarthy Gless, a Los Angeles lawyer who is co-executor of the estate of the late Neil S. McCarthy, who was a Hughes lawyer for many years.

The declaration sets out that Paul B. Winn, an officer and lawyer of Summa, had asked permission to search McCarthy's files for a Hughes will. Gless said he had been told by Winn that "an unsigned, typewritten copy of a formal will" had been found.

"Mr. Winn said that certain specific bequests were made, but the residue of the estate was bequeathed to medical science," Gless said under oath. There also was a codicil in Hughes' own hand deleting a beneficiary from the will, he said. He added that a locked safe used by McCarthy had been forced open and in it had been found a copy of a transmittal letter to a Texas bank with directions on what to do with the signed copies of a Hughes will, the so-called "lost will."

Escaped cons thought to have new hostage

Associated Press

Two of the four recent fugitives from the Arizona State Prison registered at an Albuquerque, N.M., motel using identification belonging to a suspected hostage, authorities said.

Police reported Michael Clary, 26, and John Lamb, 41, also used the license number of a car belonging to Michael Stark, 21, of Tucson, Ariz., in registering Friday night. Stark is believed a hostage of the prisoners.

But the whereabouts of Stark and two inmates who escaped with Clary and Lamb, Paul Jorgenson, 30, and Richard Benfield, 28, was not known.

The FBI in Albuquerque has tentatively identified Clary and Lamb as the two men who Friday robbed a savings and loan in that city of an estimated $15,000.

The inmates escaped Wednesday night from the prison at Florence, Ariz., after overpowering two guards and taking a third hostage.

The search for the four fugitives shifted to the Tucson area Friday morning when the hostage guard, John Smith, 34, and a young Tucson couple, Peggy and Carl Goforth, notified police they had Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

Buyers prefer lavish houses to 'no frills'

NEW YORK — Homebuyers are rejecting "no-frills" units in preference for more lavish homes, apparently figuring that buying such houses is a good hedge against inflation, according to Business Week magazine.

"Ample mortgage money, lower and firming mortgage rates, and the conviction by many consumers that buying a home is a good investment despite, or even because of, rising house prices — all help explain 1976's improving (home industry) activity," Business Week added.

The magazine quoted William T. Leonard, executive director of the Associated Building Industry of Northern California, who said that San Francisco's boom in single-family construction "defies normal real estate economies."

HE SAID BUYERS in every price range have concluded that with prices expected to rise, sacrificing to buy a house is an inflation hedge. Louis P. Shassian, vice president of Levitt Homes of Chicago, added: "People are saying they want to buy now, at this price, while they can still afford it."

But performance in the "no-frills" segment of the market has been dismal. The no-frills house of early 1976, said Bob Smith, of Smith Homes in Cleveland, "didn't run out of steam. It never got off the ground." And Jerry Cohn, president of Atlanta's Cohn Communities Inc., said his no-frills house just did not work.

"We tried making the amenities optional and we found people want the frills." His present basic house, "modest in size but not stripped down," is doing well.

CONCLUDED Chicago's Shassian, "the era of stripped-down houses is finished."

Apart from the Northwest and Florida, and several other soft spots, the housing industry in 1976 had a better year than many anticipated, the magazine said. Overall housing starts are likely to come in at 1.5 million, compared with 1975's 29-year low of 1.2 million starts. More important, from September through November, housing starts zipped along at an average 1.78 million annual rate, the article added.

For 1977, experts see the year averaging out at around 1.8 million starts at best, just about where it is at present. This would make for a good year, but well behind the industry's goal of exceeding two million starts, as it did in the early 70s, the magazine said.

"THE KEY TO SUSTAINING the current level of starts — much less quickening it — lies in government subsidies, particularly programs aimed at stimulating the forever lagging multifamily sector," Business Week said. It noted that last September the upswing came mostly in multifamily starts that were responding to federal rent and mortgage subsidy programs. Moreover, the industry is counting on these aids again in 1977, the magazine said.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist of the National Association of Home Builders, has forecast a total of 1.83 million starts for 1977, with single-family up 15 per cent to 1.3 million starts, and multifamily up 32 per cent, to 487,000 starts.

Palisades homes in grand opening

Grand opening is in progress for the latest phase at The Palisades, master-planned townhome community at 1500 Palisades Drive, Pacific Palisades.

Sales have begun on 38 new two- and three-bedroom townhomes in eight plans. Prices will range from $77,000 to $110,000.

The sales office and furnished models are open daily from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Located two miles north of Sunset Boulevard, near the beach, The Palisades offers a prime location and the latest features in home design.

Recreational facilities will include two night-lighted tennis courts built to championship specifications, a large sun-and-fun area with heated swimming pool, jacuzzi hydrotherapy pool, and poolside gym with exercise equipment. Nearby are beaches and Santa Ynez Canyon Park, with hiking and nature trails into the mountains.

The townhomes have one- two- and three-story layouts. Each home has an attached, double garage with an automatic door opener with direct access to the home. Each home has a woodburning fireplace. One plan has two fireplaces. Some of the townhomes have built-in wetbars, and all have private master bedroom suites with dressing areas and bathrooms.

The homes also include tile roofs, concrete walkways, fully insulated exterior walls and ceilings, cable-TV hookups, private patios and/or balconies, electric door chimes, color co-ordinated interiors with wall-to-wall carpeting, acoustic ceilings, formal diningrooms, some on mezzanines overlooking the livingrooms, kitchens with built-in appliances, custom-finished cabinets, and floors of quality-sheet vinyl, as well as ceramic tile.

From the Santa Monica Freeway, take Pacific Coast Highway north to Sunset Boulevard and turn right. Go approximately a half-mile to Palisades Drive and turn left.

Real Estate News in Brief

Jerry Scarpa, president, and Mike Collins, vice president, have opened Pacific Management Corp. — specializing in management of single-family, apartment, commercial and medical projects — at 13851 Magnolia, Garden Grove. The firm already has managed and sold Jacaranda Medical Plaza for $1,050,000.

Monica White of Moneek Realty in Huntington Beach reports gross sales of more than $14 million in 1976 and looks forward to doubling that figure this year. A franchise of International Real Estate Network, Moneek has offices at 21182 Beach Blvd., residential and commercial; and 19171 Magnolia, property management and resales.

Felix Tulay of Long Beach has been accorded membership in the Real Estate Certificate Institute Division of the California Association of Realtors.

The Irvine Industrial Complex has opened a temporary sales office at 11450 Knott St., Garden Grove. Construction of the 215-acre, $86 million industrial park, on Knott north of the San Diego and original selling price, $9,095, shown in an enlargement of the original ad. In Westminster, the home is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Michael Oliver, who paid $33,000 for it last fall.

Shoppers, you're too late 3-bedroom home at $9,095?

"Two completely furnished model homes will open today at Long Beach Park, a new community of 141 three-bedroom quality-built homes being offered for a total price of less than $10,000, it was announced by the builders, Butler-Harbour Construction Co.

"Full price of the homes starts at $9,095. Total down payment, including all impounds, is $495 while monthly payments are $77.50, including taxes, insurance, principal and interest."

Too good to be true? Well, it wasn't — back in 1956 when Merrill Butler Jr. launched his first housing development. Now the head of Butler Housing Corp. and a national leader in the homebuilding industry, Butler recently celebrated his 20th anniversary as a builder by reading the above newspaper clipping and visiting the project.

On the southeast corner of Garden Grove Boulevard and Edwards Street, the development is in Westminster, but was in unincorporated Orange County when built.

On his 1976 visit to the tract, Butler was accompanied by his construction superintendent on that job, H. Douglas Hoon, now the firm's senior vice president.

"We were pleased to see that nearly all the homes are very well maintained, though some were nearly obscured by mature landscaping and others had been extensively remodeled by their owners," Butler observed. "Many looked about the way they did the day we finished them."

"We've always prided ourselves on quality construction. This development demonstrates how a well built tract home will stand up and what a great investment it can be. Today, these homes are selling for $33,000."

Headquartered in Irvine, near Orange County Airport, Butler Housing Corp. has a total of 11 projects under way or about to begin. All in California, the developments include 10 single-family projects with prices ranging from $33,750 to $175,000, plus a moderately priced townhome development.

What's Your Problem?

Caution advised before going into ownership of two homes

By DON CAMPBELL

It's the all-American, No. 1 dream: home ownership. But, if owning one home is the cat's meow that everyone says it is, then wouldn't the joys be doubled if you owned TWO homes?

No! Dear Mr. Campbell: My husband and I have had this lovely lot reserved for a vacation or retirement home for about 10 years. We are now seriously considering building on it, and need some advice.

I am 43 years old and my husband is 46 and self-employed. His income varies between $40,000 and $45,000 annually. We have been living in our present home for 13 years and owe about $24,000 with about 20 years left on its mortgage. It is worth about $50,000. Our cars are paid for.

The home we are planning to build will cost around $55,000. We have $39,000 in a savings account and $8,000 in his Keogh Plan. How much would be wise to use as a down-payment and how lengthy a mortgage would we take?

My husband is quite enthusiastic and says there will be income tax advantages in the interest and tax deductions. Your wise, objective views would be appreciated. Mrs. C. W., Phoenix, Ariz.

A. The only thing that confuses me here is the suggestion that you intend to keep BOTH houses. You said nothing about getting rid of your existing home as a means of financing this vacation/retirement home which, by implication, sounds as if it may not be geographically close enough to your husband's place of business for commuting purposes until you do retire.

If you ARE selling your current home, there's no real problem involved — simply use the equity in the home you are selling as the down payment on the new one. If you are talking about maintaining two homes, then the question is: how much of that $39,000 you have in savings should be applied as the down payment on the new home?

This is a case where you must work backwards: how much a month, in addition to your present mortgage, can you afford to pay on the second one? Fortunately, your husband's income is substantial and you should have no real sweat in doing this. If, for instance, you pay $20,000 down, leaving a mortgage of $35,000, the principal and interest (at 9 per cent for 20 years) will cost you about $315 a month. Taxes, insurance and maintenance must be figured separately.

Now, then, is this expense, plus the mortgage payments you must now make, in line with your income? It probably is, because the house you bought in 1963 probably carries a mortgage payment well under $300 a month.

One question: Why is your husband suddenly enthusiastic about the interest and tax deductions involved in buying a new home? Hasn't he ALWAYS taken them into account?

Dear Mr. Campbell: I own a complex of 14 apartments and recently rented to a young couple who immediately changed all the locks on the apartment. I have hinted that they should give me a duplicate key, but they seem to resent this. Am I being unreasonable? P. O., Hartford, Conn.

A. Not in my book, you're not. It is, after all, your property and the law is quite clear in giving you the right to have immediate access to all apartments you own for occasional inspection visits. Remind them of this and suggest that if they don't give you a duplicate, you will have THEIR locks changed — a daisy chain that could get pretty expensive.

TARBELL REALTORS NO. 1 IN CALIFORNIA

At the recent state-wide convention of the California Association of Realtors in San Francisco, Tarbell Realtors received the No. 1 award for excellence in Institutional Advertising. The Tarbell Company swept the advertising segment of the convention with an unprecedented 10 awards. Company President, Donald M. Tarbell and Executive Vice President, Robert L. Statts, were on hand to view one of the many winning entries. From left to right: Robert L. Statts, Donald M. Tarbell.

Buyers prefer lavish houses to 'no frills'

NEW YORK — Homebuyers are rejecting "no-frills" units in preference for more lavish homes, apparently figuring that buying such houses is a good hedge against inflation, according to Business Week magazine.

"Ample mortgage money, lower and firming mortgage rates, and the conviction by many consumers that buying a home is a good investment despite, or even because of, rising house prices — all help explain 1976's improving (home industry) activity," Business Week added.

The magazine quoted William T. Leonard, executive director of the Associated Building Industry of Northern California, who said that San Francisco's boom in single-family construction "defies normal real estate economies."

HE SAID BUYERS in every price range have concluded that with prices expected to rise, sacrificing to buy a house is an inflation hedge. Louis P. Shassian, vice president of Levitt Homes of Chicago, added: "People are saying they want to buy now, at this price, while they can still afford it."

But performance in the "no-frills" segment of the market has been dismal. The no-frills house of early 1976, said Bob Smitt, of Smitt Homes in Cleveland, "didn't run out of steam. It never got off the ground." And Jerry Cohn, president of Atlanta's Cohn Communities Inc., said his no-frills house just did not work.

"We tried making the amenities optional and we found people want the frills." His present basic house, "modest in size but not stripped down," is doing well.

CONCLUDED Chicago's Shassian, "the era of stripped-down houses is finished."

Apart from the Northwest and Florida, and several other soft spots, the housing industry in 1976 had a better year than many anticipated, the magazine said. Overall housing starts are likely to come in at 1.5 million, compared with 1975's 29-year low of 1.2 million starts. More important, from September through November, housing starts zipped along at an average 1.78 million annual rate, the article added.

For 1977, experts see the year averaging out at around 1.8 million starts at best, just about where it is at present. This would make for a good year, but well behind the industry's goal of exceeding two million starts, as it did in the early 70s, the magazine said.

"THE KEY TO SUSTAINING the current level of starts — much less quickening it — lies in government subsidies, particularly programs aimed at stimulating the forever lagging multifamily sector," Business Week said. It noted that last September the upswing came mostly in multifamily starts that were responding to federal rent and mortgage subsidy programs. Moreover, the industry is counting on these aids again in 1977, the magazine said.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist of the National Association of Home Builders, has forecast a total of 1.83 million starts for 1977, with single-family up 45 per cent to 1.3 million starts, and multifamily up 32 per cent, to 487,000 starts.

Palisades homes in grand opening

Grand opening is in progress for the latest phase at The Palisades, master-planned townhome community at 1500 Palisades Drive, Pacific Palisades.

Sales have begun on 38 new two- and three-bedroom townhomes in eight plans. Prices will range from $77,000 to $110,000.

The sales office and furnished models are open daily from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

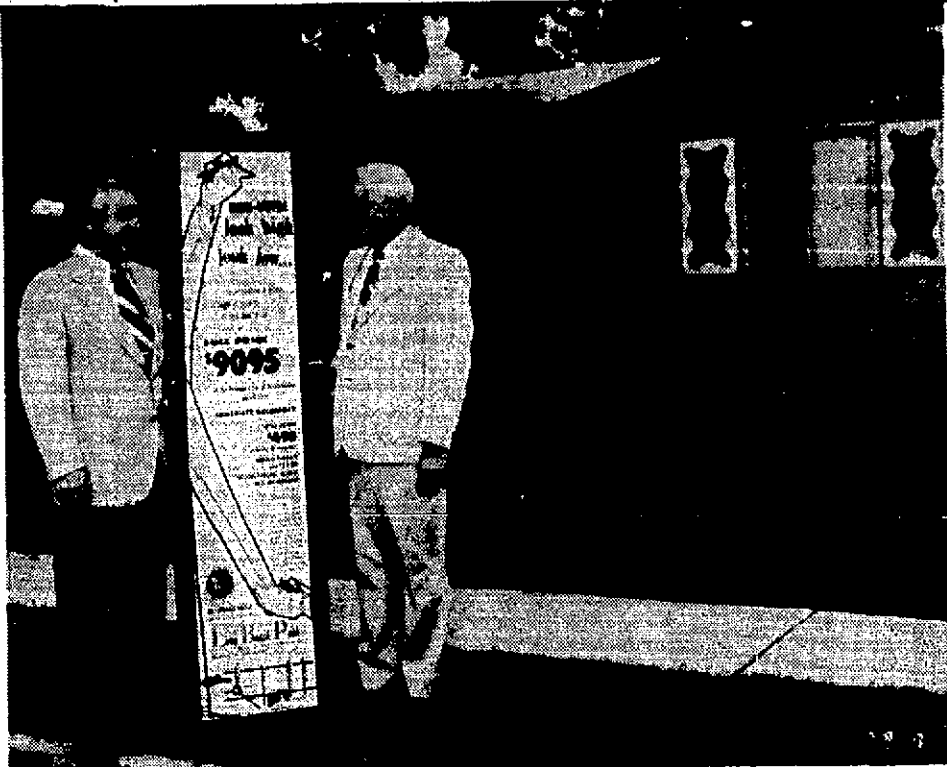

Located two miles north of Sunset Boulevard, near the beach, The Palisades offers a prime location and the latest features in home design.

Recreational facilities will include two night-lighted tennis courts built to championship specifications, a large sun-and-fun area with heated swimming pool, jacuzzi hydrotherapy pool, and poolside gym with exercise equipment. Nearby are beaches and Santa Ynez Canyon Park, with hiking and nature trails into the mountains.

The townhomes have one- two- and three-story layouts. Each home has an attached, double garage with an automatic door opener with direct access to the home. Each home has a woodburning fireplace. One plan has two fireplaces. Some of the townhomes have built-in wetbars, and all have private master bedroom suites with dressing areas and bathrooms.

The homes also include tile roofs, concrete walkways, fully insulated exterior walls and ceilings, cable-TV hookups, private patios and/or balconies, electric door chimes, color co-ordinated interiors with wall-to-wall carpeting, acoustic ceilings, formal dining rooms, some on mezzanines overlooking the living rooms, kitchens with built-in appliances, custom-finished cabinets, and floors of quality-sheet vinyl, as well as ceramic tile.

original selling price, $9,095, shown in an enlargement of the original ad. In Westminster, the home is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Michael Oliver, who paid $33,000 for it last fall.

Shoppers, you're too late 3-bedroom home at $9,095?

"Two completely furnished model homes will open today at Long Beach Park, a new community of 141 three-bedroom quality-built homes being offered for a total price of less than $10,000, it was announced by the builders, Butler-Harbour Construction Co.

"Full price of the homes starts at $9,095. Total down payment, including all impounds, is $495 while monthly payments are $77.50, including taxes, insurance, principal and interest."

Too good to be true? Well, it wasn't — back in 1956 when Merrill Butler Jr. launched his first housing development. Now the head of Butler Housing Corp. and a national leader in the homebuilding industry, Butler recently celebrated his 20th anniversary as a builder by reading the above newspaper clipping and visiting the project.

On the southeast corner of Garden Grove Boulevard and Edwards Street, the development is in Westminster, but was in unincorporated Orange County when built.

On his 1976 visit to the tract, Butler was accompanied by his construction superintendent on that job, H. Douglas Hoon, now the firm's senior vice president.

"We were pleased to see that nearly all the homes are very well maintained, though some were nearly obscured by mature landscaping and others had been extensively remodeled by their owners," Butler observed. "Many looked about the way they did the day we finished them."

"We've always prided ourselves on quality construction. This development demonstrates how a well built tract home will stand up and what a great investment it can be. Today, these homes are selling for $33,000."

Headquartered in Irvine, near Orange County Airport, Butler Housing Corp. has a total of 11 projects under way or about to begin. All in California, the developments include 10 single-family projects with prices ranging from $33,750 to $175,000, plus a moderately priced townhome development.

What's Your Problem?

Caution advised before going into ownership of two homes

By DON CAMPBELL

It's the all-American, No. 1 dream: home ownership. But, if owning one home is the cat's meow that everyone says it is, then wouldn't the joys be doubled if you owned TWO homes?

No!
Dear Mr. Campbell:
My husband and I have had this lovely lot reserved for a vacation or retirement home for about 10 years. We are now seriously considering building on it, and need some advice.

I am 43 years old and my husband is 46 and self-employed. His income varies between $40,000 and $45,000 annually. We have been living in our present home for 13 years and owe about $24,000 with about 20 years left on its mortgage. It is worth about $50,000. Our cars are paid for.

The home we are planning to build will cost around $55,000. We have $39,000 in a savings account and $8,000 in his Keogh Plan. How much would be wise to use as a down-payment and how lengthy a mortgage would we take?

My husband is quite enthusiastic and says there will be income tax advantages in the interest and tax deductions. Your wise, objective views would be appreciated. Mrs. C. W., Phoenix, Ariz.

A. The only thing that confuses me here is the suggestion that you intend to keep BOTH houses. You said nothing about getting rid of your existing home as a means of financing this vacation/retirement home which, by implication, sounds as if it may not be geographically close enough to your husband's place of business for commuting purposes until you do retire.

If you ARE selling your current home, there's no real problem involved — simply use the equity in the home you are selling as the down payment on the new one. If you are talking about maintaining two homes, then the question is: how much of that $39,000 you have in savings should be applied as the down payment on the new home?

This is a case where you must work backwards: how much a month, in addition to your present mortgage, can you afford to pay on the second one? Fortunately, your husband's income is substantial and you should have no real sweat in doing this. If, for instance, you pay $20,000 down, leaving a mortgage of $35,000, the principal and interest (at 9 per cent for 20 years) will cost you about $315 a month. Taxes, insurance and maintenance must be figured separately.

Now, then, is this expense, plus the mortgage payments you must now make, in line with your income? It probably is, because the house you bought in 1963 probably carries a mortgage payment well under $300 a month.

One question: Why is your husband suddenly enthusiastic about the interest and tax deductions involved in buying a new home? Hasn't he ALWAYS taken them into account?

Dear Mr. Campbell:
I own a complex of 14 apartments and recently rented to a young couple who immediately changed all the locks on the apartment. I have hinted that they should give me a duplicate key, but they seem to resent this. Am I being unreasonable? P. O., Hartford, Conn.

A. Not in my book, you're not. It is, after all, your property and the law is quite clear in giving you the right to have immediate access to all apartments you own for occasional inspection visits. Remind them of this and suggest that if they don't give you a duplicate, you will have THEIR locks changed — a daisy chain that could get pretty expensive.

Brown's solar shower

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown won't have to move to the new mansion to take a solar-heated shower after all.

Such a system will be installed in his $275-a-month apartment across the street from the Capitol, says Sim Van der Ryn, state architect.

Van der Ryn is having a number of systems installed for solar-heated water at state-owned apartment buildings, and he says one will eventually be put in where Brown lives.

"The governor's hot water system needs repair anyway. It's leaking. It's on its last legs," said Scott Matthews, a Van der Ryn aide.

Judge called for jury duty; plans to serve

SACRAMENTO (AP)— Superior Court Judge Fred Marler has been summoned for jury duty, and he says he's willing to serve.

A state law removed a long list of automatic exclusions from jury duty, including jurists.

"I can't claim a hardship any more than anyone else," Marler said. He says he will arrive Monday morning as a prospective jury member at the Sacramento County Courthouse.

Marler said, however, that he anticipated that he would be excused because his absence from the bench would aggravate the backlog of cases in the courthouse.

But he indicated he would not ask for an exemption. "Most judges and lawyers want to serve on a jury," he added.

Test tube family in home of tomorrow

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

He watched the blinking lights on the solar function panel with saucer-eyed fascination. Though Todd is only 4 years old, he knew just what was happening.

The lights told him the solar collector tubes were switched on. He spun around and clutched my arm.

"Look, daddy!" he shouted. "The sun is working."

"The sun is working!"

And indeed it is in our experimental solar-heated home in Mission Viejo. We're a "test tube" family participating as resident experts in the Southland's most futuristic solar engineering project.

It was by sheer coincidence that I heard Mission Viejo was looking for a young family to occupy one of two solar heated homes for a year.

I had relocated just weeks before in the Southland from Sacramento, and was scrambling around madly for a home. Meanwhile, my wife Dorothyann and son Todd were staying at her folk's home in Chico.

Like other young couples, we needed a home but just couldn't afford the punishing interest rates and immediate cash requirements.

When this opportunity presented itself, I phoned Dorothyann in Chico, asked her to trust me sight unseen and took it without hesitation. There was just one condition.

Of all the things to worry about, I was most concerned about whether the home was fit to live in. Could something explode, leak, catch fire? One of the architects commented, "Funny, you're the only person who has ever asked," and patiently put my fears to rest.

Solar energy has indeed changed our lifestyle, and given us time to enjoy the leisure time we've earned.

Now, after only two months of push-button living, Dorothyann says, "I certainly used to waste a lot of time and energy cooking and doing housework!"

WE'VE LEARNED that a solar-heated home such as ours, equipped with energy-efficient appliances, one day will free young families from tedious household tasks and conserve dwindling natural resources.

For $200 a month, plus gas and electricity (we haven't received our first bills yet), we live in one of two adjacent "Minimum Energy Dwellings," homes intended to reduce energy consumption at least 50 per cent by using available energy-saving building techniques and materials. We will be here at least a year.

The MED project is funded by the Mission Viejo Co., Southern California Gas Co., and federal Energy Research and Development Administration. It is estimated that the value of the two prototype models is $700,000.

Both homes at the base of the Santa Ana Mountains are Mission Viejo's standard "Cordova" model, an 1,150-square foot, three-bedroom, two-bath, single-story model with a two-car garage that sells for about $50,000.

We occupy one of the homes as an "average" family of three — working father, non-employed mother, and pre-school son. Our energy consumption is monitored by computers in the unoccupied demonstration model next door.

Though I had described the MED house in detail to Dorothyann, she says she just couldn't picture it.

"I didn't know what to expect, really. Talk about future shock! Overnight I was whisked from an all-wood farm house in Chico, built board by board 40 years ago by my father, into the home of tomorrow in Orange County."

WHILE THE SOLAR plant that automatically heats our water and adjusts our temperature is important, Mission Viejo and Gas Co. engineers say they've already learned one important lesson about home construction:

Our most dramatic savings in energy, and the real secret of being comfortable, doesn't depend on the solar plant at all.

It's in how the home is constructed.

The solar process itself is relatively simple. The sun heats water passing through vacuum collectors on the roof. Air is blown over the water to pick up heat and distribute it throughout the house. Excess hot water is stored in a 500-gallon tank buried under the garage.

The energy-collecting process should recycle itself daily when the sun comes out but when it doesn't, there's a backup heating system that, so far, we haven't had to use.

I guess we've all had visions of a solar power plant resembling some Rube Goldberg contraption of

NEW YORK — Robert D., who is in his late 50s, is now engaged primarily in writing a cookbook for businessmen. A few years ago when he lost his executive job in a publishing house, he decided to stay at home and write.

He was able to do this, rather than face the frequent humiliations of job-hunting in late middle age, because his wife holds a well-paying job in one of the city's top law firms.

"Why should he work, when we don't really need the money?" she asks.

Gary R., a political scientist, chooses to do policy writing on social issues for a nonprofit research organization, at a decidedly lower salary than he could command even in academe. He can afford to do this, even when he and his family live in costly New York City, because his wife Joan, a chemist, earns almost twice as much as he. Asked if this bothers him, he replies, "Are you kidding?"

What happens to men as more and more women assume a greater share of the family's financial responsibilities? Is it largely a plus, as the two examples above would imply, or are unsettling developments in store for men as the "husband-breadwinner and wife-homemaker" family model continues to break down?

ACCORDING to the Department of Labor, that stereotype is valid for only 34 out of 100 husband-wife families today, compared with 56 out of 100 a quarter of a century ago. But the shift is only beginning to be studied, although the changes are likely to be revolutionary.

Isabel V. Sawhill, an economist with the Urban Institute, a policy research organization in Washington, argues that the increased financial power of women has already contributed to rising divorce rates — currently the highest in American history and in the industrial world — for women no longer need marriage for economic survival. Within marriage she sees women's bargaining power and authority rising.

Economists have also observed recent changes in the work habits of men with working wives.

As Sar Levitan, of George Washington University's Center for Social Policy Studies, put it in a recent conversation, "Males are starting to behave more like women" in their patterns of work.

For example, men with working wives are less likely than other men to accept frequent job transfers from city to city — exactly like women who decline transfers because of their husbands' jobs.

In addition, men, as women traditionally did, are beginning to prefer shorter work hours to higher salaries. Levitan, who has studied the phenomenon, believes it is a direct result of two-paycheck families. Men are in a financial position to opt for more leisure, and they need more time to handle household tasks that were previously relegated to women.

THIS CHANGED financial condition is, of course, the easiest measure of the impact of working women. Last year, the median income of families with wives in the labor force was $17,237, or 35 per cent higher than the income of families with non-working wives. In 1973 wives were responsible for 30 per cent or more of the income in 43 per cent of American families.

During the recession, that additional income was particularly important. In families where only the husband worked, real purchasing power, after inflation, declined 3.1 per cent from 1973 to 1974, or 2.3 times the decline for families in which the other members of the family worked.

In addition, two women economists, Cynthia B.

Lloyd of Barnard College and Beth Niemi of Rutgers University, reported evidence during the recession, of men moving in and out of the labor market more frequently than in the past. Traditionally most men stayed in the labor force from their first job until retirement, while women moved often in and out of the job market.

But during the 1975 slowdown, the two economists estimate, three-quarters of the workers who stopped trying to find a job were men aged 24 to 59. Then, as the economy picked up last spring and summer, they came flooding back into the job market.

Although the reasons for this behavior have yet to be established, the economists argue that men may be able to wait for an improved job climate because their wives are supporting them. As evidence, they note that fewer women left the job market in the last recession than ever before.

The partial dependence of men on women's earnings may be one reason that even during the worst recession since the 1930s there has been little perceptible backlash against women's job gains. Another probable reason is that most women still work in such traditionally "female" jobs as teaching, nursing and clerical work.

Glad you asked that!

SINGERS Elvis Presley, 45, left above, and Elton John, 29 — latter had unkind remarks about former's resumption of his career.

Q: Didn't Elton John recently take a rap at Elvis Presley? What did he say? — Florence Regina, Brooklyn.

A: Referring to his circus-like concert at Madison Square Garden, Elton said: "It could be my last gig forever. I'm not definitely retiring but I want to put my energies elsewhere for a while. . . I always do things by instinct," he told Rolling Stone, "and I just know it's time to cool it." Then the 29-year-old Elton added: "Who wants to be a 45-year-old entertainer in Las Vegas like Elvis?!"

Q: Why don't we see my favorite actress, Gina Lollabrigida, in any new movies? Hasn't she grown old gracefully? — P. O. B., Cincinnati.

A: Gina isn't old, she's only 49. And still a beauty. But she's found she enjoys being behind a camera more these days than emoting in front of one. She avoids being recognized when shooting pictures, even in crowded places by trying to look homely, wearing wigs, disreputable jeans and shawls, adding lines with an eyebrow pencil and bulges to her face by stuffing her cheeks.

Q: Is it true Jimmy Durante holds the record for smashing pianos? — T. Denton, Raleigh, N.C.

A: "No," chuckles the Schnoz, "that's an optikral delusion. I never smashed pianos — I just had stagehands put dem together loosely so the audience would think I did it." The first record for smashing an upright piano and passing the entire wreck, piece-by-piece, through a 9-inch ring was clocked at 14 minutes and 3 seconds. It was set by two students at the Derby College of Technology in the Thrifty Fifties.

This inspired a worldwide epidemic of piano smashings. The latest record we have heard for smashing a piano in the quickest time and passing it through a 9-inch ring was set in 1968 by six men representing Ireland, who did it in 2 minutes and 26 seconds.

Q: There was an earlier "Archie" who was a big star on radio long before Archie Bunker became famous. Who was he? And where is he today? — Mrs. J. Tomar, Staten Island, N.Y.

A: Ed Gardner (no kin) is deceased. He was born above a butcher shop in Astoria, N.Y., in 1905, and ended up as a highly paid "bartender" named Archie in "Duffy's Tavern." Paramount paid Ed the astronomical salary (for those days) of $150,000 for making his first movie.

Q: Did the great Maurice Chevalier ever get to write his autobiography? — Jody Schell, Long Beach.

A: Maurice wrote nine such memoirs — almost as many as he had "farewell appearances." Without repeating any of his memorable material.

Q: I see where the late President Franklin Roosevelt's eldest son, Jimmy, has written a book of memories to set the record straight about other books and articles about his parents. What was there left for Jimmy to write about? — L.N.O., Fresno, Calif.

A: Many press-stopping recollections. For instance, Jim (in "My Parents: A Differing View") quotes his father as revealing in a private conversation: "We have something that will end our war with Japan before any invasion takes place. It is something we will use if we have to, something we certainly will use before you or any of our sons die in an invasion of Japan."

Q: Did Johnny Carson ever collect on the multi-million-dollar lawsuit he filed against an exercise board manufacturer? — N.L., Pasadena, Calif.

A: Johnny (who claimed he received painful head, neck, back and shoulder injuries when the slantboard collapsed with him on it) recently settled out of court for a lesser but undisclosed sum.

Q: What's the "mysterious illness" the Shah of Iran is suffering from? — Minerva D., Las Vegas, Nev.

A: Reliable sources indicate it's a milder form of the ailment responsible for Aristotle Onassis' death — myasthenia gravis (a debilitating disease that attacks the muscular system).

THE ROOSEVELT family in 1916 — FDR, eldest son Jimmy, standing; Franklin Jr., in middle, and baby John on Eleanor's lap. James Roosevelt, right, is latest of offspring to write about his famous parents.

Filmdom had bumper crop of bummers in '76

It's that time again. The end of an old year and the beginning of a new one.

A time when sane folks make lists of resolutions they don't intend to keep and critics make lists of what went right and wrong — knowing they can do nothing about either. Approximately 280 movies opened in New York in 1976, and I found it an impossible task to find 10 good ones.

Most of the year's batch fell into the "So what?" category — "Buffalo Bill and the Indians," "Silver Streak," "Bad News Bears," "Bound For Glory," "Stay Hungry" and "The Last Tycoon," being among the more notable titles that spring to mind. Here, then, is a kind of list, mostly ambivalent, of what went on in a strongly forgettable year:

THE BEST MOVIES OF 1976

1. "All The President's Men." Watergate, re-created resourcefully and with all the elements of both a literary thriller and a rousing tribute to the adventure of journalism.

Alan Pakula's masterful direction pieced together an almost insurmountable problem with details and how to place them, and Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman played Woodward and Bernstein with honesty, polish and conviction. A memorable film, historic and powerful.

2. "Network." Paddy Chayefsky's magnificent screenplay ripped away the hypocritical protective veneer of TV, revealing the most powerful and corrupt medium that ever controlled our lives for what it

A modern allegory that blended fantasy and realism to make a moral point about mankind and where it's heading, directed with energy and style by the indefatigable Sidney Lumet, and performed with mad-dog fury by William Holden, Faye Dunaway, Peter Finch and others. A film of awesome courage that dared to deal with ideas instead of old-fashioned formulas.

3. "Seven Beauties." Lina Wertmüller's richly textured study of the self-serving, immoral immaturity of Italian men burst with irony and paradox on many levels. Giancarlo Giannini ravenously attacked his role like a piece of osso bucco and chewed it to the bone, surviving the Nazis and a bevy of women like hangnails, surviving at all costs.

4. "VOYAGE of the Damned." An all-star cast of seasoned artists instead of movie mannequins turned this shockingly true story of 937 Jewish-German refugees floating in the Atlantic on the eve of World War II into a tapestry of heart-piercing humanity. Faded critics who sneer at anything genuinely touching dismissed it, but nobody with a soul left it unmoved.

5. "Obsession." A New Orleans businessman (Cliff Robertson), haunted by the death of his wife and disappearance of his daughter, meets a ghost (Genevieve Bujold) in Florence who might be one or the other. Brian De Palma's intensely lyrical yet chillingly suspenseful direction turned this pulpy dime-store fiction into a deeply hypnotic cinematic experience.

6. "Small Change." Francois Truffaut's charming, insightful mirror of the world of children, proving that they're tough, canny little survivors who land on their feet when life knocks them down, just like cats. Endearing.

7. "The Front." Martin Ritt's blistering personal memoir of the McCarthy witch hunts, with an arresting performance of surprising depth by Woody Allen as an illiterate "front" for blacklisted writers who grew up fast when the finger pointed at him. Here was a subject the movies have always cowardly avoided, made by men who lived through it, reminding us it could happen again.

8. "Marathon Man." The dog-eared victim plot (innocent man pursued by evil forces for reasons unknown to him) polished to a shine with furious intensity by director John Schlesinger, proving the overworked action-adventure genre can be an art form when it's recycled by artists instead of hacks.

Laurence Olivier, as a Nazi torturer with a particular fondness for dentistry, was artfully sinister and Dustin Hoffman, as a graduate student terrorized to the brink of insanity, fused the hair-raising ambience with just the right soupcon of dazed reality.

9. With reservations, I'm lumping together the residue: "Robin and Marian," simply because it returned Audrey Hepburn to the screen and she can do no wrong; "Rocky" because dopey and flawed as it was, it only cost $800,000 and gave audiences something, and someone (a meathead with a heart of gold, played by Sylvester Stallone) to root for.

THE WORST MOVIES OF 1976

1. "A Star Is Born." Stupid, cacophonous and unnecessary rock and roll remake of the old potboiler that drowns in a lot of noise and body odor. Barbra Streisand looked and sounded ridiculous trying to be Grace Slick, and Kris Kristofferson looked like the Werewolf of London stoned on cocaine and sounded like a dying buffalo.

Her clothes looked designed by Lawrence of Poland, her hair looked fried in possum fat, the music was execrable, the dialogue sounded like it had been rejected by "The Gong Show." A total disaster, about as contemporary as a 1965 student riot.

2. "The Bluebird." $15 million in rubles, wasted on a plastic puff that should have stayed behind the Iron Curtain. Too boring for children and too moronic for adults. Elizabeth Taylor got upstaged by 93 pigeons in blue paint who dumped on the floor.

of best movies of 1976. Barbra Streisand and Kris Kristofferson are pictured at right in scene from film, "A Star Is Born," which heads up the worst movies of 1976.

3. "The Missouri Breaks." An idiotic western that proved Marlon Brando is not only too big for his britches, but for his petticoats as well. A sprawling, senile bore with Brando — overpaid and overweight — rampaging through the cactus in drag, mumbling incoherently in a series of comically unexplained accents, before Jack Nicholson, as a sensitive rustler who wants to grow cabbages, mercifully slashed his throat.

4. "CARRIE." Nauseating slobber pretending to be a horror film, about a mentally retarded girl with an insanely religious-fanatic mother.

5. "Gable and Lombard." Another grave-robbing act of Hollywood self-loathing, this screeching, cornball monstrosity was like a lifetime of Louella Parsons columns strung together on film in a subliminal swirl of martini-soaked gossip and chaos.

6. "Midway." War in the Pacific, with movie stars in every uniform sucking in their pot bellies and overacting like crazy to camouflage an embarrassing script that sounded like a Navy-Air Force training manual.

The Japanese were like villains from an old Charlie Chan flick, babbling revenge while passing around an 8 by 10 glossy of Robert Mitchum. To make matters worst, it was in "sensurround," that irritating gimmick that spills your popcorn while puncturing your eardrums.

7. "HARRY AND Walter Go To New York." Elliot Gould and James Caan, rolling their eyes, screaming their heads off, stubbing their toes, walking into each other and the set, and trying to do a weak imitation of at least two of the Three Stooges. About as funny as a case of botulism.

8. "Lipstick." Rape for fun and profit, with miscast model Margaux Hemingway talking through her teeth, spraying the rapist and the camera with spit. This is a serious subject, but it's treated here as though it were being covered by Women's Wear Daily.

9. "A Matter of Time." Ingrid Bergman, as a faded femme fatale, and Liza Minnelli, as the chambermaid in a Rome hotel who imitates her. Hopeless tarrago of amateurish writing, hammy acting, incompetent direction by the once great Vincente Minnelli, and photography the color of dirty saddle oxtords.

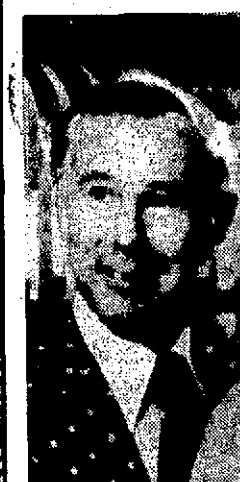

Glad you asked that!

Q: Why don't we see my favorite actress, Gina Lollabrigida, in any new movies? Hasn't she grown old gracefully? — P. O. B., Cincinnati.

A: Gina isn't old, she's only 49. And still a beauty. But she's found she enjoys being behind a camera more these days than emoting in front of one. She avoids being recognized when shooting pictures, even in crowded places by trying to look homely, wearing wigs, disreputable jeans and shawls, adding lines with an eyebrow pencil and bulges to her face by stuffing her cheeks.

Q: Is it true Jimmy Durante holds the record for smashing pianos? — T. Denton, Raleigh, N.C.

A: "No," chuckles the Schnoz, "that's an optical delusion. I never smashed pianos — I just had stagehands put dem together loosely so the audience would think I did it." The first record for smashing an upright piano and passing the entire wreck, piece-by-piece, through a 9-inch ring was clocked at 14 minutes and 3 seconds. It was set by two students at the Derby College of Technology in the Thrifty Fifties.

This inspired a worldwide epidemic of piano smashings. The latest record we have heard for smashing a piano in the quickest time and passing it through a 9-inch ring was set in 1968 by six men representing Ireland, who did it in 2 minutes and 26 seconds.

Q: There was an earlier "Archie" who was a big star on radio long before Archie Bunker became famous. Who was he? And where is he today? — Mrs. J. Tomar, Staten Island, N.Y.

A: Ed Gardner (no kin) is deceased. He was born above a butcher shop in Astoria, N.Y., in 1905, and ended up as a highly paid "bartender" named Archie in "Duffy's Tavern." Paramount paid Ed the astronomical salary (for those days) of $150,000 for making his first movie.

Q: Did the great Maurice Chevalier ever get to write his autobiography? — Jody Schell, Long Beach.

A: Maurice wrote nine such memoirs — almost as many as he had "farewell appearances." Without repeating any of his memorable material.

Q: I see where the late President Franklin Roosevelt's eldest son, Jimmy, has written a book of memories to set the record straight about other books and articles about his parents. What was there left for Jimmy to write about? — L.N.O., Fresno, Calif.

A: Many press-stopping recollections. For instance, Jim (in "My Parents: A Differing View") quotes his father as revealing in a private conversation: "We have something that will end our war with Japan before any invasion takes place. It is something we will use if we have to, something we certainly will use before you or any of our sons die in an invasion of Japan."

Q: Did Johnny Carson ever collect on the multi-million-dollar lawsuit he filed against an exercise board manufacturer? — N.L., Pasadena, Calif.

A: Johnny (who claimed he received painful head, neck, back and shoulder injuries when the slantboard collapsed with him on it) recently settled out of court for a lesser but undisclosed sum.

Q: What's the "mysterious illness" the Shah of Iran is suffering from? — Minerva D., Las Vegas, Nev.

A: Reliable sources indicate it's a milder form of the ailment responsible for Aristotle Onassis' death — myasthenia gravis (a debilitating disease that attacks the muscular system).

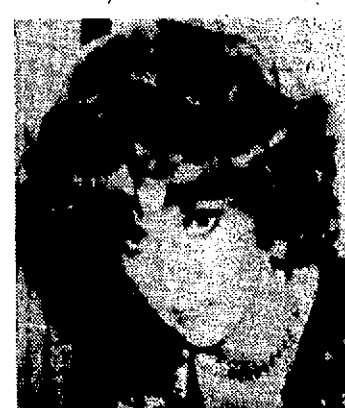

THE ROOSEVELT family in 1916 — FDR, eldest son Jimmy, standing; Franklin Jr., in middle, and baby John on Eleanor's lap. James Roosevelt, right, is latest of offspring to write about his famous parents.

Filmdom had bumper crop of bummers in '76

It's that time again. The end of an old year and the beginning of a new one.

A time when sane folks make lists of resolutions they don't intend to keep and critics make lists of what went right and wrong — knowing they can do nothing about either. Approximately 280 movies opened in New York in 1976, and I found it an impossible task to find 10 good ones.

Most of the year's batch fell into the "So what?" category — "Buffalo Bill and the Indians," "Silver Streak," "Bad News Bears," "Bound For Glory," "Stay Hungry" and "The Last Tycoon," being among the more notable titles that spring to mind. Here, then, is a kind of list, mostly ambivalent, of what went on in a strongly forgettable year:

THE BEST MOVIES OF 1976

1. "All The President's Men." Watergate, re-created resourcefully and with all the elements of both a literary thriller and a rousing tribute to the adventure of journalism.

Alan Pakula's masterful direction pieced together an almost insurmountable problem with details and how to place them, and Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman played Woodward and Bernstein with honesty, polish and conviction. A memorable film, historic and powerful.

2. "Network." Paddy Chayefsky's magnificent screenplay ripped away the hypocritical protective veneer of TV, revealing the most powerful and corrupt medium that ever controlled our lives for what it

A modern allegory that blended fantasy and realism to make a moral point about mankind and where it's heading, directed with energy and style by the indefatigable Sidney Lumet, and performed with mad-dog fury by William Holden, Faye Dunaway, Peter Finch and others. A film of awesome courage that dared to deal with ideas instead of old-fashioned formulas.

3. "Seven Beauties." Lina Wertmuller's richly textured study of the self-serving, immoral immaturity of Italian men burst with irony and paradox on many levels. Giancarlo Giannini ravenously attacked his role like a piece of osso bucco and chewed it to the bone, surviving the Nazis and a bevy of women like hangnails, surviving at all costs.

4. "VOYAGE of the Damned." An all-star cast of seasoned artists instead of movie mannequins turned this shockingly true story of 937 Jewish-German refugees floating in the Atlantic on the eve of World War II into a tapestry of heart-piercing humanity. Jaded critics who sneer at anything genuinely touching dismissed it, but nobody with a soul left it unmoved.

5. "Obsession." A New Orleans businessman (Cliff Robertson), haunted by the death of his wife and disappearance of his daughter, meets a ghost (Genevieve Bujold) in Florence who might be one or the other. Brian De Palma's intensely lyrical yet chillingly suspenseful direction turned this pulpy dime-store fiction into a deeply hypnotic cinematic experience.

6. "Small Change." François Truffaut's charming, insightful mirror of the world of children, proving that they're tough, canny little survivors who land on their feet when life knocks them down, just like cats. Endearing.

7. "The Front." Martin Ritt's blistering personal memoir of the McCarthy witch hunts, with an arresting performance of surprising depth by Woody Allen as an illiterate "front" for blacklisted writers who grew up fast when the finger pointed at him. Here was a subject the movies have always cowardly avoided, made by men who lived through it, reminding us it could happen again.

8. "Marathon Man." The dog-eared victim plot (innocent man pursued by evil forces for reasons unknown to him) polished to a shine with furious intensity by director John Schlesinger, proving the overworked action-adventure genre can be an art form when it's recycled by artists instead of hacks.

Laurence Olivier, as a Nazi torturer with a particular fondness for dentistry, was artfully sinister and Dustin Hoffman, as a graduate student terrorized to the brink of insanity, fused the hair-raising ambience with just the right soupçon of dazed reality.

9. With reservations, I'm lumping together the residue: "Robin and Marian," simply because it returned Audrey Hepburn to the screen and she can do no wrong; "Rocky" because dopey and flawed as it was, it only cost $800,000 and gave audiences something and someone (a meathead with a heart of gold, played by Sylvester Stallone) to root for.

THE WORST MOVIES OF 1976

1. "A Star is Born." Stupid, cacophonous and unnecessary rock and roll remake of the old potboiler that drowns in a lot of noise and body odor. Barbra Streisand looked and sounded ridiculous trying to be Grace Slick, and Kris Kristofferson looked like the Werewolf of London stoned on cocaine and sounded like a dying buffalo.

Her clothes looked designed by Lawrence of Poland, her hair looked fried in possum fat, the music was execrable, the dialogue sounded like it had been rejected by "The Gong Show." A total disaster, about as contemporary as a 1965 student riot.

2. "The Bluebird." $15 million in rubles, wasted on a plastic puff that should have stayed behind the Iron Curtain. Too boring for children and too moronic for adults. Elizabeth Taylor got upstaged by 93 pigeons in blue paint who dumped on the floor.

DUSTIN HOFFMAN as Carl Bernstein and ROBERT REDFORD as Bob Woodward in scene from movie, "All The President's Men," left, which topped Rex Reed's list of best movies of 1976. Barbra Streisand and Kris Kristofferson are pictured at right in scene from film, "A Star Is Born," which heads up the worst movies of 1976.

3. "The Missouri Breaks." An idiotic western that proved Marlon Brando is not only too big for his britches, but for his petticoats as well. A sprawling, senile bore with Brando — overpaid and overweight — rampaging through the cactus in drag, mumbling incoherently in a series of comically unexplained accents, before Jack Nicholson, as a sensitive rustler who wants to grow cabbages, mercifully slashed his throat.

4. "CARRIE." Nauseating slobber pretending to be a horror film, about a mentally retarded girl with an insanely religious-fanatic mother.

5. "Gable and Lombard." Another grave-robbing act of Hollywood self-loathing, this screeching, cornball monstrosity was like a lifetime of Louella Parsons columns strung together on film in a submental swirl of martini-soaked gossip and chaos.

6. "Midway." War in the Pacific, with movie stars in every uniform sucking in their pot bellies and overacting like crazy to camouflage an embarrassing script that sounded like a Navy-Air Force training manual.

The Japanese were like villains from an old Charlie Chan flick, babbling revenge while passing around an 8 by 10 glossy of Robert Mitchum. To make matters worst, it was in "sensurround," that irritating gimmick that spills your popcorn while puncturing your eardrums.

7. "HARRY AND Walter Go To New York." Elliot Gould and James Caan, rolling their eyes, screaming their heads off, stubbing their toes, walking into each other and the set, and trying to do a weak imitation of at least two of the Three Stooges. About as funny as a case of botulism.

8. "Lipstick." Rape for fun and profit, with miscast model Margaux Hemingway talking through her teeth, spraying the rapist and the camera with spit. This is a serious subject, but it's treated here as though it were being covered by Women's Wear Daily.

9. "A Matter of Time." Ingrid Bergman, as a faded femme fatale, and Liza Minnelli, as the chambermaid in a Rome hotel who imitates her. Hopeless farago of amateurish writing, hammy acting, incompetent direction by the once great Vincente Minnelli, and photography the color of dirty saddle oxfords.

Fit for inaugural

Knight News Service

With Rosalynn Carter wearing a six-year-old gown to her husband's inaugural ball, would Joan Mondale, wife of the Vice President-elect, follow suit?

To the relief of the American fashion industry, the answer is no. Last week, Eleanor Brenner, a Seventh Avenue designer, revealed that Mrs. Mondale had selected a complete new wardrobe from the Brenner firm for her role in inaugural festivities.

A bright red wool coat and two piece dress will keep Mrs. Mondale warm even if it snows on the Big Day. A depressed millinery industry is expected to applaud Mrs. Mondale's decision to complete the costume with a hat even though the plain, back-of-the-head style by Frank Olive is being described as a "non hat" hat.

For the ball, Mrs. Mondale will wear a melon colored hammered silk gown with high neckline and long sleeves certain to look elegant on the tall (5-foot, 9-inches), slender (size 8) woman.

Although the designer would not reveal the cost of the designs, which were created especially for Mrs. Mondale, Brenner garments sell in stores for from $60 to $200. The inaugural fashions probably will find their way into retail stores across the country later, the designer said, although the fabrics will be slightly different.

Enough to dampen one's spirit

Do you ever get the feeling that life is a parade and you're standing behind Bill Russell?

While I was watching television the other night, a commercial came on about a shower nozzle that massaged your entire body with four different sprays. The bathee twisted and squealed with such delight that I sat forward in my chair to see what was turning her on.

Finally, she flipped her head and whispered huskily, "Have a GOOD time with your water spray."

I shrugged and figured here was a woman who could make a party out of a tax audit and forgot it.

During the next break, a commercial came on of a man so beat I thought he was going to expire before my eyes. All he wanted out of life was a decent burial. Then he stepped into the shower and began to cover himself with lather. Within seconds, his entire body sprang to life. The last glimpse showed him sniffing his soap in pure ecstasy, and yelling to his wife to get his bowling ball out of the closet.

After that I began to watch the bath commercials closely. They were all the same. Everyone had such a swell time I felt guilty watching them. One woman who looked like a walking ad for sweat, eased herself into a tub of suds and immediately turned into a sex kitten. She snuggled down under the bubbles, closed her eyes and purred, and invited everyone to join.

What really sent me to the plumbing supply was a commercial for a water spray filmed at a resort in Florida.

MAYBE THAT'S what was missing in my life. I had tried raucous parties, jet travel, and baking from scratch. Maybe all I needed to create some excitement was a shower spray to sweep me off my feet.

It took 45 minutes for my son to relinquish the bathroom to me. The steam opened up pores that had been closed for repairs. Turning on the spigot caused the shower to drench my head in water as he had forgotten to push down the plunger. The soap was in a liquid form in the soap dish. A bottle of shampoo without a lid spilled onto my feet.

I don't think showers will ever replace volley ball.

At that moment

Nov. 2, 1955, a lovely day in the suburbs. Not a cloud in the sky, and everybody on Barbara Drive in East Meadow, Long Island, is savoring the afternoon sun.

Henry Hartmann is out for a drive. Leon Johnson is playing golf. Ted Kelly is raking his lawn. And Michael Black, who is 8, is playing in the street in front of the house next door.

The house is empty. Paul Koroluck, who lives there, is at work. His wife, Susan, and their daughter, who is 5 and whose name is Susan, too, are a few blocks away, returning from a stroll. They hear an airplane overhead. Routine. Mitchel Air Force Base is a mile and a half away.

In the cockpit of the plane, Capt. Clayton S. Elwood, veteran of World War II and Korea, senses trouble. He and Staff Sgt. Charles Slater are returning to Mitchel Field from a routine training flight, and something is wrong with the two propellers on their B-26. They fight the controls but they lose altitude. Elwood radios Mitchel Field. They clear Meadowbrook Hospital by only 500 feet. Then the plane spins.

Ted Kelly hears a "God-awful roar." He looks up from his yard. Slowly, flatly, like a sick tyro, the B-26 is turning ... falling ...

Kelly drops his rake, dashes into his house grabs his 4-year-old son and sees his wife running across the lawn with their year-old daughter.

"Get the baby out of there!" he screams, and both parents race down the sidewalk, carrying their children.

The B-26 pancakes into Paul Koroluck's front yard ... left wing on Barbara Drive ... right wing against the house ... one engine at the doorstep ... the other at the driveway ...

Fiery magnesium flies like shrapnel. Chunks hit Kelly's parked car, igniting it.

Flames crackle along the Korolucks' roof. Henry Hartmann, safety director of the Nassau County chapter of the American Red Cross, brakes his car to a stop. He runs inside the Korolucks' Cape Cod dwelling. Empty.

He turns, "scared silly," expecting the plane in the yard to explode. He gags on the acrid smoke and makes his way back to the street.

Muriel Black remembers her son, Michael, playing outside the Korolucks'. Her first impulse is to grab the telephone, but she realizes there is no time. She picks up her baby and runs down Barbara Drive. Somehow, Michael is safe.

Leon Johnson, lieutenant general in charge of the Continental Air Command, interrupts his game at Mitchel Field Golf Club. Soon, he, too, is rushing down Barbara Drive.

Then he stops, astonished. "I don't know how it got in," he mutters, eyeing the burning plane ... the houses 20 feet apart and 25 feet from the street ... the telephone poles and utility lines over the sidewalk. Only one wire is broken.

Miraculously, only the two men in the plane are dead.

As firemen carry the bodies from the wreckage, Paul Koroluck returns from work, not knowing the house is empty. Neighbors drag him away from his burning home.

His two Susans, still a few blocks away when the plane struck, are safe at a neighbor's.

George Mattson is flying over Long Island in a New York Daily News plane when he sees the puff of smoke in the distance. "Let's take a look," he tells the pilot. As they approach Barbara Drive, Mattson sees the B-26, broken and smoking on the ground. His pilot circles for about 10 minutes while Mattson makes pictures before firemen have time to turn their hoses on the wreckage.

Hail to the New Year!

IT SEEMS THERE was as much, if not more, activity on New Year's Day than on the Big Night.

Bob Bergmann didn't have a party but he whopped up his forever-annual pot of black-eyed peas on the first day of the year. The custom, as you may have read, is a Southern one. The dish will bring good luck in the coming year. Funny thing is, Bob is a California type. His wife, Pat, hails from Texas. She doesn't know how to cook them.

Unlike President-elect Carter, Bob doesn't use hog jewels in his recipe.

Mason and Jan Kight had their annual hangover party.

Tony and Faye Cohn featured brunch and football at their Rossmoor home.

Brunch bunch included newcomers to Our Town, Markus and Arlene Fisher, formerly of New Jersey, Slim and Ethel Tisser, Jack Slomann with Doris Caplan, Leonard and Harriett Wachs and Nat Adler and Sandra Fishman.

Vic and Patty McCarty held afternoon open house in their Park Estates home.

Dee Wavell came without husband, John, who had tickets to the Rose Bowl. The massive traffic jam was good to him and he made it to the party before it ended.

Joe and Connie Ainge also had a pair of the coveted tickets.

The New Year's Day party at the El Dorado Park Estates home of Win and Marilyn Cohen featured football and all day buffet.

Game watchers included Stan and Arlene Solomon, Ray and Shirley Heit, Dave and Jo Egli, Emma Lampel, Mark and Millie Markowitz, Alan and Rita Levy, (just back from a visit to England), Marty and Audrey Green, Lennie and Vivian Kaye and Mike and Julie Kyle.

Bob and Naida Hanson had a great idea for a party. They had theirs on Sunday when everyone was "tapering off" from holiday cheer.

Fred and Doris Wiesenbutter had a holiday open house just THREE days after moving into their brand new home in Park Estates. They must be the most organized hosts in town. They moved a 26-year accumulation from their old home.

Vern and Sandy West also hosted a traditional New Year's Day football watching party featuring an all-day buffet.

BUSY MEMBERS of the Long Beach Auxiliary to the Los Angeles Philharmonic took time out from personal parties to attend a giant one.

The reception for conductor Zubin Mehta, following the Philharmonic Orchestra's performance in the auditorium at Long Beach City College, drew 800 enthusiastic music lovers.

The concert was a near sell out with 1,100 in attendance. I suppose the absent 300 had other parties to go to.

Hostesses at the post-concert party in the Nordic Hall at the school were headed by President Vivian Lindgren.

Other hostesses were Mary Sorensen, Enid Peterson, Lu Peterson, Betty Benwell and Louise Plusch.

More were Ruth Boorkman, Anne Crabtree, Marjorie Morenus, Esther Gilmore, Sara Benitzen and Norma Olague.

Special helpers and ushers were music students from the various local high schools, Lynette Van Voris, Joy Clements, Bruce Wilkinson, Lynette McKeown, Beth Mills and Jerry Creech.

SPEAKING OF things Nordic and Lu Peterson, Lu, along with Norma Merritt issued invitations to a holiday coffee in Norma's home.

The invitations were written in Norwegian. Fortunately there was a translation included. The only person I heard of who replied in kind was Mary Sorensen who replied in Norwegian. Norma is of Norwegian extraction and Lu's husband Ray is Swedish.

THINGS YOU MIGHT never have known if I had not kept a New Year's resolution.

Said resolution was to clean out my desk and start fresh for 1977.

A belated Happy Birthday to Archie Imus.

Archie's wife, Ann, invited 60 family members and friends to surprise him on his 90th birthday.

The party took place in the Lagunita Room at Bullock's Lakewood store.

Archie keeps busy although he has been retired for eight years.

Actually he retired three times before he decided to take it easy. (He and Ann took in the convention of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees in Salt Lake City this past Fall.)

Archie retired from his job as postal inspector at the proper age.

He took an interim job and retired from that. When he was 80, he accepted a position as a field director for the National Association of Retired Federal Employees in Washington D. C. He retired from that job at age 82.

At that moment

Nov. 2, 1955, a lovely day in the suburbs. Not a cloud in the sky, and everybody on Barbara Drive in East Meadow, Long Island, is savoring the afternoon sun.

Henry Hartmann is out for a drive. Leon Johnson is playing golf, Ted Kelly is raking his lawn. And Michael Black, who is 8, is playing in the street in front of the house next door.

The house is empty. Paul Koroluck, who lives there, is at work. His wife, Susan, and their daughter, who is 5 and whose name is Susan, too, are a few blocks away, returning from a stroll. They hear an airplane overhead. Routine. Mitchell Air Force Base is a mile and a half away.

Solar energy a hope for the future

tubes, wires, gizmos and blinking lights.

Quite the contrary. Ours is neatly packaged out of sight in the garage and while we hear some noise as the system changes function, it's almost subliminal.

Dorothyann says that late at night she can hear a distant, low humming from the solar plant, but doesn't find it uncomfortable and forgets it an instant later.

To her, it sounds like the interior of a submarine.

THE REAL SECRET of the MED project seems to be the construction techniques. Mission Viejo and Gas Co. engineers explained they were simply "tightening" up the homes.

There is no attic space, for instance. Instead, it's almost solid insulation and the "ridge vent" running below the roof beam allows hot, stale air inside to escape before it can superheat the interior.

Exterior walls are thicker, but use no more wood than a conventional home. Putty sealer was placed between the window sill plates and concrete to keep out exterior air.

That rubber stripping around the front door and entry to the garage is just what it looks like — common refrigerator gasket. It serves to tighten the home, making sure no unwanted outside air gets in, or that comfortable interior air escapes.

The outside doors are steel instead of wood, and they contain magnets. Once a door is shut and the gasket has made a tight seal, the magnets pull the door that much tighter.

And there are two entry doors in front, further ensuring that outside air doesn't get in.

IN ANY OTHER HOME, the engineers say, energy is wasted because heat is radiated through walls and windows. Not here. All the windows have double panes of glass, and just beneath the stucco is a thin sheet of plastic commonly used in home construction in the Midwest.

Back East, they install this plastic membrane inside the dry wall to keep outside moisture from rotting the interior walls.

Use of this membrane in the Southland was virtually unheard of until Mission Viejo engineers installed it beneath the outside wall to keep comfortable air in.

Speaking of insulation, not only is the water heater swathed in a fiberglass blanket but so are the water pipes.

Did you ask about faucets? There aren't any. Buttons above the sinks and next to the tub and shower are part of the "Ultraflow" water control system. Look under the sink and you'll see not two, but just one incoming water pipe per fixture.

The designers say heat is wasted as it travels from the heater to the fixture, then mixed in the sink. With "Ultraflow," pushing a button marked "cold" or "warm" or "hot" premixes the water back at the heater, then sends it up in those insulated pipes.

"They say it's efficient," Dorothyann says, "but personally I prefer faucets. With this system, there's no way to vary degrees of warm. Your idea of what is hot may not be mine."

On to the appliances. You're right, there is no motor in the Magic Chef "Econocold" refrigerator. Instead of refrigerator heat being dissipated into the kitchen at random, requiring an open window, heated air is vented either into the living room, when the "enthalpy" comfort control system demands it, or else outside into the yard.

The enthalpy system senses inside and outside temperature and humidity, then brings cool air inside and flushes hot air out. The comfort control equipment is admittedly oversized for the MED homes, but it's the smallest of its kind now commercially available.

The air inside our home is filtered and is much cleaner and fresher than in other homes.

Dorothyann relishes the lack of dust in the house which cuts her cleaning time drastically and Todd and I enjoy the fact it gives her more time for us as well as her garden and her horse, housed at a stable nearby.

THAT GASKET MATERIAL on the front doors is also found on the moulding around the enclosed laundry room. Again, heat is vented from that sealed room instead of into the house.

The Maytag washer can be set for small, medium or large loads, and the Maytag dryer lacks a pilot light. Instead, a capacitor ignites clean-burning natural gas.

There's even a moisture sensor in the dryer that — would you believe — rings a chime when the clothes are dry.

The Tappan Self-Cleaning "Convectionaire" stove and range is also pilotless. I thought microwave cooking was efficient until I used the Convectionaire range.

Heated air is not radiated into the oven but instead forced through a high-speed fan, cutting cooking time by at least half. And when the oven door is opened, the heat is instantly shut off.

For us, it's the difference between spending either two hours or 30 minutes preparing dinner. As I said, we've earned our leisure time and mean to enjoy it.

Probably the biggest change in our lives since we moved into the house is being told how to live. As Dorothyann says, "We're a 'test-tube' family and though we don't mind answering everyone's questions, it's a little unnerving to be told how to set the temperature."

"Honestly, at first I felt I couldn't open a window without asking permission."

"We do feel privileged, though, what with all the attention we're getting from everyone from engineers to federal officials. Some days I feel like Miss America, other days I'm tempted to post a sign in the front yard announcing, 'We like it fine. Let us enjoy!'"

DRAWBACKS? WELL, aside from being unable to vary water temperature, we think the bedrooms are too small. One of our couches will have to spend the duration stored in the garage.

Our queen-size waterbed almost fills the master bedroom, and the bureau and hutch is a foot longer than the only available wall.

And there's almost a psychological need to have a window open, to have a breath of fresh air rustling the curtains. As one architect put it, "I guess we've engineered everything but the human factor."

On balance, though, we endorse the project wholeheartedly. Something has to be done to cut energy costs in the average home and we think Mission Viejo has taken a giant step forward, both with this MED solar project and the "tightening" of home construction.

Whether solar components can be mass-marketed to reduce the initial cost of their investment and installation is another question, but Dorothyann and I agree it must eventually happen. It makes all the sense in the world.

I.P.T Staff Writer John Sheehan pushes a button at the kitchen sink to get hot, warm or cold water. Flow can be varied to high or low, but water temperature is constant.

Concert charts brave future

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

When he was just a little kid growing up in East St. Louis, he discovered singing. Not only that there was singing, but that he, Harvey Hunter, had a talent for making songs.

It wasn't until he was in junior high school that his talent was singled out. It happened this way. The regular choir teacher was ill, so a flurried substitute did what many another before her, and after, has done. She said, "Let's put on a talent show."

Among those who heard young Harvey Hunter sing was the director of the high school a cappella choir. Hunter was a big boy, big for his age. So the high school teacher asked him to join the older choir where listeners marveled that any youth in that group could still sing such a clear, pure soprano.

"I was so young my voice hadn't changed," smiled Hunter who now has a two-octave vocal range, although he usually sings bass baritone.

HUNTER discovered California when he was sent here for training after he volunteered for military service in 1951. After his 1955 discharge from the Navy, he returned, worked first as a postman in Los Angeles, then enrolled at Compton Junior College. In 1962, he went on to UCLA as a physics major and, to support himself, took a job in the field of airframe structures design engineering. Eventually that became, and still is, his fulltime occupation.

He and his wife, Marie, have two daughters, Tamasha, 8, (in Swahili her name means "that which excites wonder") and Msichana, 3, (Swahili: "young lady").

Still, Hunter sings on, with greater warmth and understanding. "I almost didn't develop my talent," he said, chatting in the office of Long Beach Civic

Light Opera. "If I didn't have a good, steady job I couldn't have done it."

Along with his musical training, Hunter has developed a philosophy of life, one he's drawing on for a recital he'll sing Saturday to benefit LBCLO. It will begin at 4 p.m. in Long Beach Elks Lodge, 4101 E. Willow St.

HE HARBORS a special feeling for LBCLO because it was with that company that he first became a performing vocalist. His voice coach, Clinton Clark of Palos Verdes, suggested that he audition. He did and was accepted for the chorus of "The Student Prince" in 1973. Hunter's 6 feet 4, 250 pound frame is a commanding presence on any stage, even before he begins to sing.

A good many stage performances with a variety of Southern California companies followed his Long Beach debut. His latest LBCLO role was Caiaphas in "Jesus Christ Superstar." Now, Hunter is studying with Dr. Nandor Domokos, an operatic director. Just before his visit to LBCLO to check over his recital program, Hunter had received a call for a role in Mozart's "The Magic Flute" to be staged in Beverly Hills at the end of January.

Along with his career and its wonder of space travel, with his passion for physics and math, and his dedication to singing, Hunter has developed some firm ideas about man and his role in the universe. The problems of mankind trouble him — crime, pollution, the organization of societies and cultures of the world. "There are natural laws which should determine man's relation to others and to his environment. We are violating these laws, so we are in difficulties."

TO EXPOUND his ideas, Hunter plans to write three books.

At the moment, he is planning his concert "to share hope — hope that man can think about his world and make it better than it is. This is a good country. Now it's time for America to think of improving. We've been duped into believing we can't do anything about our problems; people are frustrated and afraid. We need to see alternatives, to change the things that need changing."

To Hunter, the greatest problem in the world today is loneliness. "It is the most painful thing a human being can endure. When we eliminate loneliness, we have eliminated the restrictions man has to develop. We make him free to discover his greatest potential, to produce healthy social relationships."

His program Saturday, Hunter said, will be not so much about Harvey Hunter as about the common denominators of people and of their potentials.

HE'LL DIVIDE his concert into four parts: Hope, Faith, Brotherhood and Roots, and Love. He calls it "A Philosophy to Live by for the Next 200 Years." Virginia Mitchell on piano, Derrell Jackson on drums and Johnnie Jones on electric guitar will accompany him.

Opening with "Impossible Dream" the program will progress through such numbers as "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," "Green Grass of Home," "Slavery's Chains," "If We Only Have Love" to the final "My Way." The 90-minute bill of 23 songs consists mostly of popular ballads and show tunes.

Tickets, $5 for adults, half price for children, may be purchased at the LBCLO office, 518 E. Fourth St., ordered by mail from Luhman Productions, P.O. Box 1621, Downey 90240, or bought at the door.

"This program differs from the ordinary one because its emphasis is not on the technical aspects of performance; rather, it is on accenting the positive in order to make our world, by any degree, a better place to live," Hunter said.

MUSIC AND PHILOSOPHY are synonymous for Harvey Hunter. He'll sing of his faith in mankind, 'A Philosophy to Live By for the Next 200 Years,' Saturday in the Elks Lodge. The 4 p.m. concert will benefit Long Beach Civic Light Opera.

JUST COMING DOWN, along with holiday decorations, is the three-month exhibit of art by children in our sister city of Valparaiso, Chile. It's been hanging in the Board of Education building at Seventh and Locust.

Dr. Jack Rhodes is chairman of the Sister City Committee. Athena Hall headed the art exhibit project. Both hope that soon they can send a show of Long Beach children's art work to Valparaiso.

Eduardo Gonzalez, a special member of the committee, visited his parents in Chile and returned with the artwork, most of it done in watercolors. Sherry Swan, in charge of fine arts education for Long Beach Unified School District, helped arrange the show. Along with the children's work hung Athena Hall's oil painting of Valparaiso Harbor showing the Queen Mary in the background as she sailed to Long Beach from England.

AN AMBITIOUS show, "Connections: The Work of Charles and Ray Eames," will continue at the UCLA Wight Gallery through Feb. 6. This exhibition covers the entire professional life of Charles and Ray Eames, starting in 1940 and continuing to the end of 1976. It offers a complete record of the working processes of two of America's leading designers.

Concert charts brave future

By ELISE EMERY

When he was just a little kid growing up in East St. Louis, he discovered singing. Not only that there was singing, but that he, Harvey Hunter, had a talent for making songs.

It wasn't until he was in junior high school that his talent was singled out. It happened this way. The regular choir teacher was ill, so a flurried substitute did what many another before her, and after, has done. She said, "Let's put on a talent show."

Among those who heard young Harvey Hunter sing was the director of the high school a cappella choir. Hunter was a big boy, big for his age. So the high school teacher asked him to join the older choir where listeners marveled that any youth in that group could still sing such a clear, pure soprano.

"I was so young my voice hadn't changed," smiled Hunter who now has a two-octave vocal range, although he usually sings bass baritone.

HUNTER discovered California when he was sent here for training after he volunteered for military service in 1951. After his 1955 discharge from the Navy, he returned, worked first as a postman in Los Angeles, then enrolled at Compton Junior College. In 1962, he went on to UCLA as a physics major and, to support himself, took a job in the field of airframe structures design engineering. Eventually that became, and still is, his fulltime occupation.

He and his wife, Marie, have two daughters, Tamasha, 8, (in Swahili her name means "that which excites wonder") and Msichana, 3, (Swahili: "young lady").

Still, Hunter sings on, with greater warmth and understanding. "I almost didn't develop my talent," he said, chatting in the office of Long Beach Civic

Light Opera. "If I didn't have a good, steady job I couldn't have done it."

Along with his musical training, Hunter has developed a philosophy of life, one he's drawing on for a recital he'll sing Saturday to benefit LBCLO. It will begin at 4 p.m. in Long Beach Elks Lodge, 4101 E. Willow St.

HE HARBORS a special feeling for LBCLO because it was with that company that he first became a performing vocalist. His voice coach, Clinton Clark of Palos Verdes, suggested that he audition. He did and was accepted for the chorus of "The Student Prince" in 1973. Hunter's 6 feet 4, 250 pound frame is a commanding presence on any stage, even before he begins to sing.

A good many stage performances with a variety of Southern California companies followed his Long Beach debut. His latest LBCLO role was Caiaphas in "Jesus Christ Superstar." Now, Hunter is studying with Dr. Nandor Domokos, an operatic director. Just before his visit to LBCLO to check over his recital program, Hunter had received a call for a role in Mozart's "The Magic Flute" to be staged in Beverly Hills at the end of January.

Along with his career and its wonder of space travel, with his passion for physics and math, and his dedication to singing, Hunter has developed some firm ideas about man and his role in the universe. The problems of mankind trouble him — crime, pollution, the organization of societies and cultures of the world. "There are natural laws which should determine man's relation to others and to his environment. We are violating these laws, so we are in difficulties."

TO EXPOUND his ideas, Hunter plans to write three books.

To Hunter, the greatest problem in the world today is loneliness. "It is the most painful thing a human being can endure. When we eliminate loneliness, we have eliminated the restrictions man has to develop, we make him free to discover his greatest potential, to produce healthy social relationships."

IN-SIGHTS

Kaleidoscope stimulates young imaginations

Over the holiday period, I was able to view something I have heard about for several years, and it was a glory to behold. It's in Kansas City, and it's for children.

It's called Kaleidoscope; and it is a creation of the Hallmark Cards Corporation, prompted by an idea of the president of the corporation, Donald Hall, and executed by a most remarkable former art teacher, Rachel Chambers, and a small staff.

It is labeled a "creative art experience." And that it is. But I'm not sure the label does it full justice. It is a "turn-on," a fantasy-land where you can let your imagination run freely, where you can touch, feel, smell and actively work with your hands as well as look. It is a place where whatever you do is "o.k."; there is no wrong way.

Although the initial Kaleidoscope was a traveling exhibit that visited 140 cities across the country from 1969 to 1973, it is now permanently housed in Kansas City's Crown Center complex. There, in groups of about 70, 6,500 children between the ages of 5 and 12 visit the activity each month.

THE HEART of Kaleidoscope is a studio workshop with nine activity areas where children create all sorts of fun things from materials that are mostly industrial waste, scraps from the Hallmark plants. Using glue and paint and colored markers, the youngsters make jewelry, masks, puppets, puzzles and more from these scraps of paper, colorful cellophane and yarn.

Before getting to the studio workshop, children pass through a child-size waiting room (the Mouse's House); an entry passageway of hanging plastic

dr. walt menninger

strips (a "Tickle Tunnel"); a short slide-show preview of the experience; a "Touch, See and Sniff" hallway; a "Discovery Room" of more sight, sound and touch experiences; and finally, a "Nature Tunnel," a simulated forest in a clear plastic tunnel lined with stuffed animals in a natural habitat of trees and flowers.

Once in the workshop area, children are shown the basics of using the materials, and then they go to work. Each child finishes with a sack full of creations to take home. My young ones were proudest of their puzzles, created by drawing a colorful pattern on a six-inch square paperboard piece which is put through a cutting machine which punches the cardboard into a puzzle pattern.

To help the children settle down after the bustle and bustle of the studio workshop, the 90-minute Kaleidoscope session closes with a "Sense of Wonder" gallery, with displays of iridescent butterflies and other insects, birds and shells; and with the "Earth Gallery," a mirrored room with rear-screen projected sound films of landscapes and sunsets.

THE WHOLE atmosphere of the experience is impressive. There is a pervasive joyous exuberance in the busy room full of children engrossed in creative activity. Behavior problems? Not here. Even so-called hyperactive children seem to settle down and relish the experience.

There's a message for all parents and educators in Kaleidoscope. Everyone, children and adults, can profit from a time and a place where we can be free to "oh" and "ah" over simple things and let our childish impulses and imagination be expressed without fear of stifling criticism.

The major problem? There is only one Kaleidoscope, and Ms. Chambers regrets that it can't accommodate all the children who want to come now. Weekday sessions during the school year are reserved for school children and other non-profit groups. Only Saturday and summer sessions are open to individual children, with a 50 cent admission fee for each child.

While Kaleidoscope is designed for the child, it touches the child in all of us, and its potential is boundless. So far, the program has scheduled a session with one group of senior citizens who took to the experience with as much verve as the children.

For those of us over 12, there is a viewing area through one-way glass so parents can observe their children without being intrusive. Besides that, the only way an adult can partake of the experience is to live in the Kansas City area and become a volunteer. The small staff depends on teen-age and adult volunteers to augment its efforts to assure each child individual attention during the Kaleidoscope experience.

FLEA MARKET FINDS

Treasures from the Black Forest

Q. "What is the origin of the cuckoo clock?" — Henry, St. Louis, Mo.

A. Those clever clock-makers residing in the Black Forest region of Germany introduced this type of hanging wall clock in the early 1700s. These handcrafted timepieces were produced in various sizes, the amount of ornamentation varying somewhat depending on the skill of the maker. As a general rule, the fancier the clock, the higher the value. The enduringly popular swiss chalet version is perhaps best known to those who heed the call of the cuckoo. They were extensively exported from Europe in the late 1800s when one elaborate model boasting a "hand carved" bird top sold for the affordable price of $7.95. When the cuckoo calls, clock collectors listen! Value guide: medium size, circa 1890, $125.

Q. "While cleaning out the cupboard, I discovered a bowl marked 'Near-Cut.'" — Lucy, Trenton, N.J.

A. Nowadays it pays to peer inside glass objects as those bearing factory trademarks are treasured. Your particular find originated at the famed Cambridge Glass Company active in Cambridge, Ohio, between 1901 and 1954. Their pressed glass presentations bearing this trademark had designs similar to those found on costly cut glass pieces.

Also be on the lookout for pieces bearing the firm's other trademark consisting of the letter C within a triangle. Collectors agree Cambridge glass has a touch of class! Value guide: bowl, thistle pattern, 8" diameter, $22.

Q. "When was the Blue Onion dinnerware pattern introduced?" — Mrs. G. R., Mobile, Ala.

A. The word renowned Meissen factory of Germany was responsible for this tabletop triumph introduced in the 1730s. Johann Haroldt borrowed the motif from an earlier Oriental design, and in turn numerous other potters copied the Meissen version. Their wares bore the familiar crossed swords trademark, which was also copied by other potters. The basic design, featuring the Tree of Life, peaches, pomegranates and chrysanthemums, has varied only slightly over the years, although the later versions were somewhat less intricate. The Blue Onion pattern is still in production, attesting to its durability. Value guide: sugar bowl, circa 1870, $55.

IN-SIGHTS

Kaleidoscope stimulates young imaginations

Over the holiday period, I was able to view something I have heard about for several years, and it was a glory to behold. It's in Kansas City, and it's for children.

It's called Kaleidoscope; and it is a creation of the Hallmark Cards Corporation, prompted by an idea of the president of the corporation, Donald Hall, and executed by a most remarkable former art teacher, Rachel Chambers, and a small staff.

It is labeled a "creative art experience." And that it is. But I'm not sure the label does it full justice. It is a "turn-on," a fantasy-land where you can let your imagination run freely, where you can touch, feel, smell and actively work with your hands as well as look. It is a place where whatever you do is "o.k.," there is no wrong way.

Although the initial Kaleidoscope was a traveling exhibit that visited 140 cities across the country from 1969 to 1973, it is now permanently housed in Kansas City's Crown Center complex. There, in groups of about 70, 6,500 children between the ages of 5 and 12 visit the activity each month.

THE HEART of Kaleidoscope is a studio workshop with nine activity areas where children create all sorts of fun things from materials that are mostly industrial waste, scraps from the Hallmark plants. Using glue and paint and colored markers, the youngsters make jewelry, masks, puppets, puzzles and more from these scraps of paper, colorful cellophane and yarn.

Before getting to the studio workshop, children pass through a child-size waiting room (the Mouse's House); an entry passageway of hanging plastic

dr. walt menninger

strips (a "Tickle Tunnel"); a short slide-show preview of the experience; a "Touch, See and Sniff" hallway; a "Discovery Room" of more sight, sound and touch experiences; and finally, a "Nature Tunnel," a simulated forest in a clear plastic tunnel lined with stuffed animals in a natural habitat of trees and flowers.

Once in the workshop area, children are shown

the basics of using the materials, and then they go to work. Each child finishes with a sack full of creations to take home. My young ones were proudest of their puzzles, created by drawing a colorful pattern on a six-inch square paperboard piece which is put through a cutting machine which punches the cardboard into a puzzle pattern.

To help the children settle down after the hustle and bustle of the studio workshop, the 90-minute Kaleidoscope session closes with a "Sense of Wonder" gallery, with displays of iridescent butterflies and other insects, birds and shells; and with the "Earth Gallery," a mirrored room with rear-screen projected sound films of landscapes and sunsets.

THE WHOLE atmosphere of the experience is impressive. There is a pervasive joyous exuberance in the busy room full of children engrossed in creative activity. Behavior problems? Not here. Even so-called hyperactive children seem to settle down and relish the experience.

There's a message for all parents and educators in Kaleidoscope. Everyone, children and adults, can profit from a time and a place where we can be free to "oh" and "ah" over simple things and let our childish impulses and imagination be expressed without fear of stifling criticism.

The major problem? There is only one Kaleidoscope, and Ms. Chambers regrets that it can't accommodate all the children who want to come now. Weekday sessions during the school year are reserved for school children and other non-profit groups. Only Saturday and summer sessions are open to individual children, with a 50 cent admission fee for each child.

While Kaleidoscope is designed for the child, it touches the child in all of us, and its potential is boundless. So far, the program has scheduled a session with one group of senior citizens who took to the experience with as much verve as the children.

For those of us over 12, there is a viewing area through one-way glass so parents can observe their children without being intrusive. Besides that, the only way an adult can partake of the experience is to live in the Kansas City area and become a volunteer. The small staff depends on teen-age and adult volunteers to augment its efforts to assure each child individual attention during the Kaleidoscope experience.

Treasures from the Black Forest

Q. "What is the origin of the cuckoo clock?" — Henry, St. Louis, Mo.

A. Those clever clock-makers residing in the Black Forest region of Germany introduced this type of hanging wall clock in the early 1700s. These handcrafted timepieces were produced in various sizes, the amount of ornamentation varying somewhat depending on the skill of the maker. As a general rule, the fancier the clock, the higher the value. The enduringly popular swiss chalet version is perhaps best known to those who heed the call of the cuckoo. They were extensively exported from Europe in the late 1800s when one elaborate model boasting a "hand carved" bird top sold for the affordable price of $7.95. When the cuckoo calls, clock collectors listen! Value guide: medium size, circa 1890, $125.

Q. "While cleaning out the cupboard, I discovered a bowl marked 'Near-Cut.'" — Lucy, Trenton, N.J.

A. Nowadays it pays to peer inside glass objects as those bearing factory trademarks are treasured. Your particular find originated at the famed Cambridge Glass Company active in Cambridge, Ohio, between 1901 and 1954. Their pressed glass presentations bearing this trademark had designs similar to those found on costly cut glass pieces.

Also be on the lookout for pieces bearing the firm's other trademark consisting of the letter C within a triangle. Collectors agree Cambridge glass has a touch of class! Value guide: bowl, thistle pattern, 8" diameter, $22.

Q. "When was the Blue Onion dinnerware pattern introduced?" — Mrs. G. R., Mobile, Ala.

A. The word renowned Meissen factory of Germany was responsible for this tabletop triumph introduced in the 1730s. Johann Haroldt borrowed the motif from an earlier Oriental design, and in turn numerous other potters copied the Meissen version. Their wares bore the familiar crossed swords trademark, which was also copied by other potters. The basic design, featuring the Tree of Life, peaches, pomegranates and chrysanthemums, has varied only slightly over the years, although the later versions were somewhat less intricate. The Blue Onion pattern is still in production, attesting to its durability. Value guide: sugar bowl, circa 1870, $55.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Dials recipe for casserole

Take note of the close proximity of the telephone and the kitchen range. That's par for the course for Robert N. Watson, today's chef of the week. Watson is customer service superintendent for the General Telephone Co. He has been in the telephone business since 1946, 11 of those years in Long Beach.

Born in San Antonio, Tex., he remained there to graduate from Trinity University with a degree in business administration. Because of the advent of mildred flary

World War II, however, it was necessary to complete his college education by attending night classes.

Watson says, "I joined the U. S. Navy, and on that fateful day, Dec. 7, 1941, I was stationed at Pearl Harbor." Because of what happened that day, he was awarded the Purple Heart.

Watson was on the battleship, USS West Virginia, when it sank. "After that, he says, "I decided there was no place to go but up, so I transferred to the submarine division, where I spent the remainder of my service." His span of duty covered six years and he was discharged with the rank of chief petty officer.

He returned to Texas and joined the Southwest Bell Telephone Co., and for the next 15 years his travels took him all over that state.

Watson then was offered a position with the California Inter State Telephone Co., and Victorville became his home base.

FOLLOWING THAT STINT, Watson joined the General Telephone Co., and while he was headquartered in Lancaster, his area covered Palm Springs and surrounding territories. He was then promoted and transferred to Long Beach.

Watson is a member of the Long Beach Optimist Club.

There are four children in the Watson family. The older daughter, Melody, is married and lives in San Angelo, Tex., while Janet and her husband live in Falls Church, Va. Kathy, still at home, is also an employee of General Telephone. Son, Robert Jr., is in the United States Army, stationed in Frankfurt, Germany. Watson says, "The last time I counted, there were nine grandchildren."

A collector of antiques, Watson, a collector of antiques, enjoys fishing as well as landscape gardening. "In fact," he says, "when I retire, I'd like to move to Apple Valley and go into that type of work professionally."

His wife, Wendy, refers to him as "The hot rod kid." He just recently became the owner of a new Trans Am sports car.

She says, "He's a real good cook. In fact, he taught me much about it. Then he abruptly quit. I'm trying to nudge him back into it — at least to prepare Sunday breakfast."

Today, he gave in and is preparing Chili Pepper Casserole.

CHILI PEPPER CASSEROLE

- 2 large cans green chilies
- 1 pound Jack cheese
- 1 pound cheddar cheese
- 2 large cans condensed milk
- 1 large can tomato sauce
- 5 eggs

Remove seeds and veins from chilies, and rinse. Generously stuff chilies with grated Jack cheese. In a greased oblong casserole, lay a layer of stuffed peppers lengthwise, then crosswise. Cover casserole with the condensed milk mixed with 6 beaten eggs. Sprinkle generously with grated cheddar cheese. Bake at 350 degrees until custard sets. Just before serving cover casserole with tomato sauce and remaining cheddar cheese. Bake until cheese melts. Serves 12-16.

DEAR ABBY

He's hiding something

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow in my late 50s who has been keeping company with a bachelor my age for three years. My problem is I still haven't met any of his family members.

He lives on a farm with his mother and two sisters. I've never been to his house because his mother is senile and both his sisters are crazy.

He doesn't work and says he has no income, but he owns a little property and drives a nice car.

He's asked me not to phone him because he has

a party line, which he says everybody listens in on, and he doesn't want people knowing his business.

Last year his brother died, but he didn't tell me until after they buried him because he said it was a private funeral and his brother was crazy. I'm beginning to think insanity runs in his family.

If I weren't so darned lonesome, I'd forget him, but he does play a nice game of gin rummy. How do you and your experts figure him? — MINNIE IN W. VA.

DEAR MINNIE: My experts suspect that your gentleman friend is either married, crazy or both. And my advice is to determine his marital status, find another gin rummy partner or take up solitaire.

DEAR ABBY: I took your advice and acted like a liberated woman by calling up a guy and arranging a date with him.

Well, it just didn't work out. You said a man would feel "flattered" to have a girl call him and tell him up front she thought they would enjoy each other's company.

This guy was flattered all right, but his ego got to be too much by the end of the evening. He couldn't buy the idea that I didn't want to get him between the sheets. (I really didn't.)

I'm afraid the average man still likes to take the initiative when it comes to dating. Or did I just happen to get a dud? — GUESSED WRONG

DEAR GUESSED: I think you got a dud. Just because a man asks a girl for a date doesn't mean he wants to take her to bed. And the same applies to women who take the initiative.

DEAR ABBY: I work for the Bureau of Vital Statistics. Since quite a few people have had sex change operations recently, they have been requesting that their names be changed to agree with their sex change. We are having difficulty in writing to these people.

They usually have their names legally changed before having the sex change operation.

For example: A man named James Black has changed his name to Virginia Black. By rights he is still a male with a female name.

When writing to him, should we address him as "Dear Mr. Black," since he is still a biological male, or "Dear Miss Black," since his name has been legally changed? — BALTIMORE DILEMMA

on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: We had an unfinished rubber at rubber bridge. One side had made a part score and later the other side made a game. Do both sides earn the unfinished rubber bonuses of 50 for the partial and 300 for the game? — Scoring Problems, Syracuse, N.Y.

Answer: No. When the game is made, all previous part scores are invalidated. The 50 point part score bonus is awarded only for active part scores.

Dear Mr. Corn: I held this hand and passed over my right hand opponent's opening of one diamond (I didn't want to double because of the doubleton club). LHO passed also and my partner opened with one heart. I jumped to three hearts and missed game. Where did I go wrong?

♠ K 9 8 2 10 A
♥ A Q 10 5
♦ 9 8 3
♣ A 5

My hand: — Polite Invite, Demopolis, Ala.

Answer: I would have doubled one diamond in spite of the doubleton club. After your pass, the jump to three hearts urges partner to bid game if he can, but it may be difficult to correlate a prior pass with such a strong hand.

Dear Mr. Corn: What is a "fish double"? — Tony Tuna, San Francisco

Answer: Sometimes called a "sucker double," it's a double of a game or slam based on high cards or trump strength, such double rating to gain little and lose much because of the free information it gives declarer for planning his play.

Dear Mr. Corn: What is meant by the term, "quantitative bid"? — Blackwood Mixup

Answer: A quantitative bid is a natural bid, within specified strength limits and in non-forcing. For example, a jump to four no trump over one no trump is a quantitative invitational raise. It asks partner to pass with a minimum opening and to bid slam with a maximum or near maximum.

Perhaps a stronger invitation would be to cue bid two diamonds and then raise hearts.

Dear Mr. Corn: Does third hand defender have the right to ask for a bidding review after the bidding is over and before partner leads? — Short Memory, Manhattan Beach, Calif.

Answer: At rubber bridge, yes. His right to ask terminates once partner has made the opening lead.

At duplicate bridge, declarer or defender may, at his first turn to play, require all previous calls to be restated. This means that third hand defender must wait until it's his turn to play and that he must ask for a complete review with no partial reviews authorized.

a liberated woman by calling up a guy and arranging a date with him.

Well, it just didn't work out. You said a man would feel "flattered" to have a girl call him and tell him up front she thought they would enjoy each other's company.

This guy was flattered all right, but his ego got to be too much by the end of the evening. He couldn't buy the idea that I didn't want to get him between the sheets. (I really didn't.)

I'm afraid the average man still likes to take the initiative when it comes to dating. Or did I just happen to get a dud? — GUESSED WRONG

DEAR GUESSED: I think you got a dud. Just because a man asks a girl for a date doesn't mean he wants to take her to bed. And the same applies to women who take the initiative.

DEAR ABBY: I work for the Bureau of Vital Statistics. Since quite a few people have had sex change operations recently, they have been requesting that their names be changed to agree with their sex change. We are having difficulty in writing to these people.

They usually have their names legally changed before having the sex change operation.

For example: A man named James Black has changed his name to Virginia Black. By rights he is still a male with a female name.

When writing to him, should we address him as "Dear Mr. Black," since he is still a biological male, or "Dear Miss Black," since his name has been legally changed? — BALTIMORE DILEMMA

DEAR DILEMMA: Address him (or her) by his (or her) legal name.

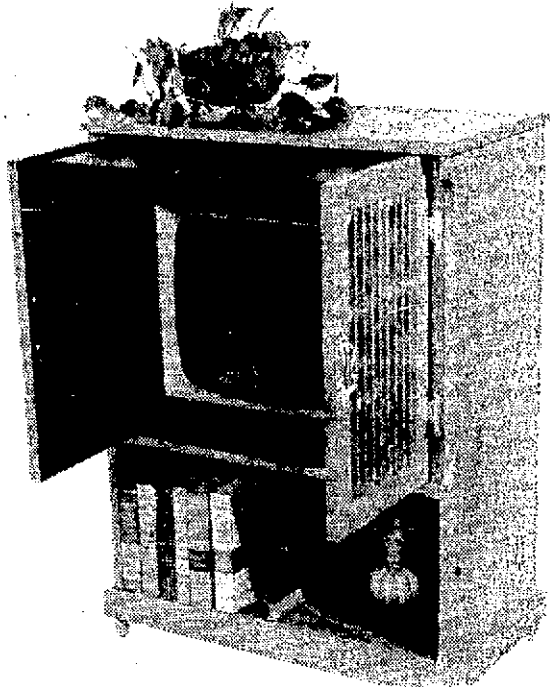

The workshop

Not only is this handsome cabinet easy to build, but it has infinite uses in your home decorating scheme. Use it as a TV cabinet, stereo center, sewing cabinet, home office... in any room of your home. The wide variety of 3/4" hardwood veneer plywoods available makes it possible to construct this cabinet so that it matches your existing furniture.

The unit pictured here, measures 28" long by 16" wide by 36" high. With our full-size pattern, all you do is trace the parts onto wood, saw them out and assemble. The pattern comes complete with step-by-step photos and instructions, a materials list and handy tips on finishing.

To obtain pattern No. 367, TV Cabinet, send $2 (includes first class postage and handling) by check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2333, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

HANDY TIP: One of the easiest finishes to apply, and one that will consistently produce the best results for the home craftsman, is a penetrating sealer. It doesn't require finesse with brushing and you don't have to sand between coats or work in a dust-proof room. (If you have a do-it-yourself question, send it to Steve Ellingson at the above address.)

on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: We had an unfinished rubber at rubber bridge. One side had made a part score and later the other side made a game. Do both sides earn the unfinished rubber bonuses of 50 for the partial and 300 for the game? — Scoring Problems, Syracuse, N.Y.

Answer: No. When the game is made, all previous part scores are invalidated. The 50 point part score bonus is awarded only for active part scores.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I held this hand and passed over my right hand opponent's opening of one diamond (I didn't want to double because of the doubleton club). LHO passed also and my partner re-opened with one heart. I jumped to three hearts and missed game. Where did I go wrong?

- ♦ K 9 8 2
- ♦ A Q 10 5
- ♦ 9 8 3
- ♦ A 5

My hand: — Polite Invite, Demopolis, Ala.

Answer: I would have doubled one diamond in spite of the doubleton club. After your pass, the jump to three hearts urges partner to bid game if he can, but it may be difficult to correlate a prior pass with such a strong hand.

Dear Mr. Corn: What is a "fish double"? — Tony Tuna, San Francisco

Answer: Sometimes called a "sucker double," it's a double of a game or slam based on high cards or trump strength, such double rating to gain little and lose much because of the free information it gives declarer for planning his play.

Dear Mr. Corn: What is meant by the term, "quantitative bid"? — Blackwood Mixup

Answer: A quantitative bid is a natural bid, within specified strength limits and in non-forcing. For example, a jump to four no trump over one no trump is a quantitative invitational raise. It asks partner to pass with a minimum opening and to bid slam with a maximum or near maximum.

Perhaps a stronger invitation would be to cue bid two diamonds and then raise hearts.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Does third hand defender have the right to ask for a bidding review after the bidding is over and before partner leads? — Short Memory, Manhattan Beach, Calif.

Answer: At rubber bridge, yes. His right to ask terminates once partner has made the opening lead.

At duplicate bridge, "declarer or defender may, at his first turn to play, require all previous calls to be restated." This means that third hand defender must wait until it's his turn to play and that he must ask for a complete review with no partial reviews authorized.

HAROLD A. JONES SR.
A tradition for nearly 50 years

THE CALENDAR flips another page. The Jones restaurants — now in their 48th year — look forward to starting their 49th and 50th years in Long Beach.

As they prepare to celebrate half a century here, the Jones restaurants find that their fame has spread far beyond Long Beach. Last month, passersby in downtown Long Beach were surprised to find many out-of-town tour buses parked near Jones Dining Room and Cafeteria on Fifth Street at Locust Avenue. During December, 27 buses stopped at the two restaurants. On one busy Sunday, seven busloads arrived.

Those hundreds of extra guests came from cities as far away as Hemet, the San Fernando Valley, Gardena, Hermosa Beach and cities in Orange County. The passengers — young as well as old — were brought here to view Christmas decorations and other sights throughout the Long Beach area. Before going sightseeing, they visited the Jones restaurants to fill up on delicious, fresh luncheons or dinners at the side-by-side family restaurants.

Many of the guests told the restaurants' employees: "We were here last year, too, and we've been looking forward to coming back for some more of this fine food!"

The fame of the Jones restaurants has even spread as far as Canada. Occasionally, a tour bus arrives from British Columbia or Saskatchewan, loaded with famished Canadians eager to try the rich, wholesome, nutritious foods their friends have talked about so enthusiastically.

The Jones restaurants were founded in June, 1929, by Harold A. Jones Sr. and his wife Ivalou. They can still be found hard at work at the restaurants every day, planning menus and giving warm greetings to their multitudes of friends. Aided by their son Hal and a large staff of industrious employees, Mr. and Mrs. Jones also own and operate Jones Uptown Cafeteria, 3636 Long Beach Blvd., which has the same menu as the downtown cafeteria. Closed Saturdays, the restaurants are open the rest of the week for luncheon and dinner.

The newest executive on the Jones' staff is managing chef Al Hunsicker, who has many years' experience in the restaurant and wholesale food fields. He is planning to surprise longtime Jones customers with new entrees later this month. The surprises will be potluck entrees which will show up from day to day on an irregular schedule. Among them will be such treats as Al's wonderful beef Stroganoff, goulash with noodles, burgundy beef with noodles and old-fashioned ham with lima beans.

ANYONE WHO DINES OUT very much is aware that the shrimp Louie is a splendid seafood salad. Now there's something new on the Long Beach dining-out scene — a salad called shrimp Luis.

Luis is the Spanish spelling of Louis. So, as you might guess, the shrimp Luis is a Spanish or Mexican version of that famous seafood salad. There's only one restaurant in this part of Southern California that serves the shrimp Luis. It's an original creation at El Encanto Mexican Restaurant, 1731 E. Fourth St., a couple of blocks west of Cherry Avenue.

El Encanto (which means "enchantment") adds guacamole to its shrimp salad to give it that Latin touch. Guacamole is a Mexican specialty well-known to knowledgeable restaurantgoers. For newcomers, let me explain that guacamole is made with crushed fresh avocado mixed with a bit of lemon juice, onion, herbs and spices. It's a bright green spread used as an appetizer, a dip or a topping for certain dishes, such as the shrimp Luis, which includes Louie dressing.

Also known as Ashley's El Encanto, the restaurant was founded by the Grace Ashley family in the late 1930s. It is now owned by the late Mrs. Ashley's sons, Diamond and Damron Cecil. The brothers offer an unusually large variety of luncheons and dinners. Their food is different from the specialties served in most Mexican restaurants in this area, because El Encanto's recipes are quite different.

El Encanto's recipes date back 40 years or more. In general, they are representative of four kinds of Mexican cookery. Some of the recipes came from old Mexico, some came from New Mexico, some (such as the chili con carne) came from Texas and some of the recipes (such as the shrimp Luis) are Southern-California-style Mexican creations. El Encanto's tortillas are Texas-style, quite different from the tortillas served in other Long Beach area Mexican restaurants. They are made fresh on an ancient tortilla machine which was originally used in Texas many decades ago.

El Encanto serves luncheon Mondays through Saturdays, 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Dinner is every night and Sundays starting at 11:30 a.m. The luncheons include the shrimp Luis, $2.95, made with Louie dressing as well as guacamole, lettuce and shrimp; nine special entrees, from $1.75, and many a la carte burrito, tostada and sandwich ideas. One of the most popular luncheons is the Tampico, $2.15, including a chicken enchilada smothered in sour cream sauce, topped with chopped green onions, served with Spanish rice or refried beans, sourdough bread or tortillas, salad or gazpacho (chilled Mexican soup) and coffee. El Encanto's dinners are mostly $2.60 to $3.75. The shrimp Luis is $3.25 at night.

Price is right when shopping in Scotland

Edinburgh

The general stores in Scotland's Highlands are where the treasure lies. They carry just about everything — like the Chinese papa-mama stores on the outer islands of Hawaii.

stan delaplane

Ask for a tweed shooting coat or a Shetland sweater. He'll move a saddle or a keg of nails, and likely have just what you're looking for. The price will be right. It's priced for thrifty country people.

What cost you $24 last year now costs $16.50. An American woman in the Hotel Caledonian said: "I clipped a picture of Greta Garbo from Women's Wear Daily. She was walking down Fifth Avenue in a knee-length tissue weight anorak. Just what I wanted for this trip."

She searched all the stores: "I. Magnin, Bloom- ingdale's, Abercrombie & Fitch." She came over with the only thing she would find. "A long coat that weighed a ton and made me look like a Russian foot soldier."

LAST WEEK she was in Sutherland at the top of Scotland on the wild west coast. She found THE coat in a General Merchandise Store. "It was hanging on a hook next to a pair of hip-high wading boots."

"A Mac for the Yank," the store owner called it.

The coat is all nylon. Made by Henri Lloyd of London. You find them all over Scotland where they're called "fish coats." Plaid shoulder lining.

Four roomy pockets. Cuffs to turn back or close with drawstrings.

They're water and wind proof. Weightless and warm. Nine pounds — say $15.

It's chilly as an Eskimo well digger here and a dreary rain is falling in Princes Street. If you cross the George IV Bridge and tumble down cobbled Victoria Street, you wind up at Laird's Larder. It's a cozy attic tea room above a bakery and marmalade shop.

You share a window seat with freckled secre- taries and kilted attorneys. (Is it cold wearing kilts these winter days? I imagine so but can't figure how to ask.)

WHEN YOU die in England, the tax people take just about everything. Lady Jean fford (the double lower-case f is an old English custom) inherited Brodick Castle on the Isle of Arran, the southwest coast of Scotland.

Estate taxes were so crippling she gave 7,000 acres to the National Trust. She kept the family recipes for pates and marmalades.

A wise move, for she now has a castle industry in Laird's Larder. Makes venison and hare pates and an orange marmalade laced with Scotch whisky.

The tea room is always crowded. Customers stand on the staircase and watch hungrily as stacks of sandwiches get lower and homemade pies are sliced up.

The place smells wonderfully of country soup bubbling in copper kettles. The sweet smell of suc- cess.

EDINBURGH getting set for its biggest bagpipe blowout yet in May when some 40,000 kilt-clad Scots will gather for the first international clan gathering in a generation. Opening ceremonies take place at Meadowbank Stadium on May 1 to start two full weeks of highland hijinks all around Scotland.

Highlight of the gathering will be sessions at a clan club in Edinburgh, with exhibitions of Scottish dancing, piping, whisky and haggis tasting and fiddlers' rallies. The first week of events in Edinburgh ends with the Highland Games.

"What are the cheaper places now in Europe?" England, Ireland, Spain and Italy will cost you least. The Scandinavian countries and Switzerland are highest priced. Germany is in between. Portugal, Greece and Austria are not too bad. Less than Germany, higher than the low-cost countries.

Cost of getting there is what kills you. Now you can get low-cost, charter rates on major airlines. A travel agent can explain it — the airline can, too. You pay 30 to 45 days in advance. You must go on a certain day. Come back on a certain day. That's what guarantees the airline a full load so they can charge the low rate.

Example: Round trip economy to London from San Francisco, $968. I bought it for $475. Ask for the ABC rate.

"Do you think we stand much chance of getting the stomach problem in Mexico?"

If you were born in the U.S., the medical odds are four in 10 you will. If you were raised in Italy, it goes down dramatically: Like about one in 20. The closer you live to the equator, the more resistance you have.

Where the elite meet

Opposite the Paris Opera, on the corner of the Boulevard des Capucines, the Cafe de la Paix had been a meeting place since its opening in 1872.

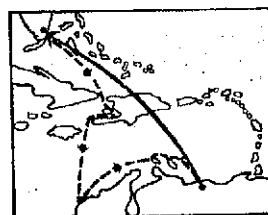

Closed for 16 months of renovation costing $3.9 million, the celebrated Cafe has reopened in its bustling, central location.

Classed as a national monument, the Cafe de la Paix, with its carved pillars and landscaped ceilings, was restored by the painstakingly prestigious chain which owns the Hotel Maurice and the Hotel Prince de Galles.

The sidewalk terrace offers one of the world's great people-parades. Along with 42nd Street and Broadway in New York, it was known in its heyday in the 1920s as one of the locations where visitors could meet everyone they ever knew, providing they lingered long enough.

FOG OVER LAKE GENEVA ENHANCES VIEW OF VEEVEY IN SWISS ALPS

Swiss set Bacchanal festival of century

By HERB SHANNON
I.P.T. Travel Editor

VEVEY, Switzerland — Vine growers of the villages sprinkled spectacularly on the steep hillsides surrounding this shoreside city on Lake Geneva are too busy most years to think about fun, frolic or festivals. But every once in a while they throw the biggest bacchanalian blowout of them all.

Once in a while on the perpetual Vevey calendar translates to about once a generation. The festive ferment flourishes only four or five times every hundred years. The last Fete des Vignerons in 1955 attracted more than 400,000 spectators for the two weeks of pageantry, musical productions and costumed parades.

The custom dates back to extemporaneous harvest celebrations of the 12th century, according to records of the Confrerie des Vignerons, the brotherhood of growers in the Canton of Vaud, the local region of Vevey. The first organized event was presented in 1819 and the festival has grown in scope in each of six succeeding spectacles.

THIS YEAR the festival fever is rising once again. A cast of 4,000 has been in rehearsal for months. 750 musicians and singers are practicing a new score and libretto, citizens of Vevey are producing their own parade costumes and plans for a 15,000-seat stadium in the city market square are complete.

The Swiss National Tourist Office has designated the July 30-August 14 festival its flag event for 1977. More than 500,000 visitors are expected to attend the street processions and the performances in the open-air stadium.

In spite of appearances, the Fete des Vignerons is not strictly a tourist attraction. Its primary purpose is to honor the grape growers whose skill has brought fame and prosperity to the winemakers of Vaud. The festival often coincides with the regular three-year inspection of the vineyards by the Confrerie, a quality control practice dating from the Middle Ages.

THE CENTRAL feature of each three-hour performance in the stadium is the crowning of the growers, whose seal and motto Ora et Labora — Pray and Work — are prominently displayed along with the banners, bunting and flags festooning the parade routes. The vigneron are also honored guests of impromptu celebrations in the bistros and wine-cellar of Vevey.

This year's event, estimated to cost up to $6 million, probably is the last for this century. One of the reasons for the long intermissions is simple recuperation. The logistics of the extravaganza are staggering, requiring years of advance preparation and the full cooperation of the citizens of Vevey, all of whom could be seated at once in the festival stadium.

Feeding the multitudes who will converge on the city next summer will be partially solved by the construction of a huge Festival Restaurant capable of serving 4,500 hungry and thirsty visitors at a time. The facility also will present nightly folkloric entertainment.

AMPLE HOTEL accommodations will be available in the city and its nearby neighbor, the larger lake resort of Montreux, along with the comfortable country inns of the villages on the fringes of Vevey. Bus, train and boat transportation will whisk visitors from Montreux to the festival scene in minutes. Montreux also boasts a casino for additional diversion of festival visitors.

The Vevey suburban hotels are within easy walking distance of the festival parade routes and stadium, and are served by a funicular railroad for the uphill return. A typical inn is the 25-room Hotel-erie de Chatonneyre overlooking Vevey and Lake Geneva in the village of Corseaux. A bonus of the house is its restaurant, whose menu is considered one of the finest in the region by a loyal clientele which includes the most famous resident of the canton, Charles Chaplin.

Accompanied by members of his family and friends, the retired comedian regularly dines in the Chatonneyre, coming once a week from his chateau half a mile distant in the village of Corsier. Another frequent patron is film actor James Mason, who also maintains a residence in Vaud.

BETWEEN FESTIVALS, Vevey enjoys a steady influx of visitors who come for Swiss hospitality, the Alpine climate, boating on the lake and a sample or two of the product of its vineyard slopes. At this time of the year there is skiing and tobogganing in the mountains.

But from now until July 30, a new generation of Vevey's vinegrowers and public officials will take their turn at putting on the traditional two-week salute to Bacchus. In the spirit of the slogan of the Confrerie des Vignerons, they will be working hard on the outdoor show and praying for no rain.

GAL-IVANTING

Picnic with romance

In most countries I'm not so gung-ho over eating on the ground, but the French Riviera with its fantastic bread, wine, blue skies and soft air filled with the scent of eucalyptus was invented for picnickers.

Yet who in his right mind wants to buck the insane traffic along the Cote d'Azur to get out into the countryside?

All that is over now, though. At last I've found a way to do it without a car, or even a taxi.

Do your marketing in Cannes at any one of the little produce oases on side streets running perpendicular to the Croisette where most of the hotels are located. Then walk across the street to the dock on Boulevard de Mer, board a tour boat and sail to St. Marguerite Island. It will take about half-an-hour to reach one of the loveliest picnic spots in France.

IN THE fifth century when knights clanked around in armor and vessels were powered by galley slaves, this tiny island that rises from the Mediterranean like a green plume acquired a poetic legend. St. Marguerite for whom it was named had a brother, St. Honorat, who lived in a monastery on a nearby island that bears his name. His order forbade the presence of women on his island, so Marguerite used to im-basket and, later, the fern carpeted ground. (The locals won't be able to tell you from a native.)

After your picnic and a hike through the woods, return to the main trail that leads up to the old fortress that crowns a cliff overlooking the sea.

THIS WAS the scene of one of history's most fascinating mysteries. Built by Richelieu in the 17th century, the fortress was used in 1687 to imprison the famous "Man in An Iron Mask." In his classic novel, Alexandre Dumas toys with the idea that the mystery man was the twin brother of Louis XIV who had tried to have himself substituted for the king. Whoever he was, the Man in the Iron Mask died in 1703, still not identified.

In the fortress you can stand in his cell and look out from the tiny barred window at a view of Cannes, with sail boats fluttering across the blue Mediterranean. I like to think that the romantic prisoner, whoever he was, would delight in the pleasure that lovely St. Marguerite gives freedom-loving picnickers today.

plore him by messenger to come visit her at the nunnery.

Having renounced the world, Honorat refused until finally, in response to a particularly touching appeal, he promised to come once a year when the almond-blossoms bloomed.

Estatic over that prospect, Marguerite prayed so fervently that an almond tree she had planted on the shore proceeded to burst into bloom each and every month. Confronted with such a miracle, how could St. Honorat be expected to stand by his ascetic resolutions?

WINDING trails that cut through eucalyptus and umbrella pine lead to a plethora of romantic glens just designed for picnicking. Some have views of the rugged coastline looking out to sea. Others are as quiet and shadowy as a monk's retreat. There also are picnic areas with tables and a restaurant.

When you plan your picnic, do it in style. Wicker baskets for carrying bread, cheese, wine and fruit are sold in market stalls all over France. Then pick up a red and white checked cotton cloth to cover the

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Help for working parents

DEAR MR. SMITH: I don't fully understand the reasons, but in 1974 and 1975 we received very little benefit when we tried to deduct nursery school and other expenses for our two children. Our expenses are even greater for 1976, since my husband and I had jobs most of the year. Does the new tax law help us? — C.C.O.

The new child-and-dependent care credit may help you substantially. The old harsh rules, that eliminated any benefit if your income exceeded a specified amount, or if one of the spouses worked part-time, or was attending school, have been eliminated or greatly softened. Instead of the itemized deduction as required under previous law, for the year 1976 you will receive a credit directly against your federal income tax. It will amount to 20 per cent of your child care expenses, but not more than $400 for one child, or $800 for two or more children. And the credit is not lost or reduced, simply because you elect the standard deduction, rather than itemize your actual deductions.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I am an outside salesman working out of my home, where I have two rooms set aside for sample displays, office equipment, records, and facilities for customers who prefer to do their buying away from their own places of business. I have deducted depreciation and other expenses in proportion to the area set aside for business. Internal Revenue audited me twice and allowed these deductions. Do I deduct the same items for 1976, or does the new tax change this? — J.L.S.

There are stricter requirements under the Tax Reform Act, making it more difficult to claim home-used-for-business expenses. Your facts should meet the requirements, since your home is your principal place of business where you regularly see your customers. There must be no personal use of the business area. If you work as an employee, rather than independent contractor, be prepared to show that your office-in-home is at your employer's request, and for his convenience.

DEAR MR. SMITH: This year I have a loss of $1,600 on commodity futures. Also, I have bought land for development for $28,500 with $6,000 down. Where do I stand on my tax gain loss reporting for this year? — A.C.

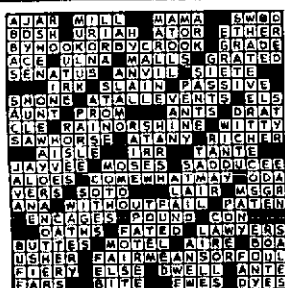

Enter your loss on commodity futures on Form 1040, Schedule D, along with any other capital gains or losses you may have. The cost of the land you bought is not deductible. But if you paid any interest for 1976, or if you paid any property taxes, you can list those with other itemized deductions. However, there are new limitations on the deduction of interest and taxes during construction which might apply.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My husband and I each have children from a previous marriage. I give my children $3,000 each, every year. My husband does the same for his children, and we have never had to send in reports to Internal Revenue. Have these rules been changed? Suppose we wanted to give them larger gifts? — G.G.

There will still be no filing requirements if you make gifts to each child in 1977, limited to $3,000. Under the old law, if, for example, you had given them $4,000 each in January, 1976, a federal gift tax return would have been due May 15, 1976, covering the first quarter of 1976. The same $4,000 gifts in January, 1977, need not be reported to IRS until Feb. 15, 1978. A quarterly gift tax return will now be required only when all gifts in excess of the $3,000 exclusions add up to more than $25,000.

If you and your husband each consent, in returns to be filed, you may consider 50 per cent of each gift to have been made by the other so that gifts of $6,000 could be made to each child without incurring any federal gift tax or involving any lifetime exemption or credit. If your gift is subject to state gift tax, verify the State's rules.

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Help for working parents

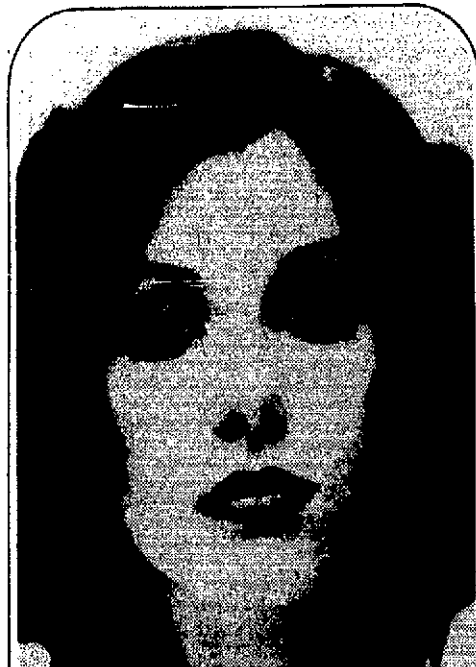

DEAR MR. SMITH: I don't fully understand the reasons, but in 1974 and 1975 we received very little benefit when we tried to deduct nursery school and other expenses for our two children. Our expenses are even greater for 1976, since my husband and I had jobs most of the year. Does the new tax law help us? — C.C.O.

The new child-and-dependent care credit may help you substantially. The old harsh rules, that eliminated any benefit if your income exceeded a specified amount, or if one of the spouses worked part-time, or was attending school, have been eliminated or greatly softened. Instead of the itemized deduction as required under previous law, for the year 1976 you will receive a credit directly against your federal income tax. It will amount to 20 per cent of your child care expenses, but not more than $400 for one child, or $800 for two or more children. And the credit is not lost or reduced, simply because you elect the standard deduction, rather than itemize your actual deductions.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I am an outside salesman working out of my home, where I have two rooms set aside for sample displays, office equipment, records, and facilities for customers who prefer to do their buying away from their own places of business. I have deducted depreciation and other expenses in proportion to the area set aside for business. Internal Revenue audited me twice and allowed these deductions. Do I deduct the same items for 1976, or does the new tax change this? — J.L.S.

There are stricter requirements under the Tax Reform Act, making it more difficult to claim home-used-for-business expenses. Your facts should meet the requirements, since your home is your principal place of business where you regularly see your customers. There must be no personal use of the business area. If you work as an employee, rather than independent contractor, be prepared to show that your office-in-home is at your employer's request, and for his convenience.

DEAR MR. SMITH: This year I have a loss of $1,600 on commodity futures. Also, I have bought land for development for $28,500 with $6,000 down. Where do I stand on my tax gain loss reporting for this year? — A.C.

Enter your loss on commodity futures on Form 1040, Schedule D, along with any other capital gains or losses you may have. The cost of the land you bought is not deductible. But if you paid any interest for 1976, or if you paid any property taxes, you can list those with other itemized deductions. However, there are new limitations on the deduction of interest and taxes during construction which might apply.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My husband and I each have children from a previous marriage. I give my children $3,000 each, every year. My husband does the same for his children, and we have never had to send in reports to Internal Revenue. Have these rules been changed? Suppose we wanted to give them larger gifts? — G.G.

There will still be no filing requirements if you make gifts to each child in 1977, limited to $3,000. Under the old law, if, for example, you had given them $4,000 each in January, 1976, a federal gift tax return would have been due May 15, 1976, covering the first quarter of 1976. The same $4,000 gifts in January, 1977, need not be reported to IRS until Feb. 15, 1978. A quarterly gift tax return will now be required only when all gifts in excess of the $3,000 exclusions add up to more than $25,000.

If you and your husband each consent, in returns to be filed, you may consider 50 per cent of each gift to have been made by the other so that gifts of $6,000 could be made to each child without incurring any federal gift tax or involving any lifetime exemption or credit. If your gift is subject to state gift tax, verify the State's rules.

After big buildup, are Vikings, Raiders going to be Superdull?

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

A week of hard-won rhetoric has left only one matter to be settled concerning Super Bowl XI: Who will win, the Oakland Raiders or the Minnesota Vikings?

Everything else is known. The Raiders are favored by 4 points. Fred Biletnikoff smokes two packs a day, four on game days.

Ken Stabler hates looking at game films. NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle is watching George Atkinson, the infamous assassin.

Coach John Madden uses a three-man defensive line, which is one less than a four-man line. The Raiders fit their image of a football player with an eyepatch on a backdrop of crossed swords.

The Raiders also have more fun. If the Vikings blow their fourth Super Bowl, they will adopt the image of a choking pigeon.

Bud Grant's wife escaped the snowdrifts of Albuquerque. Chuck Foreman will sulk in '77 if he doesn't get more money.

Fran Tarkenton's passing arm is either sore or found. If Sammie White catches a touchdown pass, he will not spike the football.

A muddy field would favor either the Raiders or Vikings, depending on whose coach is moaning. Kickoff is scheduled for 12:30 at the Rose Bowl.

heretofore a bastion of amateurism. Spectators—a sellout was declared at 103,424—are advised to arrive early because there won't be many places to park.

If they can't make it, the game will be on local TV, and more than a thousand media people will be there to tell them about it.

The winners will receive $15,000 each and the Vince Lombardi Trophy; the losers will have to be consoled by $7,500 apiece.

By order of the commissioner, the rainclouds were to be out of town by sunup. The field, in poorer shape than usual before the storms, has been covered but would be a mudhole should heavy rains arrive at game time.

ROBERTS' ROUSER: Raiders XXI, Vikings XIV

Grant, the Viking coach, concedes a slow track advantage to Madden, who rejects it.

Popular opinion rests with the Oakland coach, who has nobody the equal of Foreman, who will be the best running back on the field, rain or shine. In all other major areas the teams are relatively equal, talent for talent.

They are coming into the game in good health—Tarkenton and Grant both refute rumors that the quarterback has arm trouble—and in good form.

The Raiders, champions of the American Conference by virtue of their impressive 24-7 win over two-time NFL champion Pittsburgh, have lost only once, 48-17 at New England in the fourth game of the season. They won a few closes one early, but haven't been pressed for two months in running off their dozen consecutive wins.

The Vikings admit they are lucky to be here as National Conference winners for the third time in four years after disposing of the suicidal Rams, 24-13, at Bloomington.

But they also have shaken off some late-season lethargy with four consecutive wins, all comfortable.

Their only test will be to see if they remain shackled by the memory of previous failures in Super Bowls IV, VIII and IX. In those games, they performed like paralyzed valetudinarians, never managing to score more than seven points.

Grant has been saying all week that it will be different this time.

"It won't be a 14-10 game," he says. "The quarterbacks are two of the best in the game."

"The game plan is a facade. It simply consists of doing what you have done best all year."

Both clubs have passed best, although Foreman and Oakland's Mark van Eeghen did rush for more than a 1,000 yards.

Both quarterbacks have strong receivers, although Stabler's are more versatile.

But Foreman is the best coming out of the backfield.

But Minnesota's defensive line is too old. But so is Willie Brown, the Oakland cornerback. But...

49er rally misses by a point, 79-78

By JIM MCCORMACK
Staff Writer

As a comeback, it lacked only one thing — another basket.

Long Beach State, trailing 77-70 with a minute to play, scored eight points in 25 seconds Saturday night before dropping a spectacular, 79-78 decision to Arizona State before 7,720 emotionally-drained Long Beach Arena witnesses.

While the rally went for naught, it at least scared the devil out of Arizona State coach Ned Wulk, particularly when 49er freshman Michael Wiley hit a 25-foot shot at the buzzer to account for the intersectional contest's final points.

"In the confusion of those last seconds I kind of lost track of the score," admitted Wulk. "and when that shot went in, my heart stopped for a second. I thought the game was tied."

Unfortunately for the 49ers, it was one point shy of a tie, and instead of getting five more minutes to seek their 11th win of the season they were saddled with their fourth loss.

The triumph, improved Arizona State's record to 8-5.

Long Beach State coach Dwight Jones was understandably pleased with his team's comeback attempt and disappointed in the loss, only the 49ers' fifth in their last 107 home games.

"I was really proud of the way a couple of the kids never gave up in the last two minutes," said

Jones. "but I told the team that there are no moral victories in basketball, only wins and losses."

"If we had played with the same intensity we had in the last minute of the game during the first half or early in the second half, we wouldn't have lost."

Respecting the power-game talents of Arizona State's 6-8 Mark Landsberger and 6-8 Larry Zeno, Jones had the 49ers in a full-court man pressure alignment, and then had them drop back into a 1-2-2 zone.

"I was worried about the match-up problems we would have against Zeno and Landsberger in a man defense," explained Jones.

Anatomy of a headache

Arizona State's Mark Landsberger, with eyes closed and a hand raised to his brow, appears to be picture of frustration as he loses battle for rebound to Long Beach

State's Lloyd McMillian. Observing Landsberger's plight is teammate and former Poly High star Johnny Nash. Sun Devils won intersectional clash, 79-78.

UCLA takes it out on Beavers

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

With visions of Oregon fresh in their minds, UCLA's Bruins outscored Oregon State, 13-4, over the final four minutes Saturday night to register an 83-66 victory, their first in Pacific-8 Conference play this season.

At a time when the Bruins turned passive the previous night, they became aggressive Saturday. With little Jimmy Spillane leading the way, they pressed the Beavers all over the court.

The result was four turnovers that swung UCLA's precarious three-point lead into an unbeatable 17-point bulge at the final buzzer.

There was no doubt among the announced crowd of 12,127 that the Bruins play better when they're hawking the opposition and performing in perpetual motion. Any objectors had only to ask David Greenwood.

"We're supposed to be a pressing, fastbreaking club," said the 6-9 forward following his 19-point, 10-rebound effort. "Everytime we slow down and run our plays, the games are always close. We can break open any game when we press and fastbreak.

Conflicts of interest: A burgeoning menace

By GERALD ESKENAZI
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — This is the age of overlap in sports, once a series of tight little islands of free enterprise. Here are some recent developments:

• A Los Angeles real estate man has pieces of three franchises in the World Team Tennis league.

• The Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League allow Bobby Orr to go to the Chicago Black Hawks, who hope to stimulate attendance in dingy old Chicago Stadium. The stadium's concessionaire, who will benefit from Orr's arrival, is part of the family that owns the Bruins.

• The head of a major cable-television outfit, who owns the Lakers, sends his lawyers to negotiate with a rival, CBS, for a television deal with the National Basketball Association.

These cases in recent months highlight a subject of growing concern in the sports community: the conflict of interest. Is it real? Are the fans being hurt? And who is supposed to draw the line — the government, or the sports themselves?

Only yesterday, it seems, sport was a family enterprise with business conducted in informal surroundings. There was little room for overlapping. The most flagrant conflict of interest was in the NHL — which some contended really was the Norris House League, because the Norris family controlled three teams. But that ended after a while, and hockey, like the other major sports, had a long period of easily defined ownership.

Of course, there was an inherent conflict in being the commissioner of any sport: you were paid by the owners to police them and their game. But few athletes complained, and few owners complained.

The world of sports grew more complicated after the extraordinary mushrooming of leagues, teams, television, fan interest, money, lawyers and accountants. This complexity was typified in the Cleveland offices of Mark McCormack, agent of the superstars. At one point he represented several NBA players who were trying to get more money out of management. Yet, someone in his office also was hired by the NBA owners to work out a television deal.

There is also Bob Woolf, the fabulously successful lawyer from Boston (his 200 clients will earn $13 million this year), who, having negotiated contracts for Boston Bruin players with Milt Schmidt, the general manager, then represented Schmidt when Schmidt moved on to Washington.

Arthur Morse, a respected lawyer from Chicago who is counsel to the Black Hawks and also represents athletes from other sports, says, "The rules of civilized practice do not apply in sport."

What may be unethical according to legal canons is winked at often in the sports world. For example, a lawyer generally may not solicit business, but college superstars are regularly approached by lawyers.

Further, consider that Larry King, husband of Billie Jean King, is president of the WTT team she plays for, the New York Apples, that he also has pieces of two other clubs and that he is director of the league's endorsements division.

"It's not as if Larry is taking the money from both ends and hurting people," contends a friend. "It's just that he's protecting his interests from both ends."

Indeed, so is Jerry Buss, the Californian who also is involved in three WTT clubs. If Buss didn't have pieces of three franchises, who would? Who else wants to lose money?

"I have no conflict," says Larry Fleisher, the counsel for the NBA Players Association. He also represents, individually, such stars as Spencer Haywood and Earl Monroe.

"Who raises the question of conflict?" he says. "Owners and my competitors."

Of the players' unions in the four major sports — baseball, football, basketball and hockey — the lawyers for two take individual clients from the sport. Alan Eagleson handles hockey players. But Marvin Miller will not accept baseball players, and Ed Garvey will not take football players.

The energetic Jack Kent Cooke runs the NBA's Lakers, the NHL's Kings — and TelePrompster, which is heavily involved in cable television. Presumably, cable television is not in the best interests of network television. Yet Cooke's lawyers handled the CBS-NBA deal, because Cooke was an executive of the league's television committee.

And other questions could be raised; is it not in Cooke's interests for the Islanders, for example, to do well, since they are seen on the cable-television network? Does this mean that the Kings might be induced to sell to the Islanders a player who would increase the television audience if the situation warranted? In fact, TelePrompster has lent money to the Islanders' owner, Roy Boe, to enable him to keep his Nets basketball team alive. And Bill Jennings, president of the Islanders' metropolitan-area rival, the Rangers, is a member of the TelePrompster board.

49er rally misses by a point, 79-78

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

As a comeback, it lacked only one thing — another basket.

Long Beach State, trailing 77-70 with a minute to play, scored eight points in 25 seconds Saturday night before dropping a spectacular, 79-78 decision to Arizona State before 7,720 emotionally-drained Long Beach Arena witnesses.

While the rally went for naught, it at least scared the devil out of Arizona State coach Ned Wulk, particularly when 49er freshman Michael Wiley hit a 25-foot shot at the buzzer to account for the inter-sectional contest's final points.

"In the confusion of those last seconds I kind of lost track of the score," admitted Wulk, "and when that shot went in, my heart stopped for a second. I thought the game was tied."

Unfortunately for the 49ers, it was one point shy of a tie, and instead of getting five more minutes to seek their 11th win of the season they were saddled with their fourth loss.

The triumph, improved Arizona State's record to 8-5.

Long Beach State coach Dwight Jones was understandably pleased with his team's comeback attempt and disappointed in the loss, only the 49ers' fifth in their last 107 home games.

"I was really proud of the way a couple of the kids never gave up in the last two minutes," said

Jones, "but I told the team that there are no moral victories in basketball, only wins and losses."

"If we had played with the same intensity we had in the last minute of the game during the first half or early in the second half, we wouldn't have lost."

Respecting the power-game talents of Arizona State's 6-8 Mark Landsberger and 6-8 Larry Zeno, Jones had the 49ers in a full-court man pressure alignment, and then had them drop back into a 1-2-2 zone.

"I was worried about the match-up problems we would have against Zeno and Landsberger in a man defense," explained Jones,

Anatomy of a headache

Arizona State's Mark Landsberger, with eyes closed and a hand raised to his brow, appears to be picture of frustration as he loses battle for rebound to Long Beach

State's Lloyd McMillian. Observing Landsberger's plight is teammate and former Poly High star Johnny Nash. Sun Devils won inter-sectional clash, 79-78.

UCLA takes it out on Beavers

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

With visions of Oregon fresh in their minds, UCLA's Bruins out-scored Oregon State, 13-4, over the final four minutes Saturday night to register an 83-66 victory, their first in Pacific-8 Conference play this season.

At a time when the Bruins turned passive the previous night, they became aggressive Saturday. With little Jimmy Spillane leading the way, they pressed the Beavers all over the court.

The result was four turnovers that swung UCLA's precarious three-point lead into an unbeatable 17-point bulge at the final buzzer.

There was no doubt among the announced crowd of 12,127 that the Bruins play better when they're hawking the opposition and performing in perpetual motion. Any objectors had only to ask David Greenwood.

"We're supposed to be a pressing, fast-breaking club," said the 6-9 forward following his 19-point, 10-rebound effort. "Everytime we slow down and run our plays, the games are always close. We can break open any game when we press and fastbreak.

Conflicts of interest: A burgeoning menace

By GERALD ESKENAZI
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — This is the age of overlap in sports, once a series of tight little islands of free enterprise. Here are some recent developments:

• A Los Angeles real estate man has pieces of three franchises in the World Team Tennis league.

• The Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League allow Bobby Orr to go to the Chicago Black Hawks, who hope to stimulate attendance in dingy old Chicago Stadium. The stadium's concessionaire, who will benefit from Orr's arrival, is part of the family that owns the Bruins.

• The head of a major cable-television outfit, who owns the Lakers, sends his lawyers to negotiate with a rival, CBS, for a television deal with the National Basketball Association.

These cases in recent months highlight a subject of growing concern in the sports community: the conflict of interest. Is it real? Are the fans being hurt? And who is supposed to draw the line — the government, or the sports themselves?

Only yesterday, it seems, sport was a family enterprise, with business conducted in informal surroundings. There was little room for overlapping. The most flagrant conflict of interest was in the NHL — which some contended really was the Norris House League, because the Norris family controlled three teams. But that ended after a while, and hockey, like the other major sports, had a long period of easily defined ownership.

Of course, there was an inherent conflict in being the commissioner of any sport: you were paid by the owners to police them and their game. But few athletes complained, and few owners complained.

The world of sports grew more complicated after the extraordinary mushrooming of leagues, teams, television, fan interest, money, lawyers and accountants. This complexity was typified in the Cleveland offices of Mark McCormack, agent of the superstars. At one point he represented several NBA players who were trying to get more money out of management. Yet, someone in his office also was hired by the NBA owners to work out a television deal.

There is also Bob Woolf, the fabulously successful lawyer from Boston (his 200 clients will earn $13 million this year), who, having negotiated contracts for Boston Bruin players with Milt Schmidt, the general manager, then represented Schmidt when Schmidt moved on to Washington.

Arthur Morse, a respected lawyer from Chicago

who is counsel to the Black Hawks and also represents athletes from other sports, says, "The rules of civilized practice do not apply in sport."

What may be unethical according to legal canons is winked at often in the sports world. For example, a lawyer generally may not solicit business, but college superstars are regularly approached by lawyers.

Further, consider that Larry King, husband of Billie Jean King, is president of the WTT team she plays for, the New York Apples, that he also has pieces of two other clubs and that he is director of the league's endorsements division.

"It's not as if Larry is taking the money from both ends and hurting people," contends a friend. "It's just that he's protecting his interests from both ends."

Indeed, so is Jerry Buss, the Californian who also is involved in three WTT clubs. If Buss didn't have pieces of three franchises, who would? Who else wants to lose money?

"I have no conflict," says Larry Fleisher, the counsel for the NBA Players Association. He also represents, individually, such stars as Spencer Haywood and Earl Monroe.

"Who raises the question of conflict?" he says. "Owners and my competitors."

Of the players' unions in the four major sports — baseball, football, basketball and hockey — the lawyers for two take individual clients from the sport. Alan Eagleson handles hockey players. But Marvin Miller will not accept baseball players, and Ed Garvey will not take football players.

The energetic Jack Kent Cooke runs the NBA's Lakers, the NHL's Kings — and TelePrompster, which is heavily involved in cable television. Presumably, cable television is not in the best interests of network television. Yet Cooke's lawyers handled the CBS-NBA deal, because Cooke was an executive of the league's television committee.

And other questions could be raised; is it not in Cooke's interests for the Islanders, for example, to do well, since they are seen on the cable-television network? Does this mean that the Kings might be induced to sell to the Islanders a player who would increase the television audience if the situation warranted? In fact, TelePrompster has lent money to the Islanders' owner, Roy Boe, to enable him to keep his Nets basketball team alive. And Bill Jennings, president of the Islanders' metropolitan-area rival, the Rangers, is a member of the TelePrompster board.

Same ol' tune; comeback fizzles for Troy, 64-52

By LOEL SCHRADER Staff Writer

It was the same song, only a little verse.

After making a run at Oregon midway through the second half, USC suddenly found itself in a position to win a Pacific-8 Conference basketball game Saturday night at the L.A. Sports Arena.

But the Trojans succumbed to the excitement of occasion, permitting the Ducks to pull away to a 64-52 victory before an estimated 3,000 fans.

It was the second night in a row that the Trojans had blown a splendid opportunity to snap a league losing streak that has grown to 16 games over two seasons. They had expired in similar fashion while dropping a 58-50 decision to Oregon State on Friday night.

"I think it would help our team if we'd complete some of these runs and get some wins," said USC coach Bob Boyd, understating a deteriorating situation.

Forward Greg Ballard, who had been the hero of Oregon's 61-60 upset of UCLA on Friday night, scored 21 points in the first half as the Ducks cruised to a 34-25 advantage.

But guards Marv Safford and Casey Jones led a Trojan comeback that pared Oregon's lead to 42-36 seven minutes into the second half, and the Ducks were beginning to wobble.

Ballard went to the bench for a rest and USC center Mark Hoisington hit two consecutive baskets to pull the Trojans within two of the Ducks at 42-40.

But that was the last gasp for the Trojans, who have a 3-10 and have lost 25 of 28 games over two seasons.

Ernie Kent, Rob Closs and Gary Nelson pulled the Ducks together until Ballard could return to provide stability. Within four minutes, Oregon was comfortably ahead, 54-44, and USC never got closer than six the rest of the way.

Ballard concluded with 27 points.

USC, which shot only .426 per cent, was paced by Marv Safford's 10 points. Hoisington, who improves with each game, contributed eight points and seven rebounds.

"Oregon is the best team we've faced," said Boyd. "They have fine athletes and good direction to their offense. They're also the most effective defensive team we've met."

The Trojans go to the Bay Area next weekend, and if they don't win one there, the dry spell could last until Cal and Stanford pay return visits on Feb. 24 and 26.

In other words, it could be a long, cold winter.

RAY GUY...doing his thing and doing it well

Ray Guy: hardly your average NFL punter

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

This first thing one notices about Ray Guy, the Oakland punter, is that he doesn't look like a punter.

He looks like an athlete. He's tall, handsome, well-built, and has powerful arms.

"This is hardly your average NFL punter. But, then, Ray Guy is hardly your average NFL punter, either.

He is so good, it is said, that he just might be the difference against the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl XI today at the Rose Bowl.

Not impressed? Well, try this. He's the first man to hit the gondola hanging high over the Superdome in New Orleans — with a punt, yet!

"Ah, that weren't nuthin'," he said in his best Swainsboro, Georgia, drawl. "That thing's only 95 feet high."

Ninety-five feet! That's darned near as high as a 10-story building.

YOU BEGIN to see what Minnesota is up against. The Vikings harassed the Rams all afternoon two weeks ago, blocking field goals and punts with the ease of a bunch of guys swatting flies.

But Ray Guy is another story. To begin with, he's never had a punt blocked. Never. One reason is the Raiders' offensive linemen. They may hold, kick, gouge and everything else, but at least with Guy, they don't have to do it too long.

He gets his kicks off fast, so fast you'd swear he carries an extra ball onto the field with him.

"Two seconds," he says when asked just how long he needs. Some guys you can time with a calendar.

Ray Guy is the epitome of the new breed in pro football, a heretofore overlooked and much-maligned group known as "special teams."

"The biggest improvement in the game since I came into the league 10 years ago," acknowledges coach John Madden, "is the upgrading of special teams."

"There used to be a lull in the game. You know, it's fourth down and your team is punting so it was time for fans to go get a beer or go to the bathroom.

"No more. It's as important as offense and defense. We work on our special teams every day in practice. Oh, yeah, I know a lot of teams say that they do, but that's just a lot of lip service. We really do it."

AN EXAMPLE of just how vital special team players are for the Raiders: they drafted Guy No. 1 in 1973. While other teams were going for glamor quarterbacks and big name running backs on the first round, the Raiders went for a punter.

"We needed a punter," Madden explains with a good deal of logic, "so we drafted one."

In college, at Southern Mississippi, Guy not only was a punter, but a defensive back, field-goal kicker, backup quarterback and an outstanding pitcher on the baseball team. He was such a good pitcher, in fact, he was drafted while still in high school.

He says it wasn't the money that made him choose football over baseball.

"I liked football better. Anyway, I don't think I'd like being away from home for 81 road games or whatever it is plus a month of spring training and all that."

QUIET, easy-going and very polite, Ray Guy somehow doesn't quite fit the prototype of your basic Oakland Raider. That is, he'd rather raise horses than bat on 'em.

For example, when he was in college, while playing in the defensive backfield, he suffered a broken leg. It was the final game of his college career and he had already been invited to play in the Senior Bowl.

"The guy from the Senior Bowl called me two days later and said I could come anyway," he recalled. "But, heck, I couldn't do that."

Now, how many other guys would have turned down an expense-paid weekend, even in Mobile, Ala.?

After today he might be able to afford several big weekends. Like his coach, he says the special teams are as important as any other phase of the game. "It's not just half offense and half defense anymore," he says. "It's one-third offense, one-third defense and one-third special teams."

He says he didn't have as good of a punting average this season as he would have liked — 41.6 yards compared with a career average of 43.7 — but he is pleased with his contributions.

"I helped the Raiders," he says. "I put the opposing team in the hole plenty of times."

SUPER BOWL XI
"The Battle of the Bridesmaids"
Minnesota (13-2-1) vs. Oakland (15-1)

Rose Bowl, Channel 4, KTNQ-radio, 12:30 p.m.

HISTORY — Since 1970 merger of National and American Football Leagues, Minnesota has compiled best regular-season record — 75-22-1. Oakland is second at 71-21-6. Vikings have won NFC-Central eight of last nine years. Oakland has won five consecutive AFC-West titles and has been in the playoffs nine of last 10 years. Minnesota only team ever to compete in four Super Bowls — lost previous three to Kansas City (23-7), 1970; Miami (24-7), 1974; Pittsburgh (16-6), 1975. Oakland lost its only Super Bowl appearance to Green Bay, 33-14, in 1968. Four Raiders who participated in that game (Biletnikoff, Upshaw, Banaszak and Brown) still play prominent roles for Oakland. Eighteen players on Vikings' 43-man roster were on the club that lost to Pittsburgh in Super Bowl IX two years ago. Respective records against common opponents: Oakland beat Pittsburgh twice, 31-28 and 24-7; Minnesota, without Tarkenton, defeated Steelers, 17-6. The Vikings beat Green Bay, 17-10 and 20-9; Oakland edged the Packers, 18-14. The Raiders shaded Chicago, 28-27, on a controversial play; Minnesota split one-point decisions with the Bears, winning 20-19 and losing 14-13. Both defeated Philadelphia by 19 points. Minnesota 31-12, Oakland 26-7. The AFC champion has won the last four Super Bowls. Until last year's game, Super Bowl history was oblivious to the importance of the pregame point spread. In eight of the previous nine games, the winning team, whether it was the favorite or underdog, won by seven points or more. When Dallas beat the spread against Pittsburgh last year, it marked the first time the favorite had won the game but did not cover the points. During '76 season Oakland compiled its best point-spread record in years, 10-6; Minnesota's over-all point-spread record was 7-7.

THE CASE FOR AND AGAINST MINNESOTA

Despite a somewhat fortuitous victory over the mistake-plagued Rams, the Vikings enter the fray with 14 consecutive quarters of solid football (beginning with the second half of the Green Bay game). Although team did not appear offensively crisp against Rams, it must be remembered the Ram defense just might be the fiercest in the NFL next to Pittsburgh's. The knock against Minnesota is a secondary that is suspect — especially deep — despite a competent completion allowance of 48.3 per cent. The aging "Purple People Eaters" still represent the strength of the team, although DE Eller, perhaps a step slower now, is the man opposing teams like to pick on. Linebacking, highly respected with Siemon, Blair and Hilgenberg. (Ailing Siemon should be 100 per cent.) The offense possesses an arsenal of weapons, including the NFL's most versatile back, Foreman, and the 16-year vet Tarkenton, one of the savviest quarterbacks ever to play the game. Offensive line is solid. WRs Rashad and White lethal receiving threats and TE Voight real pro. Tarkenton threw only eight interceptions during regular season and had one streak of 155 passes without a theft. Generally conceded to be the best Viking team ever. Good blend of experience and youth. Defense has reputation for bending but not breaking, especially inside its own 10-yard line. But a closer inspection into the record contradicts. Of the 22 touchdowns scored against Minnesota in regular season, 16 originated inside the 10, and 14 of those started from the three-yard line or closer. Super productive as the Oakland pair, Al and Mac, are, the Vikings' offense, though not as well as Oakland's Guy, has proven to be one of more capable kickers around.

THE CASE FOR AND AGAINST OAKLAND

Brilliantly conceived and executed passing game, featuring the NFL's most accurate quarterback, Stabler, and a trio of smooth, stylish receivers in Branch, Biletnikoff and Casper. The running backs tend to be underrated without a glamorous superstar. But Van Eeghen, Davis and Banaszak are tough and durable. Van Eeghen rushed for 1,012 yards. The important role that Oakland's special teams play cannot be underestimated. Guy is tremendous punter. Colzie and Jennings rank among better kick returners, and these units consistently help Raiders maintain good field position. Oakland, its 15-1 record notwithstanding, has not been a "marginal" team — six of its 15 wins were by four points or less, not an inconsequential point, considering the 4-point spread favoring the Raiders here. Offensive line does outstanding job protecting Stabler, though New England sacked him four times in first-round playoff game. Makeshift three-man line (Matuszak, Rowe and Sistrunk), though suffering from lack of identity, play with spirit and coordinate well with powerful Raider linebacking corps. However, Oakland may have to make some adjustments to apply more pressure on Tarkenton. Though essentially a passing team, Stabler's 667 is highest NFL percentage ever in fact remaining it was Oakland's ground attack which dictated ball-control tempo against Pittsburgh's vaunted defense, rushing 51 times for 181 yards. Curiously, however, one week earlier the Raider ground attack was stalled by the Patriots, gaining only 81 yards on 24 carries. Though Oakland is normally a warm-weather team because of its passing game, we are not so certain that playing in Pasadena, away from the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, where strange things happen (to the opposition), will work to its advantage.

THE OLSHAN VERDICT

Two critical factors here likely to determine the outcome. They revolve around Oakland's ability to inhibit Minnesota's short passing game and contain the rushing of Foreman. Minnesota, meanwhile, must concern itself with stopping Oakland's controlled passing game and force the Raiders to run. Minnesota will have to exert extreme pressure on Stabler. The heavily-experienced Viking defense is equipped to take away those all too common 16-for-18 and 18-for-22 performances. "The Snake" is famous for. While the quarterbacks are diverse in their talents and style, the other departments of play are relatively even...that is, the offensive and defensive line, kicking game, etc. The major difference may be the presence of Foreman. He is the super back who can decide an otherwise dead-even game. Psychologically, though, on paper neither team has a reputation for winning the big game. Minnesota's more frequent, and recent, appearances, have to work in its favor. Oakland would appear to be the more explosive, but we're inclined to believe this more superficial than real. We see no reason in the relative matchups that warrant Oakland being established a 4-point favorite. A Cox field goal for the Vikes would mean Oakland would have to counter by scoring twice (one a touchdown) to overcome the spread. No easy task in a game which is traditionally played very close to the vest. The irrepressible Tarkenton and the athletically ancient, but emotional, Minnesota defensive mainstays will never have a better opportunity to win the ultimate prize.

PREDICTION: MINNESOTA 20, OAKLAND 17

Rashad's odyssey ends at Super XI

"You have to play in a controlled type of frenzy. The philosophy is that it takes two men to hold a normal person down and 10 men to hold a crazy person down. So if we play crazy, they won't have enough guys on their team to hold us down."

— Ahmad Rashad.

A pair of long limousines back up to the gate at Blair Field, where the Minnesota Vikings are preparing for the Super Bowl.

Hm, an observer muses, must be here to pick up the team's owners when practice is finished.

But in a few minutes several players, showered and dressed, burst out of the gate and clamber into the cars, led by Ahmad Rashad, the wide receiver.

My, how Ahmad has come up in the world. Not only has he leased a limo for Super Bowl week but his Rolls Royce is parked back at the hotel, in case he has to run out for razor blades and the chauffeur has gone off duty.

A year ago Rashad had just finished the season in Buffalo. Well, he didn't really finish it because he never got started. He injured a knee in the last practice game and spent the rest of the season rehabilitating himself from surgery with Dr. Robert Kerlan in Los Angeles.

Not only that, but he had played out his option with the Bills—hardly an ideal bargaining position. Understandably, the club didn't see fit to meet his request for a raise, so he went home to the Great Northwest and signed with an expansion club, the Seattle Seahawks.

THE BILLS and Seahawks won four games between them this season, yet Rashad winds up in Super Bowl XI today, the most amazing triple play of the year.

"I'm glad to be here," he says with a smile—Rashad hasn't stopped smiling all week, "but I don't think they (the Seahawks) had in their mind they were sending me to the Super Bowl."

RICH ROBERTS

The Hawks traded Rashad to Minnesota at the end of pre-season.

Jack (coach Pat) called me and said, 'I've just traded you to Minnesota. You don't know it now, but you're really going to enjoy it.' He was absolutely right.

"It's been like a whirlwind. I haven't had time to even look back on it. I'm waiting until the Super Bowl's over."

But Rashad recalls that "a year ago today I was sitting around talking to O.J. about how good we (the Bills) were going to be next year when we got our team together."

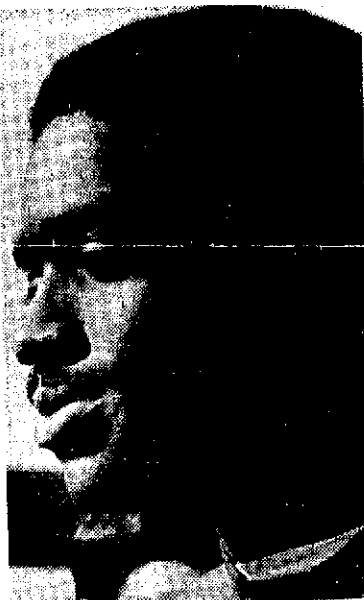

"About three months later it wasn't Buffalo anymore; it was Seattle, and I'm talking to Jim Zorn. We're playing catch and trying to get ready to go with the Seahawks. Now I'm sitting here talking about the Super Bowl with the Minnesota Vikings."

"It's the most exciting moment in my life. Guys dream of playing in Super Bowls. Pressure? I would never let pressure destroy that. When you get a chance, you can't let anything get in the way of you performing to the best of your ability."

RASHAD LOOKS around at the mass of media and feels the electricity in the air.

"The Turkey Day Game was never nothin' like this! That's the last championship game I've been in."

In 1967, when Rashad was a halfback named Bobby Moore, his Mt. Tahoma High played Stadium High for the championship of Tacoma. In some ways, that game seemed just as important.

AHMAD RASHAD
Took long way around

"We didn't have all these writers," he says, "and we stayed at home, but at that time you never think you'll end up in the Super Bowl."

Rashad—or Robert Earl Moore—went from Mt. Tahoma to the University of Oregon, where he became an all-American and was drafted No. 1 by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Against the Rams in '72, he set an NFL record by catching a 98-yard pass from Jim Hart, the longest non-scoring play in league history which, technically, can never be topped.

At Buffalo, he set another NFL record in '74 by recovering two of his own fumbles in the end zone for touchdowns.

WHATEVER RASHAD does, he seems to do with a flair. Those who knew him well were not surprised when he changed his name, although it was hardly a whim.

"I'm an orthodox muslim," he explains. "It's an Arabic religion. The religion itself is an extension of Christianity and Judaism."

"I got interested when I was a sophomore back at Oregon. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was very influential when he adopted that religion. Ahmad means 'admirable.' Rashad means 'one led to truth.'"

Rashad now sees the world in clear perspective through fairly thick glasses with rose-colored rims.

"My vision is about 20-80," he says. "I can't see very good at night. I can see images very well, and I find that by not wearing contacts or anything when I play it makes me concentrate on the ball more. Otherwise, I just squint a lot."

HE INSISTS he will not be looking for certain members of the Raiders' notorious secondary.

"I never think of one player. I look at the four players in my area and I never isolate on one guy."

"Now, George (Atkinson) I think has got some undue criticism on the way he tackles, but football is rough. I expect a good, hard, rough football game."

"I really enjoy playing against Oakland. These are guys I see all the time. Skip (Thomas) and I spent a couple of summers working out together. When we played San Francisco, Jack Tatum and Clarence Davis came over to the room and said, 'We'll probably be seeing you in the Super Bowl,' and here we are. It's all coming true."

Upshaw explains yen for political office

Oakland's all-pro guard, Gene Upshaw, says when his football days are over he's going into politics. Listen to the 10-year NFL veteran and you'll understand why.

"I'm going to run for the State Assembly from Oakland because I dig politics. What party? Democratic. Is there any other?"

"I proved I'm a leader with the Raiders. I'm a leader because Al Davis came up to me one day and said I was getting older and should be a leader. To be a good leader, though, you first have to be a good follower. I was that, too."

"I've spent my whole professional life with the Oakland Raiders and I wouldn't want to be with any other organization. Now that I'm older (31), I help our younger players. If a man's not willing to help younger players, he doesn't belong with the Raiders."

"We've got a lot of boys who played with other teams, but when Al Davis considers picking up another player, he confers with us veterans. He probably has 23 opinions, but when he gets a new man, he knows what he's getting."

MINNESOTA'S Alan Page claimed that Upshaw held on his first play of practice "and he's been holding ever since." Upshaw wasn't fazed.

"Old Alan decided the only way to let people know we'll be on the field Sunday was to start this talk about holding," said the smiling giant from Texas A&I.

"You can't buy the kind of publicity we're going to get out of this before the Super Bowl is over."

"Some guys pay a million dollars and don't get that kind of publicity. I'm getting it free. Tell Alan thank you."

But what effect will it have on the game? "It will either make us famous or it will get me a lot of holding penalties."

VIKING SAFETY Paul Krause: "(Ken) Stabler's receivers are schooled to come back for his passes. Stabler loves it that way. (Fred) Biletnikoff is the best of pass-catcher playing today. He understands Stabler and vice-versa. They are one terrific combination."

"Biletnikoff runs brilliant pass patterns and is excellent at catching a ball in traffic. If we stop Biletnikoff, we'll win. Biletnikoff, not (Cliff) Branch or (Dave) Casper, is the guy we have to stop."

PURISTS WERE jolted when Joe Namath of the New York Jets confessed in a book that he had enjoyed both a "bottle and broad" the night before he passed favored Baltimore into submission in Super Bowl III.

But Dr. Donald Fink of the Raiders says, "Sex is very minor in these players' minds at this time. They're all thinking about winning the Super Bowl. They know their wives or girl friends will be there when it's over."

"The idea of isolating the teams 24 hours before the game has nothing to do with sex. The purpose is to get the players away from distractions—their wives and kids."

"A guy intent on winning the Super Bowl is not going to have much sexual drive anyhow. It's useless when you're concerned about something else."

RAIDER DEFENSIVE back Jack Tatum, who may be the most ferocious-looking man in today's Super Bowl, says his feud with Steeler receiver Lynn Swann isn't a put-on.

"I will never have any respect for Swann," snapped Tatum, who is a close runnerup to teammate George Atkinson on the Raider villain list. "He's not a very classy guy. He isn't even a man because he cries all the time. I still don't like some of the statements he made about me."

"This thing with the Steelers just started growing. Swann and the rest of them cried to make me change my style, but that's impossible. Swann's got a good thing going, though. He swings on me all the time, but I ignore him. Yet, if I go after him, I get 15 yards."

"When I played for Woody Hayes, he taught me never to turn the other cheek. That's one philosophy of Woody's that I've never forgotten."

GEORGE ATKINSON: "After that incident where I hit Swann and the nation made a case about it, my life changed. I lost friends, or people I thought were friends, and I received hate mail."

"But I don't hate Swann. When that playoff game was over and we'd beaten the Steelers, Oakland fans ran onto the field. I grabbed Swann and escorted him off the field. I didn't know what that mob might try to do to him."

Atkinson, who runs a liquor store, races two thoroughbreds and works with kids in the off-season, probably was interviewed more often than any other Super Bowl player, except quarterbacks Ken Stabler and Fran Tarkenton. He's not happy that he's considered a "dirty" player.

"Mel Blount, Jack Lambert and Joe Greene all play the same way I do, and they're called aggressive. I'm called dirty. I'm always having to defend myself, and I don't have anything to defend myself for."

RON YARY, Minnesota's all-pro tackle, is extremely upset at TV announcers Pat Summerall and Tom Brookshier, who constantly pointed out during the NFC title game Dec. 26 that the Bellflower High grad was holding the Rams' Jack Youngblood.

"Those two guys don't know the rules," snapped Yary. "If they don't know about something, they should keep quiet. The rules were changed on holding in 1975 and apparently they haven't found out about it yet."

"I know what constitutes holding and I suggest that Summerall and Brookshier go to the officials and find out what is or isn't holding."

Yary claimed that the Vikings' "new" emotional outlook doesn't much concern him.

"When Ahmad Rashad (nee Bobby Moore of Oregon) came to us from Buffalo (via Seattle), he got Chuck Foreman all jacked-up on being emotional. They made the rest of the team think we had to go crazy this season."

"I guess that's okay, but we audibilize so much that an offensive lineman can't afford not to pay attention, so I don't go crazy like the others."

AHMAD RASHAD: "This new emotion has spread throughout the team. It just inched through the locker room and spread like wildfire. We play at a controlled frenzy. It makes the game a lot more fun."

Rashad was raving about the greatness of O.J. Simpson when someone asked if he favored O. J. over George Foreman. Ahmad suddenly was quiet.

"I have to sit down and think about it," he said softly. "That question puts me on the spot. Maybe I'd favor O.J. No, let's say they're my all-pro halfbacks."

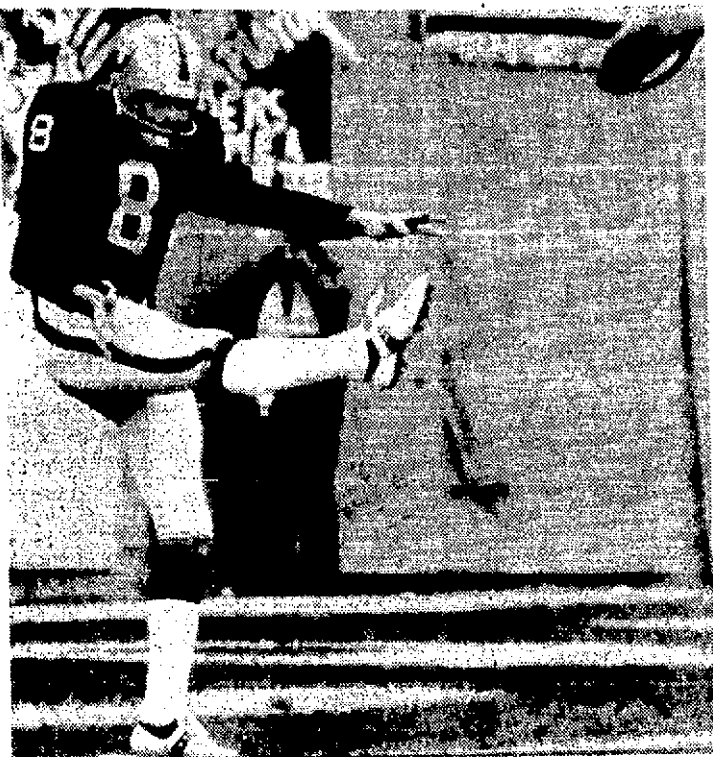

GENERALLY OVERLOOKED in the welter of Super Bowl XI glamor is that the Raiders have the largest collection of castoffs, misfits, hand-me-downs and charity cases assembled on a championship team since the old American Football League reached parity with the NFL.

Running back Carl Garrett is a good example. He has been bouncing around pro ball for eight years. Although he was rookie of the year (the year O.J. was a rookie) with New England, he had disagreements with coach Clive Rush, suddenly was branded a "problem" and was quickly bundled off to the Chicago Bears.

The Bears swiftly dealt him to the Jets and the Jets, in turn, literally gave him away for a seventh-round future draft choice.

But, at least, they sent him to the top of the mountain, to Oakland.

THE HHH SYSTEM super selection: Oakland with 7 over Minnesota. It seems like such an easy steal that it worries me. If it rains, though, I think the edge swings to the Vikings because of George Foreman, the best all-weather back on the field.

RAY GUY...doing his thing and doing it well

Ray Guy: hardly your average NFL punter

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

This first thing one notices about Ray Guy, the Oakland punter, is that he doesn't look like a punter.

He looks like an athlete. He's tall, handsome, well-built, and has powerful arms.

"This is hardly your average NFL punter. But, then, Ray Guy is hardly your average NFL punter, either."

He is so good, it is said, that he just might be the difference against the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl XI today at the Rose Bowl.

Not impressed? Well, try this. He's the first man to hit the gondola hanging high over the Superdome in New Orleans — with a punt, yet!

Though essentially a passing team — Stabler's 867 is highest NFL percentage ever — fact remains it was Oakland's ground attack which dictated half-control tempo against Pittsburgh's vaunted defense...rushing 51 times for 157 yards. Curiously, however, one week earlier the Raider ground game was stalling by the Patriots, gaining only 81 yards on 24 carries. Though Oakland is normally a warm-weather team because of its passing game, we are not so certain that playing in Pasadena, away from the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, where strange things happen (to the opposition), will work to its advantage.

THE OLSHAN VERDICT

Two critical factors here likely to determine the outcome. They revolve around Oakland's ability to inhibit Minnesota's short passing game and contain the rushing of Foreman. Minnesota, meanwhile, must concern itself with stopping Oakland's controlled passing game and force the Raiders' offense into a more extreme pressure. The heavily-experienced Viking defense is equipped to take away those all too common 16-for-18 and 18-for-22 performances "The Snake" is famous for. While the quarterbacks are diverse in their talents and style, the other departments of play are relatively even...that is, the offensive and defensive line, kicking game, etc. The major difference may be the presence of Foreman. He is the super back who can decide an otherwise dead-even game. Psychologically, though, on paper neither team has a reputation for winning the big game, Minnesota's more frequent, and recent, appearances, have to work in its favor. Oakland would appear to be the more explosive, but we're inclined to believe this more superficial than real. We see nothing in the relative matchups that warrant Oakland being established a 4-point favorite. A Cox field goal for the Vikings would mean Oakland would have to counter by scoring twice (one a touchdown) to overcome the spread. No easy task in a game which is traditionally played very close to the vest. The irrepressible Tarkenton and the athletically ancient, but emotional, Minnesota defensive mainstays will never have a better opportunity to win the ultimate prize.

Rashad's odyssey ends at Super XI

"You have to play in a controlled type of frenzy. The philosophy is that it takes two men to hold a normal person down and 10 men to hold a crazy person down. So if we play crazy, they won't have enough guys on their team to hold us down."

— Ahmad Rashad.

A pair of long limousines back up to the gate at Blair Field, where the Minnesota Vikings are preparing for the Super Bowl.

He, an observer muses, must be here to pick up the team's owners when practice is finished.

But in a few minutes several players, showered and dressed, burst out of the gate and clamber into the cars, led by Ahmad Rashad, the wide receiver.

My, how Ahmad has come up in the world. Not only has he leased a limo for Super Bowl week but his Rolls Royce is parked back at the hotel, in case he has to run out for razor blades and the chauffeur has gone off duty.

A year ago Rashad had just finished the season in Buffalo. Well, he didn't really finish it because he never got started. He injured a knee in the last practice game and spent the rest of the season rehabilitating himself from surgery with Dr. Robert Kerlan in Los Angeles.

Not only that, but he had played out his option with the Bills—hardly an ideal bargaining position. Understandably, the club didn't see fit to meet his request for a raise, so he went home to the Great Northwest and signed with an expansion club, the Seattle Seahawks.

THE BILLS and Seahawks won four games between them this season, yet Rashad winds up in Super Bowl XI today, the most amazing triple play of the year.

"I'm glad to be here," he says with a smile—Rashad hasn't stopped smiling all week, "but I don't think they (the Seahawks) had in their mind they were sending me to the Super Bowl."

RICH ROBERTS

The Hawks traded Rashad to Minnesota at the end of pre-season.

"Jack (coach Patra) called me and said, 'I've just traded you to Minnesota. You don't know it now, but you're really going to enjoy it.' He was absolutely right."

"It's been like a whirlwind. I haven't had time to even look back on it. I'm waiting until the Super Bowl's over."

But Rashad recalls that "a year ago today I was sitting around talking to O.J. about how good we (the Bills) were going to be next year when we got our team together."

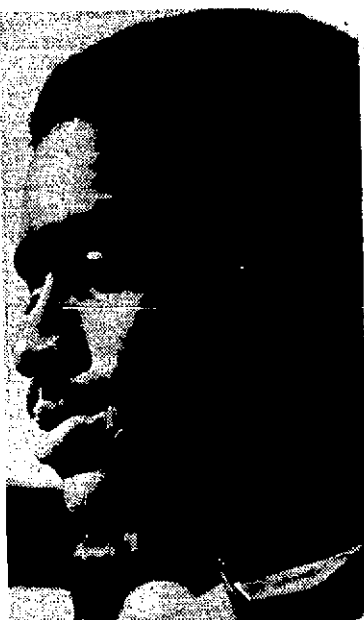

"About three months later it wasn't Buffalo anymore; it was Seattle, and I'm talking to Jim Zorn. We're playing catch and trying to get ready to go with the Seahawks. Now I'm sitting here talking about the Super Bowl with the Minnesota Vikings."

"It's the most exciting moment in my life. Guys dream of playing in Super Bowls. Pressure? I would never let pressure destroy that. When you get a chance, you can't let anything get in the way of you performing to the best of your ability."

RASHAD LOOKS around at the mass of media and feels the electricity in the air.

"The Turkey Day Game was never nothin' like this! That's the last championship game I've been in."

In 1967, when Rashad was a halfback named Bobby Moore, his Mt. Tahoma High played Stadium High for the cham-

AHMAD RASHAD
Took long way around

ionship of Tacoma. In some ways, that game seemed just as important.

"We didn't have all these writers," he says, "and we stayed at home, but at that time you never think you'll end up in the Super Bowl."

Rashad—or Robert Earl Moore—went from Mt. Tahoma to the University of Oregon, where he became an all-America and was drafted No. 1 by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Against the Rams in '72, he set an NFL record by catching a 98-yard pass from Jim Hart, the longest non-scoring play in league history which, technically, can never be topped.

At Buffalo, he set another NFL record in '74 by recovering two of his own fumbles in the end zone for touchdowns.

WHATEVER RASHAD does, he seems to do with a flair. Those who knew him well were not surprised when he changed his name, although it was hardly a whim.

"I'm an orthodox muslim," he explains. "It's an Arabic religion. The religion itself is an extension of Christianity and Judaism."

"I got interested when I was a sophomore back at Oregon. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was very influential when he adopted that religion. Ahmad means 'admirable.' Rashad means 'one led to truth.'"

Rashad now sees the world in clear perspective through fairly thick glasses with rose-colored rims.

"My vision is about 20-80," he says. "I can't see very good at night. I can see images very well, and I find that by not wearing contacts or anything when I play, it makes me concentrate on the ball more. Otherwise, I just squint a lot."

HE INSISTS he will not be looking for certain members of the Raiders' notorious secondary.

"I never think of one player. I look at the four players in my area and I never isolate on one guy."

"Now, George (Atkinson) I think has got some undue criticism on the way he tackles, but football is rough. I expect a good, hard, rough football game."

"I really enjoy playing against Oakland. These are guys I see all the time. Skip (Thomas) and I spent a couple of summers working out together. When we played San Francisco, Jack Tatum and Clarence Davis came over to the room and said, 'We'll probably be seeing you in the Super Bowl,' and here we are. It's all coming true."

Upshaw explains yen for political office

Oakland's all-pro guard, Gene Upshaw, says when his football days are over he's going into politics. Listen to the 10-year NFL veteran and you'll understand why.

"I'm going to run for the State Assembly from Oakland because I dig politics. What party? Democratic. Is there any other?"

"I proved I'm a leader with the Raiders. I'm a leader because Al Davis came up to me one day and said I was getting older and should be a leader. To be a good leader, though, you first have to be a good follower. I was that, too."

"I've spent my whole professional life with the Oakland Raiders and I wouldn't want to be with any other organization. Now that I'm older (31), I help our younger players. If a man's not willing to help younger players, he doesn't belong with the Raiders."

"We've got a lot of boys who played with other teams, but when Al Davis considers picking up another player, he confers with us veterans. He probably has 23 opinions, but when he gets a new man, he knows what he's getting."

MINNESOTA'S Alan Page claimed that Upshaw held on his first play of practice "and he's been holding ever since." Upshaw wasn't fazed.

"Old Alan decided the only way to let people know we'll be on the field Sunday was to start this talk about holding," said the smiling giant from Texas A&I.

"You can't buy the kind of publicity we're going to get out of this before the Super Bowl is over."

"Some guys pay a million dollars and don't get that kind of publicity. I'm getting it free. Tell Alan thank you."

But what effect will it have on the game? "It will either make us famous or it will get me a lot of holding penalties."

VIKING SAFETY Paul Krause: "(Ken) Stabler's receivers are schooled to come back for his passes. Stabler loves it that way. (Fred) Biletnikoff is the best of pass-catcher playing today. He understands Stabler and vice-versa. They are one terrific combination."

"Biletnikoff runs brilliant pass patterns and is excellent at catching a ball in traffic. If we stop Biletnikoff, we'll win. Biletnikoff, not (Cliff) Branch or (Dave) Casper, is the guy we have to stop."

PURISTS WERE jolted when Joe Namath of the New York Jets confessed in a book that he had enjoyed both a "bottle and broad" the night before he passed favored Baltimore into submission in Super Bowl III.

But Dr. Donald Fink of the Raiders says, "Sex is very minor in these players' minds at this time. They're all thinking about winning the Super Bowl. They know their wives or girl friends will be there when it's over."

"The idea of isolating the teams 24 hours before the game has nothing to do with sex. The purpose is to get the players away from distractions—their wives and kids."

"A guy intent on winning the Super Bowl is not going to have much sexual drive anyhow. It's useless when you're concerned about something else."

RAIDER DEFENSIVE back Jack Tatum, who may be the most ferocious-looking man in today's Super Bowl, says his feud with Steeler receiver Lynn Swann isn't a put-on.

"I will never have any respect for Swann," snapped Tatum, who is a close runnerup to teammate George Atkinson on the Raider villain list. "He's not a very classy guy. He isn't even a man because he cries all the time. I still don't like some of the statements he made about me."

"This thing with the Steelers just started growing. Swann and the rest of them cried to make me change my style, but that's impossible. Swann's got a good thing going, though. He swings on me all the time, but I ignore him. Yet, if I go after him, I get 15 yards."

"When I played for Woody Hayes, he taught me never to turn the other cheek. That's one philosophy of Woody's that I've never forgotten."

GEORGE ATKINSON: "After that incident where I hit Swann and the nation made a case about it, my life changed. I lost friends, or people I thought were friends, and I received hate mail."

"But I don't hate Swann. When that playoff game was over and we'd beaten the Steelers, Oakland fans ran onto the field. I grabbed Swann and escorted him off the field. I didn't know what that mob might try to do to him."

Atkinson, who runs a liquor store, races two thoroughbreds and works with kids in the off-season, probably was interviewed more often than any other Super Bowl player, except quarterbacks Ken Stabler and Fran Tarkenton. He's not happy that he's considered a "dirty" player.

"Mel Blount, Jack Lambert and Joe Greene all play the same way I do, and they're called aggressive. I'm called dirty. I'm always having to defend myself, and I don't have anything to defend myself for."

RON VARY, Minnesota's all-pro tackle, is extremely upset at TV announcers Pat Summerall and Tom Brookshier, who constantly pointed out during the NFC title game Dec. 26 that the Bellflower High grad was holding the Rams' Jack Youngblood.

"Those two guys don't know the rules," snapped Vary. "If they don't know about something, they should keep quiet. The rules were changed on holding in 1975 and apparently they haven't found out about it yet."

"I know what constitutes holding and I suggest that Summerall and Brookshier go to the officials and find out what is or isn't holding."

Vary claimed that the Vikings' "new" emotional outlook doesn't much concern him.

"When Ahmad Rashad (nee Bobby Moore of Oregon) came to us from Buffalo (via Seattle), he got Chuck Foreman all jacked-up on being emotional. They made the rest of the team think we had to go crazy this season."

"I guess that's okay, but we audibilize so much that an offensive lineman can't afford not to pay attention, so I don't go crazy like the others."

AHMAD RASHAD: "This new emotion has spread throughout the team. It just inched through the locker room and spread like wildfire. We play at a controlled frenzy. It makes the game a lot more fun."

Rashad was raving about the greatness of O.J. Simpson when someone asked if he favored O. J. over George Foreman. Ahmad suddenly was quiet.

"I have to sit down and think about it," he said softly. "That question puts me on the spot. Maybe I'd favor O.J. No, let's say they're my all-pro halfbacks."

GENERALLY OVERLOOKED in the welter of Super Bowl XI glamor is that the Raiders have the largest collection of castoffs, misfits, hand-me-downs and charity cases assembled on a championship team since the old American Football League reached parity with the NFL.

Running back Carl Garrett is a good example. He has been bouncing around pro ball for eight years. Although he was rookie of the year (the year O.J. was a rookie) with New England, he had disagreements with coach Clive Rush, suddenly was branded a "problem" and was quickly bundled off to the Chicago Bears.

The Bears swiftly dealt him to the Jets and the Jets, in turn, literally gave him away for a seventh-round future draft choice.

But, at least, they sent him to the top of the mountain, to Oakland.

THE HHH SYSTEM super selection: Oakland by 7 over Minnesota. It seems like such an easy steal that it worries me. If it rains, though, I think the edge swings to the Vikings because of George Foreman, the best all-weather back on the field.

Bring on the Raiders

Hub Meeds, who cheers Minnesota on from the sidelines as its official mascot, was already staked out at the Rose Bowl Saturday, getting his voice tuned up for today's Super Bowl XI clash with the Oakland Raiders. Meeds is from White Bear Lake, Minn.

Troy QB makes most of chance, 20-17 Evans Hula hero for West

HONOLULU (AP) — USC's Vince Evans, a last-minute quarterback selection for the 31st annual Hula Bowl, reverted to a familiar play Saturday as he sparked the West to a 20-17 victory over the East.

Evans had a hand in three touchdowns and engineered the drive which gave the West a victory.

"Not a bad sub," said West coach Mike White of California.

A 45-yard pass from Evans to Trojan teammate Shelton Diggs set up the three-yard touchdown run by Missouri's Curtis Brown with 1:13 remaining.

"It was a USC play," Evans said of the bomb. "I didn't get a whole lot of practice time this week. I thought if I got in the game I'd just give it my all."

Evans ran two yards for a touchdown on his first appearance in the first quarter and tossed a seven-yard scoring pass to tight end Don Hasselbeck to 17-14 with 6:03 left.

After an eight-yard punt by Tom Skladany of Ohio State gave the West possession at its 48, Evans went for broke, missing a bomb to Hasselbeck and then finding Diggs at the seven.

Fullback Robin Earl of Washington bulled to the three, before Brown, who fumbled earlier to kill a West drive, raced around third and-goal at the seven, Evans reversed, backed off nearly 20 yards and appeared to have a safe convey to the end zone on the left side. He pulled up, however, and lobbed the ball to Hasselbeck to cut the East lead to 17-14 with 6:03 left.

Skidany kicked a 41-yard field goal in the first quarter for the East. The East scored its first touchdown on a 26-yard second-quarter drive following a fumble by the West's Ricky Bell of USC. Tony Dunny of Minnesota rifled the ball 12 yards to tight end Jim Corbett of Pittsburgh for the score.

Dorsett, limited to 39 yards on a dozen first-half carries, broke loose for his touchdown on the fourth play after halftime. The game, played before a shirtsleeve crowd of 45,579, was marred by seven fumbles and three interceptions. Linebacker Ron Crosby of Penn State was named the outstanding defensive player. He blocked a field goal attempt and recovered a fumble by Brown at the East's 14 to blunt a scoring threat.

BUD TUCKER

All that's left now is to play the game

It's all over but the football. The Super Bowl classic having cemented its position over such builders to climax as the Indianapolis 500 and Kentucky Derby, is now reduced to the actual pushing and shoving.

There is no longer anything new an imagination can produce in the cause of sporting literature. It has all been written from every angle and in several tongues.

All theories have been put forth and duly noted. The students of offense have made their case that this will be one of the great offensive explosions in memory.

Those dedicated to the proposition that defense is the name of this, or any, game are similarly on record.

ALSO PERMITTED to express opinions were those prophets of doom who insist that all Super Bowl games are stodgy affairs which never approach the anvil chorus of their buildup. This view is that Super Bowl teams are nervous and terrified and do not play to win.

That is, they play not to lose.

In the matter of strict Super Bowl history, both of these teams have demonstrated the qualifications necessary to lose. The Oakland Raiders had one pop at it and swooned in the presence of the Green Bay Packers on the field and Vince Lombardi on the sidelines.

The Minnesota Vikings, on the other side in Super Bowl XI, have proven capable of losing to just about anybody. They have been dispatched by the Chiefs, Dolphins and Steelers.

Of course, this variety of history has nothing to do with anything where this renewal is concerned except that one of the principals will shed the stigma of never having done anything in the Super Bowl but show up and lose. You see, a winner will be determined even if it is necessary to continue the grunting and groaning long after darkness has descended on the gulch wherein lies the Rose Bowl.

PASADENA itself retires before dusk but that is neither here nor there.

Naturally, you are half crazed with impatience waiting for the deathless prediction of this tourist who has become independently wealthy wagering on professional football games.

Without further hemming and hawing then, the view from here is that the Raiders are two touchdowns superior to the Vikings. In fact, save for one or two strange twists of fate and fortune, the Vikings would not even be here and Super Bowl XI would feature a unique matchup of two teams from California.

Technically, it is difficult to admire an offense constructed on a quarterback who takes the ball and scrambles around behind the line of scrimmage.

The probable winner having been dealt with, you pause to applaud the early and sure winner which is the National Football League.

ONE STANDS in awe of the promotional body under whose auspices this thing is conducted.

The extravaganza is taken to the hearts of the population of a community to which no tickets to the game are made available. Strictly from the outside, it unloads 103,000 seats at $20 a copy and a complimentary list which does not exist.

A stadium large enough to hold this audience is rented for a sum roughly equal to that which is spent on the annual Super Bowl cocktail party. Police and other services are furnished.

The national television rights are peddled to one of the alternating networks for a figure roughly equivalent to the cost of the ammunition expended by all sides during World War II.

Entirely out of season, the Super Bowl pushes such pastimes as basketball and hockey off the sports pages and the airwaves even though its interviews are by appointment only.

It is a gentle and tolerable swindle. It is indeed something.

Whether the Raiders or Vikings do anything right, somebody did. Grantland Rice might have written about it as follows: When the one great scorer comes To write against your name, He'll write not that you won or lost, But how many paid to see the game.

Pisarkiewicz wins game but loses car

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — North quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz fueled a frantic Missouri-style comeback and beat the clock as well as the South in Saturday's play-for-pay Senior Bowl football game.

But to accommodate national television and its own ticking clock, the Most Valuable Player award and all the big money was doled out to others before his last-minute heroics.

That left Pisarkiewicz, despite his North squad's thrilling 27-24 comeback victory, "a little disappointed."

Pisarkiewicz, a prominent figure in Missouri's zany year of unexpected triumphs and equally unexpected disasters, rallied the North to its victory with two touchdown passes in the final two minutes — both to Long Beach product Tony Hill of Stanford.

The game-winner was four-yard lob to Hill in the right corner of the end zone with 33 seconds remaining.

Moments earlier, Pisarkiewicz and Hill collaborated on a 13-yard scoring play. Then the North recovered an onside kick, setting up the deciding 46-yard drive during which Pisarkiewicz completed five passes.

That capped a sensational day for the 6-foot-4 Pisarkiewicz who hit on 23 of 40 pass attempts for 201 yards—but the MVP award had already been doled out to South quarterback Tommy Kramer of Rice.

The five-member Senior Bowl committee, composed of pro scouts, chose Kramer as the top star and given him a free automobile as well as handing out $2,500 prizes to four others minutes before Pisarkiewicz turned hero.

The Senior Bowl spokesman said the awards were decided before the end of the game so they could be announced on NBC, which was televising the game nationally.

Some Senior Bowl officials talked of coming up with a special prize for Pisarkiewicz, but no immediate decision was reached.

North coach Forrest Gregg said Pisarkiewicz should have gotten the award and added flatly, "He won the game for us."

Kramer combined on an 80-yard touchdown pass play with Terry Robiskie of Louisiana State to put the South ahead 24-14 in the third quarter. He connected on 16 of 32 aeriols or 232 yards.

The winning drive was highlighted by five Pisarkiewicz completions in a race against the clock, and he completed six passes in the touchdown drive moments earlier.

Players on both sides turned professional during the game with North players netting $1,500 apiece and the South

The country will take a four-hour break today

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

This is the Sunday that ministers cut short their sermons, stores close, streets empty, crime takes a virtual holiday and a fourth of America goes into hibernation for four hours with a television screen.

It is Super Bowl Sunday. It is the nation's most grandiose one-day spectacular. It is the culmination of five months of an addiction known as pro football madness.

They call it Super Bowl Sunday. It is all of that and more.

In its simplest sense, it is the championship game of the National Football League. It matches two powerful teams fired by past frustrations: the Minnesota Vikings, three times in the bowl but never a winner, and the Oakland Raiders, whose wealth of talent has taken them into six playoffs and one final without ever grabbing the diamond-studded ring.

Yet the game—this time in the historic Rose Bowl before its largest live crowd ever—has come to represent only a part of the giant extravaganza which has been built into a show business triumph and a press agent's dream.

A LIVE CROWD of 104,000, almost 25,000 more than have ever seen the game before, will pour into the Rose Bowl, scene of college football's oldest postseason rivalry. An estimated 75 million will watch on television, millions of others receiving description by radio.

This is the figure announced by the National Broadcasting Company, backed by the Neilson Rating System. NBC, which alternates with CBS in the televising, is paying $3.5 million for the privilege.

More people will see the game than watched Neil Armstrong take his first step on the moon. Twenty-one companies—hawkers of auto tires, beer, insurance, soft drinks and assorted items and services—will shell out $250,000 a minute to get their message across.

No other sports event attracts such a figure. NBC said its TV coverage would be one of the broadest and most sophisticated ever attempted. A crew of 180 technicians will operate equipment valued at $5 million, including 14 stationary and three handheld cameras plus another beamed from a blimp. There will be an array of slow motion replay discs and videotape machines.

This being the land of makebelieve, Hollywood personalities will saturate the screens along with sports superstars. But the hero of the extravagant halftime production will be an old favorite out of the past, Mickey Mouse.

WALT DISNEY PRODUCTIONS was hired to choreograph the midgame program, which will be marked by fan participation. All the spectators will be provided color cards which will turn into a shimmering sea when viewed from above by a blimp.

Kickoff is at 12:30 p.m. Spectators have been asked to leave for the stadium four hours in advance of the game. Paying $20.00 each for tickets, they represent a live gate of $2,080,000.

Rhinos get clipped in Las Vegas, 33-13

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Quarterback Al Neville threw for two touchdowns and halfback J.B. Boyd ran for two more Saturday to lead the Baltimore Eagles to a 33-13 victory over the Southern California Rhinos in a minor league semi-pro game billed as the East-West MiniBowl.

The triumph wrapped up a perfect 14-0 season for the Eagles, champions of the Interstate League, while the Rhinos of the Western Professional League finished at 9-4.

Neville competed 14 of his 25 passes for 181 yards, including scoring strikes of 18 and 10 yards. Boyd rushed for 90 yards on 14 carries, and scored on runs of one and five yards.

The Rhinos' scores came on Martin Henderson's one-yard run and a 18-yard pass from quarterback Alvin White to Dwayne Taggart.

Although the game was played on a clear, crisp afternoon, the crowd was estimated at only 1,000.

Police stake out Pig Bowl

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Despite all the pregame squealing, ranging from alleged spying on practices to rumors of ticket scalping, Pig Bowl III has again proven no match for the Super Bowl.

Except, perhaps, in enthusiasm for what has become the No. 1 sports attraction of the year in this capital city.

Another capacity crowd, more than 26,000 fans, jammed venerable Hughes Stadium to watch Saturday as the Sacramento County Sheriff's Bacon Bombers wiped out the Sacramento Police Razorbacks, 37-0.

Four color TV cameras recorded the action for a delayed local telecast and the game was broadcast live on the radio with Lon Simmons, pro football announcer from San Francisco, describing the action.

THE CHARITY affair was the Bacon Bombers' all the way, and their first triumph to even the series at 1-1 and a tie.

"With all the police here, it makes you wonder who's minding the store," observed Simmons' sidekick on the radio broadcast, San Francisco 49ers linebacker Skip Vanderbundt.

"...today'd be a good day for a bank robbery, anywhere but at the stadium," Simmons commented. The Bacon Bombers' multiple offense, described by Sheriff's coach Gary Quattrin as "like New England and Dallas" of the National Football League, was too much for the city cops.

"Some guys worked out several months for this game," Vanderbundt observed.

And Simmons cracked, "You began to wonder when the Sheriff's Department was making calls with football helmets on."

THERE WERE no reports of scalpers arrested outside the arena, although the $2 tickets were sold out last fall.

The Camellia Bowl Association underwrote television coverage of the game. It used to back the National Collegiate Athletic Association college division football championship at Hughes Stadium, until a couple of years ago when the collegians were badly outdrawn by the Pig Bowlers. The Camellia Bowl moved elsewhere.

A check with police and sheriff's offices found that no crook took advantage of the situation.

Troy QB makes most of chance, 20-17 Evans Hula hero for West

Bring on the Raiders

Hub Meeds, who cheers Minnesota on from the sidelines as its official mascot, was already staked out at the Rose Bowl Saturday, getting his voice tuned up for today's Super Bowl XI clash with the Oakland Raiders. Meeds is from White Bear Lake, Minn.

HONOLULU (AP) — USC's Vince Evans, a last-minute quarterback selection for the 31st annual Hula Bowl, reverted to a familiar play Saturday as he sparked the West to a 20-17 victory over the East.

Evans had a hand in three touchdowns and engineered the drive which gave the West a victory.

"Not a bad sub," said West coach Mike White of California.

A 45-yard pass from Evans to Trojan teammate Sheldon Diggs set up the three-yard touchdown run by Missouri's Curtis Brown with 1:13 remaining.

"It was a USC bomb," Evans said of the play. "I didn't get a whole lot of practice time this week. I thought if I got in the game I'd just give it my all."

Evans ran two yards for a touchdown on his first appearance in the first quarter and tossed a seven-yard scoring pass to tight end Don Hasselbeck to 17-14 with 6:03 left.

After an eight-yard punt by Tom Skladany of Ohio State gave the West possession at its 48, Evans went for broke, missing a bomb to Hasselbeck and then finding Diggs at the seven.

Fullback Robin Earl of Washington bulled to the three, before Brown, who fumbled earlier to kill a West drive, raced around third and-goal at the seven, Evans reversed, backed off nearly 20 yards and appeared to have a safe convey to the end zone on the left side. He pulled up, however, and lobbed the ball to Hasselbeck to cut the East lead to 17-14 with 6:03 left.

right end for the winning touchdown.

Skladany kicked a 41-yard field goal in the first quarter for the East. The East scored its first touchdown on a 26-yard second-quarter drive following a fumble by the West's Ricky Bell of USC. Tony Duncy of Minnesota rifled the ball 12 yards to tight end Jim Corbett of Pittsburgh for the score.

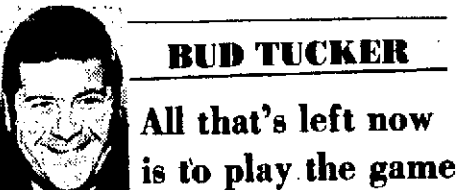

Dorsett, limited to 39 yards on a dozen first-half carries, broke loose for his touchdown on the fourth play after halftime. The game, played before a shirtless crowd of 45,579, was marred by seven fumbles and three interceptions.

Linebacker Ron Crosby of Penn State was named the outstanding defensive player. He blocked a field goal attempt and recovered a fumble by Brown at the East's 14 to blunt a scoring threat.

Evans 2 run (kick failed). East-10 pass from Duncy (Składany kick). East-Chambers 47 run (Składany kick). East-Hasselbeck 7 pass from Evans (kick failed). West-Brown 3 run (kick failed). A-45,579.

BUD TUCKER

All that's left now is to play the game

It's all over but the football. The Super Bowl classic has cemented its position over such builders to climax as the Indianapolis 500 and Kentucky Derby, is now reduced to the actual pushing and shoving.

There is no longer any new imagination can produce in the cause of sporting literature. It has all been written from every angle and in several tongues.

All theories have been put forth and duly noted. The students of offense have made their case that this will be one of the great offensive explosions in memory.

Those dedicated to the proposition that defense is the name of this, or any, game are similarly on record.

ALSO PERMITTED to express opinions were those prophets of doom who insist that all Super Bowl games are stodgy affairs which never approach the anvil chorus of their buildup. This view is that Super Bowl games are nervous and terrified and do not play to win.

That is, they play not to lose.

In the matter of strict Super Bowl history, both of these teams have demonstrated the qualifications necessary to lose. The Oakland Raiders had one pop at it and swayed in the presence of the Green Bay Packers on the field and Vince Lombardi on the sidelines.

The Minnesota Vikings, on the other side in Super Bowl XI, have proven capable of losing to just about anybody. They have been dispatched by the Chiefs, Dolphins and Steelers.

Of course, this variety of history has nothing to do with anything where this renewal is concerned except that one of the principals will shed the stigma of never having done anything in the Super Bowl but show up and lose. You see, a winner will be determined even if it is necessary to continue the grunting and groaning long after darkness has descended on the gulch wherein lies the Rose Bowl.

PASADENA itself retires before dusk but that is neither here nor there.

Naturally, you are half crazed with impatience waiting for the deathless prediction of this tourist who has become independently wealthy wagering on professional football games.

Without further hemming and hawing then, the view from here is that the Raiders are two touchdowns superior to the Vikings. In fact, the Vikings would not even be here and Super Bowl XI would feature a unique matchup of two teams from California.

Technically, it is difficult to admire an offense constructed on a quarterback who takes the ball and scrambles around behind the line of scrimmage.

The probable winner having been dealt with, you pause to applaud the early and sure winner which is the National Football League.

ONE STANDS in awe of the promotional body under whose auspices this thing is conducted.

The extravagance is taken to the hearts of the population of a community to which no tickets to the game are made available. Strictly from the outside, it unloads 103,000 seats at $20 a copy and a complimentary list which does not exist.

A stadium large enough to hold this audience is rented for a sum roughly equal to that which is spent on the annual Super Bowl cocktail party. Police and other services are furnished.

The national television rights are peddled to one of the alternating networks for a figure roughly equivalent to the cost of the ammunition expended by all sides during World War II.

Entirely out of season, the Super Bowl pushes such pastimes as basketball and hockey off the sports pages and the airwaves even though its interviews are by appointment only.

It is a gentle and tolerable swindle. It is indeed something.

Pisarkiewicz wins game but loses car

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — North quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz fueled a frantic Missouri-style comeback and beat the clock as well as the South in Saturday's play-for-pay Senior Bowl football game.

But to accommodate national television and its own ticking clock, the Most Valuable Player award and all the big money was doled out to others before his last-minute heroics.

That left Pisarkiewicz, despite his North squad's thrilling 27-24 come-from-behind victory, "a little disappointed."

Pisarkiewicz, a prominent figure in Missouri's zany year of unexpected triumphs and equally unexpected disasters, rallied the North to its victory with two touchdowns passes in the final two minutes — both to Long Beach product Tony Hill of Stanford.

The game winner was four-yard lob to Hill in the right corner of the end zone with 33 seconds remaining.

Moments earlier, Pisarkiewicz and Hill collaborated on a 13-yard scoring play. Then the North recovered an onside kick, setting up the deciding 46-yard drive during which Pisarkiewicz completed five passes.

That capped a sensational day for the 6-foot-4 Pisarkiewicz who hit on 23 of 40 pass attempts for 201 yards—but the MVP award had already been doled out to South quarterback Tommy Kramer of Rice.

The five-member Senior Bowl committee, composed of pro scouts, chose Kramer as the top star and given him a free automobile as well as handing out $2,500 prizes to four others minutes before Pisarkiewicz turned hero.

The Senior Bowl spokesman said the awards were decided before the end of the game so they could be announced on NBC, which was televising the game nationally.

Some Senior Bowl officials talked of coming up with a special prize for Pisarkiewicz, but no immediate decision was made.

North coach Forrest Gregg said Pisarkiewicz should have gotten the award and added flatly, "He won the game for us."

Kramer combined on an 80-yard touchdown pass play with Terry Rusk of Louisiana State to put the South ahead 24-14 in the third quarter. He connected on 16 of 32 aeri

The winning drive was highlighted by five Pisarkiewicz completions in a race against the clock, and he completed six passes in the touchdown drive moments earlier.

Players on both sides retired professional during the game with North players netting $1,500 apiece and the South $1,250.

The country will take a four-hour break today

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

This is the Sunday that ministers cut short their sermons, stores close, streets empty, crime takes a virtual holiday and a fourth of America goes into hibernation for four hours with a television screen.

It is Super Bowl Sunday. It is the nation's most grandiose one-day spectacular. It is the culmination of five months of an addiction known as pro football madness.

They call it Super Bowl Sunday. It is all of that and more.

In its simplest sense, it is the championship game of the National Football League. It matches two powerful teams fired by past frustrations: the Minnesota Vikings, three times in the bowl but never a winner, and the Oakland Raiders, whose wealth of talent has taken them into six playoffs and one final without ever grabbing the diamond-studded ring.

Yet the game—this time in the historic Rose Bowl before its largest live crowd ever—has come to represent only a part of the giant extravaganza which has been built into a show business triumph and a press agent's dream.

A LIVE CROWD of 104,000, almost 25,000 more than have ever seen the game before, will pour into the Rose Bowl, scene of college football's oldest postseason rivalry. An estimated 75 million will watch on television, millions of others receiving description by radio.

This is the figure announced by the National Broadcasting Company, backed by the Neilson Rating System. NBC, which alternates with CBS in the televising, is paying $3.5 million for the privilege.

More people will see the game than watched Neil Armstrong take his first step on the moon. Twenty-one companies—hawkers of auto tires, beer, insurance, soft drinks and assorted items and services—will shell out $250,000 a minute to get their message across.

No other sports event attracts such a figure. NBC said its TV coverage would be one of the broadest and most sophisticated ever attempted. A crew of 180 technicians will operate equipment valued at $5 million, including 14 stationary and three handheld cameras plus another beamed from a blimp. There will be an array of slow motion replay discs and videotape machines.

This being the land of makebelieve, Hollywood personalities will saturate the screens along with sports superstars. But the hero of the extravagant halftime production will be an old favorite out of the past, Mickey Mouse.

WALT DISNEY PRODUCTIONS was hired to choreograph the midgame program, which will be marked by fan participation. All the spectators will be provided color cards which will turn into a shimmering sea when viewed from above by a blimp.

Spectators have been asked to leave for the stadium four hours in advance of the game. Paying $20.00 each for tickets, they represent a live game of $2,080,000.

Rhinos get clipped in Las Vegas, 33-13

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Quarterback Al Neville threw for two touchdowns and halfback J.B. Boyd ran for two more Saturday to lead the Baltimore Eagles to a 33-13 victory over the Southern California Rhinos in a minor league semi-pro game billed as the East-West MiniBowl.

The triumph wrapped up a perfect 14-0 season for the Eagles, champions of the Interstate League, while the Rhinos of the Western Professional League finished at 9-4.

Neville completed 14 of his 25 passes for 181 yards, including scoring strikes of 18 and 10 yards. Boyd rushed for 90 yards on 14 carries, and scored on runs of one and five yards.

The Rhinos' scores came on Martin Henderson's one-yard run and a 18-yard pass from quarterback Alvin White to Dwayne Taggart.

Although the game was played on a clear, crisp afternoon, the crowd was estimated at only 1,000.

Flyers jar Kings, 6-1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Right winger Don Saleski scored twice and center Mel Bridgman had one goal and two assists as the Philadelphia Flyers extended their home unbeaten streak to 19 games with a 6-1 victory over the slumping Kings in a National Hockey League game Saturday night.

The Flyers, who lead the Patrick Division with a 25-8-9 mark, are unbeaten at home since Oct. 14, when they lost to Montreal 7-1.

Over-all, the Flyers have lost only once in their last 24 starts (17-1-6).

Bridgman opened the Flyers' scoring just 1:37 into the game when he deflected a 35-foot by defenseman Tom Bladen past goalie Gary Edwards, who is winless in seven starts this season (0-5-2).

Saleski and Gary Dornhoefer, who scored the 200th goal of his NHL career, boosted the Flyers into a 3-0 lead later in the opening period.

After a scoreless second period, Bobby Clarke got a power play goal on a breakaway and Saleski added his second goal to boost the lead to 5-0.

Tanner whips Vilas to take Aussie Open

MELBOURNE (AP) — American Roscoe Tanner won the Australian Open men's singles title in straight sets today, while Australian Kerry Reid captured the women's championship.

Tanner beat Argentina's Guillermo Vilas 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 in 85 minutes. Mrs. Reid defeated fellow Australian Dianne Fromholtz 7-5, 6-2.

Tanner raced through the three sets in 28, 32 and 25 minutes.

Tanner broke Vilas in the eighth game of the third set and then served two aces in the last game to end the match.

It was Tanner's powerful serve that decided the match, turning Vilas into a defensive player who for the most part refused to venture to the net. He found that Tanner's return of service was too penetrating and his service too strong for him to get into an attacking position.

Bob Berry ruined goalie Wayne Stephenson's shut-out bid with a goal at 12:23 of the final period. It marked the first time the Kings had scored in three games against the Flyers this season.

After dropping the first three games of the current seven-game trip, the Kings will bounce back tonight when they play the New York Rangers.

Tripped up but no penalty
Philadelphia's Ross Lonsberry (18) was guilty of tripping up Mike Murphy of the Kings in first period action Saturday night at the Spectrum. Only trouble was referee

Bob Murphy had his own problems, trying to get out of the way and didn't see the play. Kings absorbed a 6-1 setback from the Flyers.

UCLA edges U for tennis title

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — Tony Graham of UCLA defeated Charles Strode of USC Saturday to lead the Bruins to the team championship of the second Palm Springs National Collegiate Tennis Classic.

Graham's 6-4, 5-7, 6-2 victory gave the Bruins 16 points in the four-day event, one point more than the defending champion Trojans and Stanford, who tied for second.

Stanford's freshman doubles team of Peter Rennett and Loyd Bourne defeated USC's No. 1-seeded team of Chris Lewis and Andy Luchessi 6-4, 3-6, 7-6 to win the doubles title.

Had the Trojans won either the singles or doubles matches they would have tied the Bruins.

Fourth was Young with nine points; Arizona State, San Jose State, three teams with points each — UC Irvine and Du

Hunt has Argentina pole spot

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — World Grand Prix champion James Hunt of England won the pole position Saturday for the Argentine Grand Prix, but said it is the race itself that counts.

"I did very well indeed," the 29-year-old Hunt said, "but there are no prizes for this. What really counts is who gets to the finish line first on Sunday."

Being on the inside of the first two-car row when the Grand Prix gets under way here will give Hunt and his McLaren M23 an edge over the other 18 Formula One drivers in this inaugural 222.45-mile race of the 1977 Grand Prix circuit.

Hunt recorded the best time of 1 minute, 48.68 seconds over a single circuit at the Gen. San Martin Autodrome during the first day of time trials on Friday.

But that was good enough to beat any of the times recorded during final trials on Saturday, when intense summer heat caused the temperature to soar to over 120 degrees on the track.

John Watson of Northern Ireland, driving a Brabham, won the second spot in the first row, with a time of 1:48.96 on Saturday.

Patrick Depailler of France, driving a six-wheel Tyrrell, won the inside slot on the second row, with a time of 1:49.13.

Niki Lauda of Austria, the 1975 Grand Prix champion, had to be satisfied with the outside second row spot for his Ferrari, after recording a time of 1:49.73.

Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash. began the 1977 pro bowling season with a convincing victory Saturday in the $80,000 Lite Classic tournament at the Gable House Lanes in Torrance.

The 38-year-old pro secured his 27th championship with the win, moving two ahead of Dick Weber and Don Johnson in career victories.

He swept through his last two opponents to take the $10,000 first prize, defeating Marshall Helman, 22, of Medford, Ore. 258-202 in the final round after downing Keith Graycraft of New Martinsville, W. Va., 237-207.

"This is my best start ever," said Anthony, who took seven victories in 1976. "It usually takes me a few outings to get on beam, but I seemed to be on target today."

CONFLICTS—

On another issue, one sports lawyer contends it is unethical for an agent to represent more than three players on the same team. "Somewhere along the line," he says, "you'll have to ask for less money than one of your people is worth — in order to get more for another of your clients."

A classic case of possible conflict came up several years ago when the president of CBS Sports said that a good NBA contract was contingent on a powerful club in New York. Suddenly, the Knicks began making all sorts of major deals. Did basketball conspire to strengthen the Knicks, or was this a case of coincidence?

The present trend signifies trouble — if only because the public might believe something is wrong, even if everything is fine.

"The thing about sports," says Fleisher, the NBA players' counsel, "is that it's so open. People love talking about everything that happens in sports. So, even if a sport is honest, people still like to talk about the controversial aspects of the game. That's what sports is."

Yet, fans are not quick to accept glib explanations about how a team or a league or an agent operates. The whole structure of sports, from college play through the games of the superstars on television, might become the subject of governmental investigations unless sport takes the initiative to clear up possible conflicts. It wasn't so long ago that sports fans winced when boxing managers owned pieces of two fighters who faced each other. That is a simple misdemeanor compared with the conflicts facing sport these days.

Shooters score on ducks, geese

California's waterfowl season has two weeks to go, and hunting has never been better at the Wister Unit of the Imperial Waterfowl Management Area than it was on Wednesday of last week. A total of 233 hunters downed 427 ducks and 107 geese. The geese were mostly white fronts. Four were Ross' geese. Inasmuch as the season ended last Sunday for Canada geese, there was no shooting of those birds.

There are plenty of Canadas around, however, but hunters have held their fire on those big birds. The weather Wednesday at Wister and also on the Ramer Unit was cool, ideal for duck hunting.

Speaking of Canadas, 177 were trapped by the Department of Fish and Game at Whelen's Pond, a small body of water near Oceanside and Camp Pendleton. The DFG crew fired a huge net over the pond and all 177 birds were banded and released. Four of the number already had been banded and the DFG wildlife people are now tracing those Canadas. The sole purpose of such work is to find out more about the geese—where they go after banding and where they are taken by hunters.

The season for shooting all species of geese along the Colorado River Strip is closed. The season for all waterfowl will come to an end on Jan. 23. The season closes today in northeastern California where the dates must coincide with those of Oregon. The season for black sea brant will open Saturday and run through Feb. 20.

H. WERNER BUCK'S SPORTS, Vacation and Recreational Vehicle Show ends at 8 p.m. today. The show's main entertainment feature, the Parade of Outdoor Champions, will be presented at 3 and 6 p.m. The travel film festival also continues today. Awards in that category were announced at a Thursday luncheon.

The grand prize winner was The Magic Rolling Board. Other awards went to Wyoming Rodeo, Ottawa, Canada's Capital, The Beginning of a Love Affair, Karibu, Dawn Flight, and The Minis of Itasca.

Buck was host to the Southern California Sports Council at the luncheon. The council announced its new officers: Charlie Davis, president; Jeff Barclay, first vice president; Bob Pekarck, second vice president; Ed Lomax, treasurer, and Mary Otis, secretary. George Ramsey, retiring president after five successive terms, moved up to chairman of the board of directors.

Members of the Sports Council are manufacturers, wholesalers, distributors, retailers and manufacturers' reps of all types of sporting goods.

Sparky Anderson, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, was the guest speaker at the luncheon. Highlight of his speech was that "talk of ball-player millionaires, free agents and money, money, money would eventually simmer down and that players' loyalty to their clubs and their fans would become far more important."

FOOTBALL FANS WANTING to see the Super Bowl game on television and visit the Sports Show at the Anaheim Convention Center will be able to do both. There will be two large screens in the Convention Center and the game will be telecast on those.

Dave Wurzer, 1830 Tevis Ave., Long Beach 90815, announces that a Southern California Chapter of the International Backpackers' Association is being formed. A meeting will be held in Room 59, Physical Education Building, CSULB, at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The club will be involved with the care of hiking trails, backpacking, hiking and other self-propelled outdoor recreational activities.

The opening of Anaheim Lake, originally scheduled for Jan. 14, has been delayed indefinitely. The delay was caused by a rescheduling of water releases by the Metropolitan Water District. Russ Cleary, who operates that 80-acre lake and also Lake Irvine, says that the present six-day-a-week schedule for Irvine will be continued. The lake is closed on planting days (Thursdays).

Don Bullock's Gun Show is scheduled for a two-day run at the Great Western Exhibit Center, Jan. 29-30. Hours will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Great Western is at 2120 South Eastern Avenue in the City of Commerce. Bullock shows authentic weapons of modern and ancient times.

Competition looks tough

LBSU swimmers face uphill fight

By ELAINE RISINGER

Staff Writer

Long Beach State swim coach Glenda Linderman has no illusions about the level of competition her team will be facing in the WCAA conference this year.

Matched against USC and UCLA, the 49er varsity squad, with at least half of its swimmers either freshmen or sophomores, will have an uphill struggle against some "really tough" opponents, Glenda said.

That's why her team has been on double daily workouts through the semester break finishing up a concentrated training effort which started in October. LBSU will swim against the Trojans Friday.

Returning swimmers include Linda Sidaris, a breaststroker; Connie Lyman, a sprint freestyler; Jeri Shelton, distance freestyler, and Ginny Brewer. Kim Cannady, another returning team member, is temporarily sidelined with a shoulder injury.

Two touted freshmen are Carla Albano, who swims the individual medley and is "expected to do really well," and Teresa Van Oppen, who attended high school in Torrance and is an individual medley freestyler. Carla is the only woman member of the Long Beach lifeguard service.

Another freshman, Ann Shogren, who started out on the junior varsity squad, is moving up to compete in the sprint butterfly. Laura Hove, a transfer from Saddleback College, is a distance freestyler and can swim all-around.

The diving team is being coached by Glenda's assistant, Debbie Lipton, a former top flight LBSU and AAU diver. A familiar name is back on this roster. Peggy Reno will be competing again after an absence of two years. Joining her will be Melinda

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Scurry, another outstanding freshman, and Starla Coropassi, a junior new to the team.

In addition to Debbie, Glenda has a volunteer assistant coach, Sue Lewis who has had AAU coaching experience in swimming.

LONG BEACH City College gymnasts begin league competition at Golden West College Wednesday. The team will be trying to maintain a string of victories that extends six years.

"We'll have a lot more depth this year," said coach Peggy Stoll. "If we can stay healthy, we should be very good."

THE OPENING of WCAA conference basketball play is still a week away, but judging from preliminary competition, it should be a great season. In previous years, Long Beach State, UCLA and

Cal State Fullerton have dominated the rankings. This year USC, with a squad composed of 75 per cent freshmen and sophomores, is hoping to change that.

The Trojans have a new coach, Marci Cantrell, who started the women's basketball program at Pepperdine two years ago. She expects her young team to improve on last year's 10-10 record.

"This team is very young and because of youth they are enthusiastic and eager. We are the dark-horse of the league."

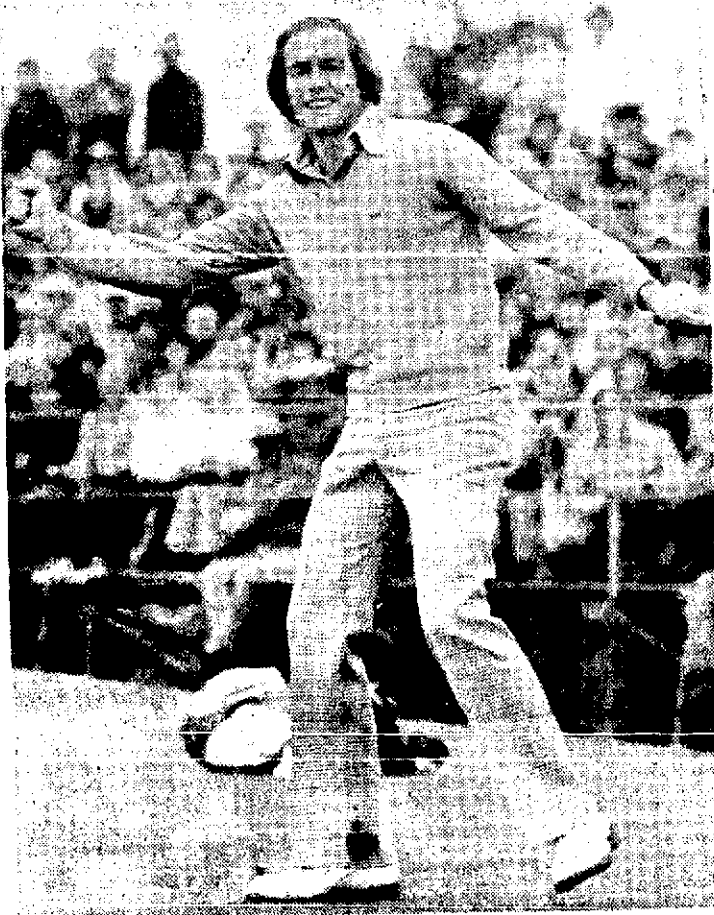

She feels the players will improve as the season progresses, and that they will overcome their inexperience. "There is a lot of camaraderie on this team, and the players are anxious to learn and accept my ideas."

The Trojans' goal is to qualify for the regional tournament. No USC women's team has ever done this, and Marci believes her team can be the first.

To qualify, the Trojans must finish either first or second in their conference. This will not be easy considering that three WCAA teams are ranked in the top 20 in a national pre-season poll. Long Beach State is ranked 18th, Cal State Fullerton, fifth, and UCLA 11th.

USC beat Fullerton last year, and Marci disagrees with the poll. She picks UCLA as the team to beat in the Western conference.

Coach Cantrell believes USC will battle Fullerton for second place with Long Beach challenging for third.

Jerry Pate wears satisfied smile as six-foot birdie putt drops on 18th hole Saturday during third round of Phoenix Open. Pate, who had trouble on greens all day, found touch just in time to grab one-stroke lead during inaugural event of 1977 PGA tour.

Pate's putt on 18 keeps him on top

PHOENIX (AP) — The national television audience didn't get to see it—the cameras had ended their coverage for the day—but Jerry Pate rolled in a six-foot birdie putt on the final hole that gave him sole control of the lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

"I felt like I had it coming," was the wry comment of the slender 23-year-old who had missed five times from eight feet or less while Dave Stockton and a flock of others had closed in on him.

"I'd missed so many all day long that I felt like I had one coming," Pate said of the putt that provided him with a one-under-par 70 for the round and a 204 total—nine under par—for 54 holes over the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

He goes into today's final round with a one-stroke lead over Stockton, his partner as the American team in the World Cup competition only four weeks ago.

STOCKTON had come from seven strokes off the pace to gain a share of the lead in this inaugural of the 1977 PGA tour with a seven-under-par 64, the best round of the tournament, and was in the clubhouse with a 205 total when Pate, who started the day with a two-stroke lead, played the 18th. Pate drove in trouble, had to play back out to the fairway, then hit a long-iron third shot only six feet from the flag on the final hole.

He made that putt for birdie four—and the one-stroke lead—moments after the television cameras had cut away for the day.

"The weather had an effect on everybody," Pate said of the miserable playing conditions—temperatures in the shivering, mid-40s with gray, gloomy skies leaking occasional drizzling rain.

Buck was host to the Southern California Sports Council at the luncheon. The council announced its new officers: Charlie Davis, president; Jeff Barclay, first vice president; Bob Pekarek, second vice president; Ed Lomax, treasurer, and Mary Otis, secretary. George Ramsey, retiring president after five successive terms, moved up to chairman of the board of directors.

Members of the Sports Council are manufacturers, wholesalers, distributors, retailers and manufacturers' reps of all types of sporting goods.

Sparky Anderson, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, was the guest speaker at the luncheon. Highlight of his speech was that "talk of ball-player millionaires, free agents, and money, money, money would eventually simmer down and that players' loyalty to their clubs and their fans would become far more important."

FOOTBALL FANS WANTING to see the Super Bowl game on television and visit the Sports Show at the Anaheim Convention Center will be able to do both. There will be two large screens in the Convention Center and the game will be telecast on those.

Dave Wurzer, 1830 Tevis Ave., Long Beach 90815, announces that a Southern California Chapter of the International Backpackers' Association is being formed. A meeting will be held in Room 59, Physical Education Building, CSULB, at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The club will be involved with the care of hiking trails, backpacking, hiking and other self-propelled outdoor recreational activities.

The opening of Anaheim Lake, originally scheduled for Jan. 14, has been delayed indefinitely. The delay was caused by a rescheduling of water releases by the Metropolitan Water District. Russ Cleary, who operates that 80-acre lake and also Lake Irvine, says that the present six-day-a-week schedule for Irvine will be continued. The lake is closed on planting days (Thursdays).

Don Bullock's Gun Show is scheduled for a two-day run at the Great Western Exhibit Center, Jan. 29-30. Hours will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Great Western is at 2120 South Eastern Avenue in the City of Commerce. Bullock shows authentic weapons of modern and ancient times.

Competition looks tough

LBSU swimmers face uphill fight

By ELAINE RISINGER

Staff Writer

Long Beach State swim coach Glenda Linderman has no illusions about the level of competition her team will be facing in the WCAA conference this year.

Matched against USC and UCLA, the 49er varsity squad, with at least half of its swimmers either freshmen or sophomores, will have an uphill struggle against some "really tough" opponents, Glenda said.

That's why her team has been on double daily workouts through the semester break finishing up a concentrated training effort which started in October. LBSU will swim against the Trojans Friday.

Returning swimmers include Linda Sidaris, a breaststroker; Connie Lyman, a sprint freestyler; Jeri Shelton, distance freestyler, and Ginny Brewer. Kim Cannady, another returning team member, is temporarily sidelined with a shoulder injury.

Two touted freshmen are Carla Albano, who swims the individual medley and is "expected to do really well," and Teresa Van Oppen, who attended high school in Torrance and is an individual medley freestyler. Carla is the only woman member of the Long Beach lifeguard service.

Another freshman, Ann Shogren, who started out on the junior varsity squad, is moving up to compete in the sprint butterfly. Laura Hove, a transfer from Saddleback College, is a distance freestyler and can swim all-around.

The diving team is being coached by Glenda's assistant, Debbie Lipton, a former top flight LBSU and AAU diver. A familiar name is back on this roster. Peggy Reno will be competing again after an absence of two years. Joining her will be Melinda

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Scurry, another outstanding freshman, and Starla Coropassi, a junior new to the team.

In addition to Debbie, Glenda has a volunteer assistant coach, Sue Lewis who has had AAU coaching experience in swimming.

LONG BEACH City College gymnasts begin league competition at Golden West College Wednesday. The team will be trying to maintain a string of victories that extends six years.

"We'll have a lot more depth this year," said coach Peggy Stoll. "If we can stay healthy, we should be very good."

THE OPENING of WCAA conference basketball play is still a week away, but judging from preliminary competition, it should be a great season.

In previous years, Long Beach State, UCLA and

Cal State Fullerton have dominated the rankings. This year USC, with a squad composed of 75 per cent freshmen and sophomores, is hoping to change that.

The Trojans have a new coach, Marci Cantrell, who started the women's basketball program at Pepperdine two years ago. She expects her young team to improve on last year's 10-10 record.

"This team is very young and because of youth they are enthusiastic and eager. We are the dark horse of the league."

She feels the players will improve as the season progresses, and that they will overcome their inexperience. "There is a lot of camaraderie on this team, and the players are anxious to learn and accept my ideas."

The Trojans' goal is to qualify for the regional tournament. No USC women's team has ever done this, and Marci believes her team can be the first.

To qualify, the Trojans must finish either first or second in their conference. This will not be easy considering that three WCAA teams are ranked in the top 20 in a national pre-season poll. Long Beach State is ranked 18th, Cal State Fullerton, fifth, and UCLA 11th.

USC beat Fullerton last year, and Marci disagrees with the poll. She picks UCLA as the team to beat in the Western conference.

Coach Cantrell believes USC will battle Fullerton for second place with Long Beach challenging for third.

Pate thinks its great

Jerry Pate wears satisfied smile as six-foot birdie putt drops on 18th hole Saturday during third round of Phoenix Open. Pate, who had trouble on greens all day, found touch just in time to grab one-stroke lead during inaugural event of 1977 PGA tour.

Pate's putt on 18 keeps him on top

PHOENIX (AP) — The national television audience didn't get to see it—the cameras had ended their coverage for the day—but Jerry Pate rolled in a six-foot birdie putt on the final hole that gave him sole control of the lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

"I felt like I had it coming," was the wry comment of the slender 23-year-old who had missed five times from eight feet or less while Dave Stockton and a flock of others had closed in on him.

"I'd missed so many all day long that I felt like I had one coming," Pate said of the putt that provided him with a one-under-par 70 for the round and a $204 total—nine under par—for 54 holes over the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

He goes into today's final round with a one-stroke lead over Stockton, his partner as the American team in the World Cup competition only four weeks ago.

STOCKTON had come from seven strokes off the pace to gain a share of the lead in this inaugural of the 1977 PGA tour with a seven-under-par 64, the best round of the tournament, and was in the clubhouse with a 205 total when Pate, who started the day with a two-stroke lead, played the 18th. Pate dove in trouble, had to play back out to the fairway, then hit a long-iron third shot only six feet from the flag on the final hole.

He made that putt for birdie four—and the one-

from WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

CONTRARY TO MYTH, MEDIEVAL SUITS OF ARMOR ONLY AVERAGED BETWEEN 50 TO 60 LBS. AND THEY WERE SO WELL FITTED, THE WEARER COULD MOVE ABOUT EASILY.

CATTLE BRANDING IN THE U.S. DID NOT ORIGINATE IN THE WEST BUT IN CONNECTICUT. IN 1644, LEGISLATION REQUIRED CATTLE AND SWINE BE MARKED AND REGISTERED.

NOBODY KNOWS JUST WHEN MARBLES BEGAN, BUT HISTORY INDICATES THE GAME WAS PLAYED BY CHILDREN OF ANCIENT EGYPT AND ROME.

LOS ANGELES 458.2 SQ. MI.

JACKSONVILLE 827 SQ. MI.

THE LARGEST U.S. CITY IN AREA IS NOT LOS ANGELES AT 458.2 SQUARE MILES, BUT JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA WHICH COVERS 827 SQUARE MILES.

AND THE LEGENDARY CANDY BAR CAVERNS

PROLOGUE

SHORT-JOHN SMUGGLER IS HISTORY'S LITTEST PIRATE AND THE WORLD'S MOST COLOSSAL EGO. HE AND HIS MOTLEY CREW HAVE JUST DISCOVERED THE AMAZING CANDY BAR CAVERNS.

HERE'S THE TREASURE CHEST, SHORT-JOHN. RIGHT WHERE THE MAP SAID. ONLY THERE'S NO GOLD INSIDE. ONLY... CANDY BARS.

WHAT'S A CANDY BAR?

I DON'T KNOW, BUT THAT'S WHAT IT SAYS ON THE WRAPPER.

SHORT-JOHN NERVOUSLY INSPECTS THE CANDY BAR, THEN ORDERS BIG JACK (THE SHIP'S CULINARY EXPERT) TO TASTE IT FIRST.

AN OUTSIDE LAYER COMPOSED OF RICH MILK CHOCOLATE, WITH A CARAMEL CRUNCH CENTER. MOST EXTRAORDINARY.

SAVE SOME FOR ME, YOU GREEDY GLUTTON.

AFTER LOADING THE CANDY BARS ABOARD SHIP, OUR HEROES SET SAIL FOR THE NEW WORLD, AND A NEW BUSINESS.

WE'RE GOING LEGIT, MATES. WE'LL SELL THESE CANDY BARS IN THE COLONIES AND MAKE OUR FORTUNE. WE'LL EVEN SET UP OUR OWN MANUFACTURING PLANT.

WHAT'S A MANUFACTURING PLANT, SKIPPER?

WHO CARES-AS LONG AS IT'S NAMED AFTER ME.

INSIDE WOODY ALLEN

MARK TRAIL

by Ed Dodd and Tom Hill

INDIAN RHINO CALVES, SEEKING PHYSICAL CONTACT FOR REASSURANCE, STICK CLOSE TO MAMA

TIGERS ENJOY BABY RHINO AND IF THE MOTHER IS NOT NEARBY CAN EASILY MAKE OFF WITH A YOUNGSTER!

TOLERATING HER OFFSPRING FOR THREE YEARS, THE COW FINALLY DRIVES HIM AWAY

AND UNTIL HE'S FULL GROWN THE FEARFUL CALF STAYS WITH OTHERS HIS AGE AND MAY PANIC AT THE SLIGHTEST NOISE...

FOR, THOUGH HE'S TOO BIG FOR TIGER BAIT, ADULT MALE RHINOS OFTEN ATTACK AND KILL YOUNGSTERS!

TOM HILL

the AMAZING SPIDER-MAN

By Stan Lee and John Romita

MORNIN', J.J.--YOU'VE GOT A VISITOR IN YOUR OFFICE.

A VISITOR? HOW'D HE GET IN?

MISS BRANT! YOU KNOW I DON'T SEE ANYONE WITHOUT AN APPOINTMENT!

AND I DON'T MAKE APPOINTMENTS!

I-- COULDN'T QUITE KEEP HIM OUT, SIR.

CITY ROOM

STAN LEE
JOHN ROMITA

OH NO? WELL, I'LL GET RID OF--

YOU! YOU WERE EXPECTING MUHAMMAD ALI?

YOU MISANTHROPIC MASKED MORON! GET DOWN FROM THERE BEFORE I--

A FINE WAY TO TALK TO YOUR FRIENDLY NEIGHBORHOOD SPIDER-MAN!

LOOK, YOU WALL-CRAWLING WEASEL! I'VE GOT A GOOD MIND TO-- STOP BRAGGING, CUDDLES.

I JUST WANNA KNOW ONE THING--

ARE YOU THE CERTIFIABLE CRETIN WHO PROPOSED THAT DR. DOOM ADDRESS THE U.N.?

DR. DOOM EN ROUTE TO U.S.A. WILL ADDRESS UNITED NATIONS ANTI-TERRORISM CONFERENCES

VICTOR VON DOOM KING OF LATVERIA

YOU KNOW IT, WEB-HEAD!

WE NEED PEOPLE LIKE DOOM WHO WON'T LET COMMIE PINKOS PUSH 'EM AROUND!

YEAH, WE NEED 'EM LIKE KOJAK NEEDS HAIR SPRAY!

DOOM WIPED OUT CRIME IN LATVERIA, DIDN'T HE?

SURE! HE CALLED HIS ENEMIES CRIMINALS AND HAD 'EM ALL SHOT!

GO ON--BE A HIT-PICKER!

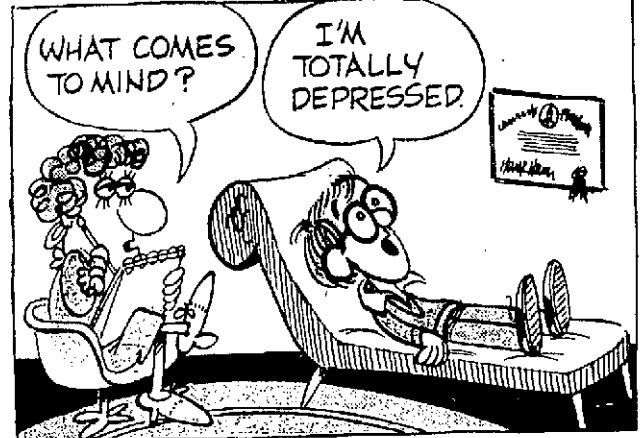

JUST WAIT! DOOM'LL CLIP YOUR WINGS FOR GOOD, YOU HIGH-FLYING CREEP!

THAT'S IT, LEAN OUT A LITTLE FURTHER, CHUCKLES --SO TODAY WON'T BE A TOTAL LOSS!

INSIDE WOODY ALLEN

WHAT COMES TO MIND?

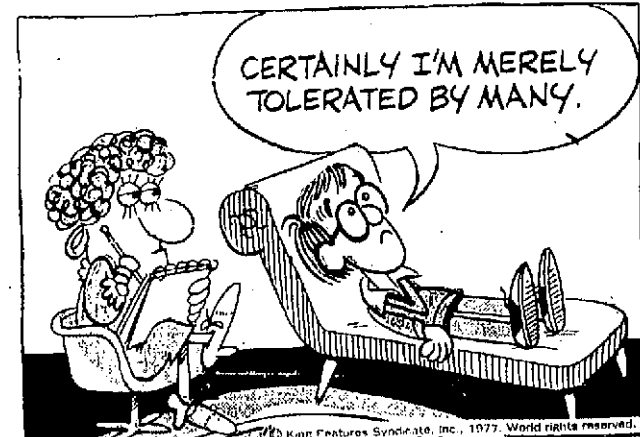

I'M TOTALLY DEPRESSED.

EVERYONE HATES ME

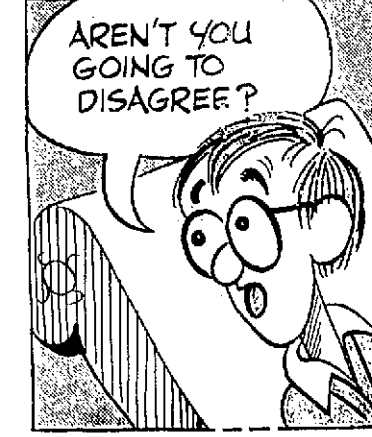

WELL, THEY MAY NOT HATE ME, BUT I'M SURE EVERYONE HAS AN INTENSE DISLIKE OF ME!

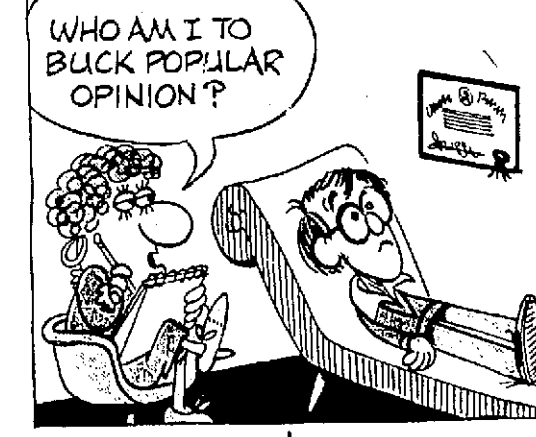

CERTAINLY I'M MERELY TOLERATED BY MANY.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

Young, restless James Houghton in prime now

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

After three years of playing Greg Foster in the CBS daytime drama serial "The Young and the Restless," young actor James Houghton got restless and decided it was time to wash his hands of the soap opera world and get a clean start in life.

So he quit the series last April, breaking the heart, no doubt, of thousands and thousands of American women who have nothing better to do than sit around the house all day watching soap operas.

The clean-cut performer figured he had served a long-enough apprenticeship in daytime television and that it was time to move on to bigger and better things, namely prime-time TV or movies.

It was a gamble, because Houghton didn't have any big job lined up when he quit. Nor did producers rush after him with promises of making him a big star.

But with plenty of determination and lots of effort on his own part — not to mention a bit of luck — James is now the star of a new prime-time CBS action-adventure series, "Code R," which will make its bow Friday night, Jan. 21, from 8 to 9 on Channel 2.

By coincidence, another series airing on CBS the same night (from 10 to 11) will be "Executive Suite," which happens to be produced by Jim's father, veteran TV producer-director Buck Houghton. "Executive Suite" is being shifted from Monday to Friday, starting this week.

"We can both blame Sonny and Cher if our shows are unsuccessful," commented young Houghton, with a grin.

"The Sonny and Cher Show" is being moved from Sunday to Friday night, starting this week, and will air just after "Code R" and just before "Executive Suite."

"Code R" will focus on emergency rescue operations on a small, inhabited island off the Southern California coast, which doesn't have a name in the series, according to Houghton, but which you can imagine is Catalina if you so desire.

The island's Police, Fire and Ocean Rescue departments share the same offices and the same secretary-dispatcher, Suzy, played by Susanne Reed.

Houghton portrays the fire chief, Rick Wilson, a bachelor in his early 30s (James is actually 28). Also starring are Martin Kove as George Baker, chief of beaches; Tom Simcox as Police Chief Walt Robinson, and Miss Reed, Baker's space-age power boat, Lifeguard I, is the pride of the island.

The chief of beaches, Houghton explained at lunch the other day in the Smoke House in Burbank, "is also a bachelor, about my age, whereas the police chief is an older guy, about 40, with a wife and a 10-year-old son."

Violence is played down on the series, Houghton said, adding that "nature and stupidity cause most of the problems" that lead to rescue operations by the three men. Each episode, he pointed out, deals with one main story and other little ones.

JAMES HOUGHTON... from soap opera to "Code R"

Viewers might be reminded of "Emergency" or "Adam-12," he admitted.

"I DON'T CLAIM this series is great drama," the 6-foot, 1-inch, 175-pound bachelor told me during his lunch break. "I can tell a sow's ear from a silk purse. I know it's a kids' show."

"Some of my friends say they'd never take such a role. But I see it as an opportunity to learn, as a step forward. I'm still learning; I don't claim to be ready for 'Hamlet' yet."

"I'm even learning a lot about directing — and I think I'd like to direct sometime."

Does he feel he has had some lucky breaks in his career?

"I have been very lucky," he responded. "Luck plays a major part in actors' lives — there are so many talented, experienced people around."

James has the looks that could, with the right amount of luck, make him a major star. He reminded me of a young Clint Eastwood and of the late James Dean.

"My looks probably open some doors," he said in reply to a question, "but you have to have more. There are so many good-looking people around."

He does feel, however, that it is easier to play a leading man than a character actor — that more talent is required to be a character actor. He mentioned the name of one of Hollywood's most famous leading men, and said, "He just stumbles his way through."

HOUGHTON got an early start as an actor, playing a small role at age 6 in an episode of "Wire Service," a TV series produced by his father. As a boy, he also had a continuing role in "McKeever and the Colonel" and appeared in a few other series. However, he did little acting from age 14 until after he graduated from the University of California at Berkeley.

"Almost no one works as an actor from 14 to 18," he said. "Older persons can look that age, and they don't have to take time out for classes."

James attended Harvard School in the San Fernando Valley through his sophomore year — "it was a military school then; that's where I got my education" — and spent his final two high school years at a private school in Switzerland. At Berkeley, he didn't participate in drama, and he majored in economics.

Why economics? Replied Houghton: "I liked the way an economics prof taught. Most of the professors are more interested in getting promotions and in getting published than in teaching. It's a terrible place to learn anything — the classes are much too large."

Well, if his career continues on the upswing, Houghton may find his economics background helpful in handling all the money he'll make.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM

Young, restless James Houghton in prime now

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

After three years of playing Greg Foster in the CBS daytime drama serial "The Young and the Restless," young actor James Houghton got restless and decided it was time to wash his hands of the soap opera world and get a clean start in life.

So he quit the series last April, breaking the heart, no doubt, of thousands and thousands of American women who have nothing better to do than sit around the house all day watching soap operas.

The clean-cut performer figured he had served a long-enough apprenticeship in daytime television and that it was time to move on to bigger and better things, namely prime-time TV or movies.

It was a gamble, because Houghton didn't have any big job lined up when he quit. Nor did producers rush after him with promises of making him a big star.

But with plenty of determination and lots of effort on his own part — not to mention a bit of luck — James is now the star of a new prime-time CBS action-adventure series, "Code R," which will make its bow Friday night, Jan. 21, from 8 to 9 on Channel 2.

By coincidence, another series airing on CBS the same night (from 10 to 11) will be "Executive Suite," which happens to be produced by Jim's father, veteran TV producer-director Buck Houghton. "Executive Suite" is being shifted from Monday-to-Friday, starting this week.

"We can both blame Sonny and Cher if our shows are unsuccessful," commented young Houghton, with a grin.

"The Sonny and Cher Show" is being moved from Sunday to Friday night, starting this week, and will air just after "Code R" and just before "Executive Suite."

"Code R" will focus on emergency rescue operations on a small, inhabited island off the Southern California coast, which doesn't have a name in the series, according to Houghton, but which you can imagine is Catalina if you so desire.

The island's Police, Fire and Ocean Rescue departments share the same offices and the same secretary-dispatcher, Suzy, played by Susanne Reed.

Houghton portrays the fire chief, Rick Wilson, a bachelor in his early 30s (James is actually 28). Also starring are Martin Kove as George Baker, chief of beaches; Tom Simcox as Police Chief Walt Robinson, and Miss Reed, Baker's space-age power boat, Lifeguard I, is the pride of the island.

The chief of beaches, Houghton explained at lunch the other day in the Smoke House in Burbank, "is also a bachelor, about my age, whereas the police chief is an older guy, about 40, with a wife and a 10-year-old son."

Violence is played down on the series, Houghton said, adding that "nature and stupidity cause most of the problems" that lead to rescue operations by the three men. Each episode, he pointed out, deals with one main story and other little ones.

JAMES HOUGHTON ... from soap opera to "Code R"

Viewers might be reminded of "Emergency" or "Adam-12," he admitted.

"I DON'T CLAIM this series is great drama," the 6-foot, 1-inch, 175-pound bachelor told me during his lunch break. "I can tell a sow's ear from a silk purse. I know it's a kids' show."

"Some of my friends say they'd never take such a role. But I see it as an opportunity to learn, as a step forward. I'm still learning; I don't claim to be ready for 'Hamlet' yet."

"I'm even learning a lot about directing — and I think I'd like to direct sometime."

Does he feel he has had some lucky breaks in his career?

"I have been very lucky," he responded. "Luck plays a major part in actors' lives — there are so many talented, experienced people around."

TV violence continues to stir controversy

By MIKE GOODKIND
Associated Press

There's a real simple way to eliminate television violence from the home. People can turn their sets off — if their kids let them.

Now Dr. Thomas Elmendorf, past president of the California Medical Association, wants to help adults exercise their parental control by letting them know in advance if a particular program episode is going to contain any violence. He thinks parents have a right to know if Starsky and Hutch, for example, are going to knock the teeth out of their prisoner.

Dr. George Gerbner, Dean of the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania, doubts that most parents have the authority to control their kids' viewings.

"IN THE AVERAGE home, children control the dial. What we need is to change programming," says Gerbner.

But Elmendorf wants at least to give parents a fighting chance. He believes that violent television "is an element in antisocial behavior."

Gordon Van Sauter, CBS' program practices vice president, is less sure. "There is no agreement on the effect of violence," he says.

Elmendorf and Sauter agree, however, that it's up to the parents to decide what kids should watch and that public opinion and pressure is a key to what you see on the tube.

ELMENDORF is quietly pressing for greater public awareness — not censorship or even a radical change in program format.

"We want the networks to have maximum of freedom and a minimum of government interference," says Elmendorf.

"I would really like to see the networks release something that would go into the TV listings which would assist parents in selecting appropriate viewing for their chil-

Klugman's 'Quincy' to be weekly show

By LEE WINFREY
Knight News Service

PHILADELPHIA — Next month, "Quincy" will become a regular weekly television series on NBC. The move is a tribute to Jack Klugman, whose performance in the title role has been one of the ornaments of the season so far.

Klugman won two Emmy Awards while playing sportswriter Oscar Madison on "The Odd Couple" series for five years. He has moved with admirable authority and seemingly effortless assurance from that situation comedy into the crime drama of "Quincy."

"Quincy" has appeared four times so far as a rotating part of the "Sunday Mystery Movie" package. It is not yet as polished as "Columbo," the mighty anchor of the "Mystery Movie" series.

But it is already better-played and more interesting than the other two "Mystery Movie" elements, "McCloud" and "McMillan," which are both beginning to look a little tired after several years on the little screen.

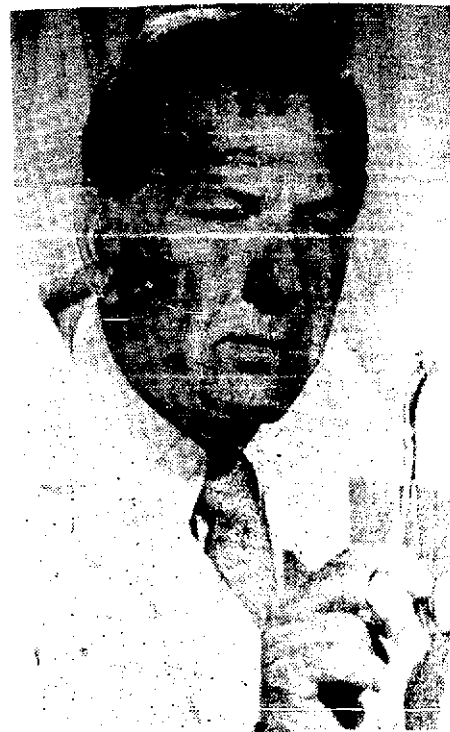

QUINCY (like Columbo, his first name is never mentioned) is a medical examiner in Los Angeles. He lives on a boat, which always seems in need of repair, during the rare interludes when violent death is not occurring on shore.

Quincy does not operate like any medical examiner you are likely to meet in real life. For one thing, although his jurisdiction ends at the Los Angeles County line, he dashed south to Mexico to solve his first case of the season, and east to Long Island to unravel his second.

Locating a real medical examiner who operated in such jet set style would probably be as hard as finding a grown-up idea on "Donny and Marie."

KLUGMAN is the first to admit that his character cuts unrealistically across normal boundaries. He calls such flights "a little moment of compromise" necessary now and then to keep Quincy in colorful motion.

Besides Klugman's artistry in the lead role, "Quincy" has the best supporting cast of any crime series currently on the air. There are four of them altogether, two of them friends of Quincy's and two of them foes.

Lynnette Mettley in the role of Quincy's girlfriend, Lee Porter, is a prize, enormously likeable even while being unbelievably long-suffering. Virtually every scene between the lovers is interrupted by a phone call calling Quincy back to work.

USUALLY these phone calls come from Robert Ito, who plays Quincy's assistant, Sam Fujiyama. Fujiyama is somewhat reminiscent of Charlie Chan's Number One Son, but he is so earnestly straight arrow that he leaves a viewer charmed.

A popular pattern on cop shows these days is to give the hero an unsympathetic and overbearing boss. This does two things: It engages the attention of viewers who hate their own real life boss, and it makes the hero seem like more of an individualist, fighting to catch crooks despite official interference.

Quincy has not one but two bosses like this. One is Dr. Astin, his superior in the medical examiner's office. Played with maddening primness by John S. Ragin, Astin is a prig, so prissy and obnoxious that it is hard to see how Quincy can work with him all day without trying to break his face.

GARY WALBERG is less aggravating in the role of Lt. Monahan, the policeman who always seems to be handling Quincy's cases.

But he, too, like Dr. Astin, thinks Quincy is too conscientious and complicates things too much.

Quincy has managed to stay a few steps ahead of Dr. Astin and Lt. Monahan so far, and I'm proud of him for it. But I'm beginning to worry that if he can't get away sometime to spend at least one full evening with Lee Porter, she's going to start wondering if her prospects might not be better on some other show.

CRITICS' CORNER

By HAROLD J.
WIEGAND
Knight News Service

A professor at Auburn University has been complaining that local news

broadcasters all sound alike.

Their apparent goal, he says, is a uniformity of speech which is driving regional dialect from the air.

He finds this trend unfortunate, because it threatens loss of the distinctive flavor that local and regional variations in speech add to our language.

A transplanted New Yorker, the professor was dismayed on his arrival in Alabama to discover the local broadcasters there all speaking the same way, with no trace of a Southern accent.

HE HAD BEEN expecting, at a turn of the dial, to have hominy grits and red-eye gravy practically flung at him from the tube, and he ends up hearing everyone talking like the doorman at New York's McAlpin Hotel.

He has found the same thing happening elsewhere in the country. In Boston, newscasters avoid the Hahvahd accent. In Dallas, there is no sign of the Texas drawl. General Beauregard never spoke like the television announcers in Atlanta.

The professor cannot be faulted for his interest in native American speech, and for wanting it preserved, but there is no reason why this enterprise should be left to the broadcasting industry.

FOLKS in the various parts of the country will go on talking as they always have, with assorted drawls, twangs, grunts and undisciplined participles, no matter how their local newscasters speak.

The people listening to televised news reports would be glad to settle, usually, for understandable English, with as few inaccuracies and grammatical fumbles as possible.

They could also do without broadcasters who fancy themselves as entertainers rather than reporters. If they want jokes, they can wait for Bob Hope.

When it is the news they are after, they should be given the news; not an assortment of dreary puns.

WHAT EFFECT poor grammar and sloppy sentence construction must have on a young television audience already on the verge of illiteracy can be left to the researchers.

A broadcaster reporting on the bomb explosion at New York's LaGuardia Airport said the investigators had not determined who had set the bomb —
"if, indeed, it had been set." There was a chance, presumably, that the de-

Marsh on "Phyllis," which airs at 8:30 p.m.
Monday on Ch. 2. After this week, "Phyllis" moves to Sunday night on the CBS lineup.

vice had gotten there by itself.

What makes many persons uncomfortable with local news is the prevalence of the "happy talk" favored by some stations.
When someone turns the knob for the news, he wants to know what has been happening, fast and factual. Without antics.

Violence on TV: opinions differ on what to do

dren," says Elmendorf, who practices emergency medicine at Davis, Calif.

At the American Medical Association's annual convention last month in Philadelphia, Elmendorf sponsored a resolution asking the networks to rate each program episode by a formula they would set up themselves. The AMA turned down the proposal because "the intent of the resolution was already being carried out."

IN EFFORTS to define TV violence, the AMA has forked over $25,000 to a Washington-based non-profit outfit called the National Citizens Committee for Better Broadcasting to compile ratings of individual shows. The money, says an AMA spokesman, was directed as a first step to "encourage the TV industry to reduce the amount of violence."

The NCCBB received widespread media coverage when it ranked each show last summer on its relative content of violence.

Over a six-week period, the service recorded each instance of violence and how long it appeared on the screen. Then all 63 shows seen on each network were ranked from least to most violent.

THE INDUSTRY objected to rating all forms of violence — from slaps to knifing — equally. From now on, promises Executive Director Ted Carpenter, acts of aggressive violence will be rated separately from such things as pratfalls in comedy shows or natural disasters.

The wider definition of violence was used in the original study, he said, because Gerbner's research has indicated that all forms of violence, regardless of their context of severity, appear to affect small children equally.

The winner of the first study, as least violent, was "The Bob Newhart Show," a situation comedy depicting the life and daily doings of a Chicago psychologist.

IRONICALLY, the two most violent shows in the first batch of rankings, "SWAT" and "The Rookies," have been canceled. Network authorities agree violence per se doesn't bring ratings.

Carpenter believes a rating system may be

DAVID SOUL and Paul Michael Glaser star in the crime drama series "Starsky and Hutch," which airs on Ch. 7 at 9 p.m. Saturdays.

helpful. "But what we're really trying to do is put the pressure on the industry itself."

Elmendorf thinks the ratings would lead to greater public awareness — hence public pressure.

Tom Kersey, ABC's West Coast Broadcast practices chief, and Sauter are opposed to published violence ratings, even though both networks monitor the violent content of shows for their own use.

"I THINK it's naive to assume that someone watching 'Kojak' in the fifth year of its existence does not know what 'Kojak' is," says Sauter.

"I hope nothing ever comes of the idea" of publishing violence ratings of individual shows, says Kersey. He says the number of violent acts is meaningless unless placed in a creative context which he believes the average viewer couldn't understand.

Sauter insists that with millions of viewers "there is no feasible way you can develop a rating system that can be used by that incredible range of people," He says.

"We apply a set of standards to all of our programming which we think represents the expectations, the tastes and the standards of the mass television audience."

SAUTER NOTES that despite the objections of media researchers, and even powerful national groups like the AMA, "we get very few letters from viewers complaining about violent programming."

"If there is popular groundswell, things will change," he notes.

"I think we do children a disservice by not luring them to books" and other forms of educational entertainment, says Sauter.

"My children (now grown) could watch anything they wanted on television but they could only watch it for a limited number of hours each week."

Violence on TV: opinions differ on what to do

dren," says Elmendorf, who practices emergency medicine at Davis, Calif.

At the American Medical Association's annual convention last month in Philadelphia, Elmendorf sponsored a resolution asking the networks to rate each program episode by a formula they would set up themselves. The AMA turned down the proposal because "the intent of the resolution was already being carried out."

IN EFFORTS to define TV violence, the AMA has forked over $25,000 to a Washington-based non-profit outfit called the National Citizens Committee for Better Broadcasting to compile ratings of individual shows. The money, says an AMA spokesman, was directed as a first step to "encourage the TV industry to reduce the amount of violence."

The NCBB received widespread media coverage when it ranked each show last summer on its relative content of violence.

Over a six-week period, the service recorded each instance of violence and how long it appeared on the screen. Then all 63 shows seen on each network were ranked from least to most violent.

THE INDUSTRY objected to rating all forms of violence — from slaps to knife — equally. From now on, promises Executive Director Ted Carpenter, acts of aggressive violence will be rated separately from such things as pratfalls in comedy shows or natural disasters.

The wider definition of violence was used in the original study, he said, because Gerbner's research has indicated that all forms of violence, regardless of their context of severity, appear to affect small children equally.

The winner of the first study, as least violent, was "The Bob Newhart Show," a situation comedy depicting the life and daily doings of a Chicago psychologist.

IRONICALLY, the two most violent shows in the first batch of rankings, "SWAT" and "The Reekies," have been canceled. Network authorities agree violence per se doesn't bring ratings.

Carpenter believes a rating system may be helpful. "But what we're really trying to do is put the pressure on the industry itself."

Elmendorf thinks the ratings would lead to greater public awareness — hence public pressure.

Tom Kersey, ABC's West Coast Broadcast practices chief, and Sauter are opposed to published violence ratings, even though both networks monitor the violent content of shows for their own use.

"I THINK it's naive to assume that someone watching 'Kojak' in the fifth year of its existence does not know what 'Kojak' is," says Sauter.

"I hope nothing ever comes of the idea" of publishing violence ratings of individual shows, says Kersey. He says the number of violent acts is meaningless unless placed in a creative context which he believes the average viewer couldn't understand.

Sauter insists that with millions of viewers "there is no feasible way you can develop a rating system that can be used by that incredible range of people." He says:

"We apply a set of standards to all of our programming which we think represents the expectations, the tastes and the standards of the mass television audience."

SAUTER NOTES that despite the objections of media researchers, and even powerful national groups like the AMA, "we get very few letters from viewers complaining about violent programming."

"If there is popular groundswell, things will change," he notes.

"I think we do children a disservice by not luring them to books" and other forms of educational entertainment, says Sauter.

"My children (now grown) could watch anything they wanted on television but they could only watch it for a limited number of hours each week."

NBC's 'Raid on Entebbe' reaches tube tonight

By MALCOLM N. CARTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Producer Edgar J. Scherick was saying that there's an old expression in the motion picture business.

That expression, he said, was this: "Time is the one thing money can't buy."

And time was the commodity he most needed to complete a multimillion-dollar film just six months after Israel successfully freed the hostages held at Uganda's Entebbe Airport last July 4.

Starring Charles Bronson and Peter Finch, the three-hour-long "Raid on Entebbe" will be shown on NBC at 8 p.m. Sunday. (Channel 4 locally).

IT FOLLOWS by four weeks ABC's version of the event, "Victory at Entebbe."

"Ours is a major motion picture," Scherick continued, saying that his film was probably the most costly ever made for television. Without disclosing the cost, he said it also will be released simultaneously in European movie houses.

It will be no "taped version of a stage play," he maintained. He added that it features a full-scale set of the airport buildings constructed in Stockton, Calif., for about $500,000. The structures really support people, the weapons work and the planes really fly.

"We attacked it in a big way," he said. "Getting it done well in time — that was the major problem."

WHAT WAS the hurry?

The subject was of topical interest, he replied, and the network wanted it in a hurry. Scherick denied that ABC's movie or a studio film since dropped had anything to do with the rush.

"We didn't even know about it," he declared, saying that production actually started two days after the raid.

"The minute we heard about it, we thought it would be a terrific film," he said.

Although Israel declined official cooperation in the research, Scherick, as he put it, "found our technical advisers."

THEN BEGAN the frantic race to do in six months what normally takes at least twice that time — hiring a cast, writing a script, finding a location, creating costumes and designing the set.

The design, he said, was taken from training film an airline had made earlier and from photographs that had been taken. According to the producer, the first draft of the script was completed just four weeks after the raid with the help of researchers in Israel, Greece and France.

THE BIBLE Says

GOD IS A SPIRIT

Recently in our series of articles on "What Is a Soul" one of our readers wrote asking a number of questions. For the next week or so we are going to be dealing with these things. Our questions come from Mr. W.C.W. of Long Beach. Though the questions were raised in the letter, they were not specifically stated. Therefore, I hope I correctly state the questions.

Question: How can you state that God does not have a body of flesh and bone since Heb. 1:3 says that Christ is the "express image of his (Father's) person", and also since Christ had a body of "flesh and bones" when he appeared to his disciples (Luke 24:29)?

As we pointed out in our earlier articles on this subject, Jesus said in John 4:24 that "God is a spirit". The very passage in Luke 24:29 that our querist cited to show that Christ had flesh and bone also tells us in the very next verse (v.30) "... for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye behold me having." As far as I am concerned, this settles the matter. However, another part of the question regarding Heb. 1:3 also deserves an answer.

Since the Bible states that God is a spirit, and a spirit does not have flesh and bone, we would observe that material descriptions of God are not actual but are accommodative, e.g. anthropomorphisms. Beyond the material heaven, the sky and atmosphere and universe is the heaven, or dwelling place of God. It is not the physical realm but as the word shamaim suggests; with the material there is also a spiritual heaven, "the heaven of heavens" (Deut. 26:15, 10:14).

In His pre-carnate existence, as Deity (John 1:1-3), Jesus was "in the form of God," (Phil. 2:6). He is "the effulgence of God's glory, and the very image of his substance" (Heb. 1:3). Form, from the Greek word morphe is defined as that which "denotes the special or characteristic form or feature of a person or thing" (Vine's Expository Dictionary of New Testament Words, Vol. 2, Page 123). The term implies the essential character as well as outline. Therefore Jesus existed as a Being, a character of Deity, with Deity (Father and Holy Spirit) from eternity. (Next week we will examine the words image and substance.)

THE BIBLE

Says

GOD IS A SPIRIT

Recently in our series of articles on "What is a Soul" one of our readers wrote asking a number of questions. For the next week or so we are going to be dealing with these things. Our questions came from Mr. W.C.W. of Long Beach. Though the questions were raised in the letter, they were not specifically stated. Therefore, I hope I correctly state the questions.

Question: How can you state that God does not have a body of flesh and bone since Heb. 1:3 says that Christ is the "express image of his (Father's) person", and also since Christ had a body of "flesh and bones" when he appeared to his disciples (Luke 24:29)?

As we pointed out in our earlier articles on this subject, Jesus said in John 4:24 that "God is a spirit." The very passage in Luke 24:29 that our querist cited to show that Christ had flesh and bone also tells us in the very next verse (v. 30) "... for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye behold me having." As far as I am concerned, this settles the matter. However, another part of the question regarding Heb. 1:3 also deserves an answer.

Since the Bible states that God is a spirit, and a spirit does not have flesh and bone, we would observe that material descriptions of God are not actual but are accommodative, e.g. anthropomorphisms. Beyond the material heaven, the sky and atmosphere and universe is the heaven, or dwelling place of God. It is not the physical realm but as the word shamaim suggests: with the material there is also a spiritual heaven, "the heaven of heavens" (Deut. 26:15, 10:14).

In His pre-carnate existence, as Deity (John 1:1-3), Jesus was "in the form of God," (Phil. 2:6). He is "the effulgence of God's glory, and the very image of his substance" (Heb. 1:3). Form, from the Greek word morphe is defined as that which "denotes the special or characteristic form or feature of a person or thing" (Vine's Expository Dictionary of New Testament Words, Vol. 2, Page 123). The term implies the essential character as well as outline. Therefore Jesus existed as a Being, a character of Deity, with Deity (Father and Holy Spirit) from eternity. (Next week we will examine the words image and substance.)

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Is there any possibility that Gerald Ford will run for the U.S. Senate? Have any former U.S. Presidents run for legislative office?—C.B. Branch, Alexandria, Va.

A. Ford will retire to write his memoirs, play golf, take an active role in the Republican party, possibly accept a college presidency if it is offered. John Quincy Adams, the only President's son to also become President, returned at age 65 to serve in the House of Representatives. John Tyler, the first U.S. Vice President to ascend to the office of President through the death of the Chief Executive (William Henry Harrison), was elected on Nov. 7, 1861, to the House of Representatives of the Confederate Congress. In 1872 former President Andrew Johnson ran for the U.S. Senate from Tennessee but was defeated. In 1874, however, he ran again and won, the only former President to become a U.S. Senator. He died a few months after serving in the Senate.

Q. Has Harold Wilson, former Prime Minister of Great Britain, ever described Idi Amin, President of Uganda, as "a demented, syphilitic nut"?—N. Rich, Lawrence, Kan.

A. Not exactly. In a television interview, Wilson once described Amin as "a nutter," an English colloquialism meaning mentally unstable.

"MISS LILLIAN" CARTER HUGS SON JIMMY

Q. Did President-elect Jimmy Carter's mother, "Miss Lillian," ever work for Joseph P. Kennedy, father of President John F. Kennedy?—Lee Brown, Dallas.

A. Mrs. Lillian Carter never worked for Joseph P. Kennedy.

Q. What disposition has been made of Robert Waterfield Jr.—the son of actress Jane Russell—who was charged with manslaughter?—L. V. L., Chicago.

A. Robert "Bucky" Waterfield, 20, adopted son of Jane Russell and football quarterback Robert Waterfield, was convicted some weeks ago of killing 26-year-old Mexican farm laborer Oscar Hernandez, who was dancing in a bar in Santa Barbara County, Cal. Waterfield, one of Miss Russell's three adopted children, claimed he had downed 24 cans of beer before firing off seven shots from his gun and could not remember the incident. Before sentencing him on a manslaughter charge, the judge in Santa Maria, Cal., hearing the case said that young Waterfield "appears to have a serious alcoholic drinking problem." Young Robert has been ordered to undergo three months of psychiatric observation before receiving a sentence.

Q. When Philip Agee, the former CIA spy, worked for the U.S. government in South America, did he use his real name or a cover name?—H. T., Dallas.

A. Agee worked for the CIA in South America under the cover name Jeremy S. Hodapp.

Q. Cindy Breakspeare, the 21-year-old girl from Jamaica who won the Miss World beauty contest—is it true that she is a masseuse in a Kingston bathhouse and that she lives with a guy who has fathered nine children by seven different mothers?—L.T., Key West, Fla.

A. Before she won the Miss World beauty contest, Cindy Breakspeare, 21, ran a health club in Kingston, Jamaica, where she went steadily with Bob Marley, a musician she describes as "just one of my boyfriends." Marley, 29, son of a British army captain and a Jamaican mother, is separated from his wife Rita, 29, has nine children by seven different women.

Q. Did Winston Churchill, the late Prime Minister of Great Britain, ever declare bankruptcy?—Dana Fox, Seattle, Wash.

A. Churchill was about to declare personal bankruptcy in 1938, had made preliminary arrangements to sell his home, Chartwell, to pay off $150,000 in debts. He was saved by Sir Henry Strakosch (1871-1943), an Austrian-born South African gold magnate who became a British subject in 1907. Through the intervention of Brendan Bracken, Churchill's secretary, Sir Henry took over Churchill's debts, managed his investments, let Churchill keep Chartwell, which he had purchased in 1922 for 5000 pounds.

Q. Francis Gary Powers, the spy flier who was shot down over Russia in 1960, thus breaking up the Eisenhower-Khrushchev summit meeting—is he still alive and well?—B. J. Jenkins, Ft. Jackson, S.C.

A. Powers is a helicopter pilot for KNBC-TV in Los Angeles. After Powers was shot down over the Soviet Union, he was tried in Moscow, sentenced to jail for 10 years but released after two in exchange for a Soviet spy we had captured in Brooklyn, N.Y.

ORSON WELLES

Q. Is Orson Welles incurably fat, or why won't he reduce at one of the noted hospital-run "fatty clinics"? Does he wear those ugly outfits to hide his obesity?—J. J. Horton, Heath Springs, S.C.

LOS ANGELES.

President Harry Truman's only child, Margaret Truman Daniel, 52, breezed through here the other week, plugging her new book, Women of Courage.

It is a collection of profiles of a dozen American women—some famous, others unknown, but all with guts and gumption.

"The book took me two years," she explained, "and it shouldn't have taken so long, but I had to commute between Washington, D.C., and New York City to get the research done with Alice and Tom Fleming," who helped organize the book.

Mrs. Daniel is the wife of Clifton Daniel, former Washington, D.C., bureau chief for The New York Times, who was recently transferred back to New York and will retire from The Times this September. She is also the mother of four sons: Clifton Truman, 19; William Wallace, 17; Harrison Gate, 13, and Thomas Washington, 10. Clifton works for the CBS news department "and simply loves it." William and Harrison attend prep school. And Thomas attends a boy's school in New York.

None of Mrs. Daniel's children has ever attended a public school, "and I'd rather not invade their privacy by telling you where they go," she says. "Our oldest son went to college for a year but then took a year off to work for CBS. He lives with us in New York [a Park Avenue triplex]."

Women of Courage is Mrs. Daniel's fourth book. "I wrote this one because my publisher thought it was a good idea, my agent thought it was a good idea, and I thought it was a good idea," she explains. "Now I'm busy promoting it. You just can't write a book nowadays without going out and selling it, too."

Mrs. Daniel is a "soft-seller." She claims to be stubborn and opinionated ("much more opinionated than my father was"). But she refuses to confirm or deny that she voted for Gerald Ford.

"I'm a private citizen," she declared. "I've got a right to vote, and nobody needs to know how. It's just sort of a principle with me not to tell."

"What I will say is that I'm always optimistic about our system of government. It was really put to the test with Watergate—and it works. We came through. I think it was Chief Justice Burger who said, after he had sworn in Mr. Ford, 'Well, now we know the system works.'"

Margaret Truman—who delayed marriage and subsequent motherhood until she was 32—lived in the White House for seven years, a time she once regarded as a "mild form of imprisonment."

'The Great White Jail'

"I used to call it The Great White Jail," she recalled, "but it's much more of a jail now than it was then [1945-52]. For example, no Secret Service agent accompanied me when I went out on a date. My gentleman friend would merely drive up the White House roadway to the front door, park his car and come in. He'd walk through the entrance, take the elevator up to the second floor and just collect me."

"And when I attended George Washington University I had no Secret Service protection, either. As a matter of fact, there was very little gasoline during the war, and I rode the bus to school for two and a half years. Later on I got a limousine to go to college in, and I thought that was beautiful. But while I was on campus I was just another student. No Secret Service protection—except one time."

"Charlie Ross, who was my father's press secretary, decided they wanted pictures of Margaret Truman going to school. 'Let's do it and get it over with,' Charlie suggested. So I agreed. But one of my professors was kind of fussed about the whole thing. He didn't like it very much, having photographers in his class. He was Dr. Sheppard and he taught English literature and he was a wonderful teacher. He had a 75th birthday—or maybe it was his 70th—not too long ago, and I wrote him a note. Anyway, there was one picture of me sitting in class listening to him. And it was circulated everywhere. Soon he started getting letters from students he hadn't heard from for 20 or 30 years."

Margaret Truman majored in history when she attended college, "because my dad was a history buff, and he really taught me about 50 percent of all the history I learned—at least 50 percent," she says. "He had the most fantastic knowledge of history of any man I've ever met." And that includes her husband of 20 years, Clifton Daniel—from Zebulon, N.C., once with the Associated Press, and a very widely traveled and knowledgeable man, indeed.

LOS ANGELES.

President Harry Truman's only child, Margaret Truman Daniel, 52, breezed through here the other week, plugging her new book, Women of Courage.

It is a collection of profiles of a dozen American women—some famous, others unknown, but all with guts and gumption.

"The book took me two years," she explained, "and it shouldn't have taken so long, but I had to commute between Washington, D.C., and New York City to get the research done with Alice and Tom Fleming," who helped organize the book.

Mrs. Daniel is the wife of Clifton Daniel, former Washington, D.C., bureau chief for The New York Times, who was recently transferred back to New York and will retire from The Times this September. Margaret Truman—who delayed marriage and subsequent motherhood until she was 32—lived in the White House for seven years, a time she once regarded as a "mild form of imprisonment."

"He had the most fantastic knowledge of history of any man I've ever met." And that includes her husband of 20 years, Clifton Daniel—from Zebulon, N.C., once with the Associated Press, and a very widely traveled and knowledgeable man, indeed.

Margaret Truman, who went to Washington at age 9 and lived there off and on for 21 years, abandoned a concert singing career in the 1950's and conducted her own radio show, Authors in the News, for seven years. She remembers those years fondly and says, "I'd like to have my own show again, a general TV interview show. I know I'm asking for trouble, because it's a lot more work than radio. But I wouldn't mind that. There's so much you can do with videotape nowadays. You can tape so far ahead. And I really have enough time to do it."

Mrs. Daniel has a cleaning lady who comes in twice a week and a housekeeper who's a good cook. "And, besides, Clifton is a very good cook, and I have a theory about cooking which holds that any idiot who can read can cook. There are some people who cook much better than others—like my husband, who is not an idiot by any means, and Craig Claiborne and Jim Beard, who are superb cooks. But they love it. Clifton likes to cook on a weekend after I get all the ingredients together."

No domestic scientist

Margaret Truman Daniel has never been content with being "only a housewife and mother."

"I remember one time," she narrates, "when I met Winston Churchill and Jan Christiaan Smuts, the great statesman from South Africa. Mr. Smuts was very blue-eyed and funny and said to me, 'What are you studying in college?' And I answered, 'History and English literature.' And he said, 'No domestic science?' And I said, 'Domestic science? What on earth is that?' And he said, 'Shouldn't you learn to become a mother, a wife and how to cook and take care of a house?' And I promptly answered, 'No, sir. That's the last thing I want to do.' In those days I didn't get autographs from famous people often, but I wanted his. So he wrote on his placecard 'To the future domestic scientist' and signed it."

'Not a blind voter'

Although Mrs. Daniel is a registered Democrat, she says, "I'm not a blind voter. From time to time I've voted for a Republican." Nelson Rockefeller is one. New York Sen. Jacob Javits is another. Mrs. Daniel was also happy to note how both Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford invoked her father's name, record and reputation for integrity in their Presidential campaigns. Of the Truman renaissance, she says, "I've thought about it quite a lot, and frankly I haven't been able to decide. My dad died the day after Christmas in 1972, but I'm glad he lived long enough to see a reassessment of his accomplishments. One day he read a very nice editorial about himself in the Kansas City Star. And I said, 'Did you see that editorial?'

A family gathering in Bermuda in 1961: Former President Harry Truman and wife Bess pay lap service to grandsons Clifton and William, then 4 and 2, while parents Margaret Truman Daniel and Clifton Daniel proudly look on.

And he responded with, 'I must have done something wrong!' The Star never was for him."

Mrs. Daniel believes that "it's partly nostalgia which accounts for the reexamination of the Truman years. History takes care of a lot of things."

One memory she is not particularly nostalgic about concerns the time her father said he'd rather have grandchildren than a prima donna in the family. "I was on a concert tour," she recalls, "and I read that quotation in the newspaper. I really hit the roof. I think Dad despaired of ever having any grandchildren. But he finally got some. Do you know the story of how he found out about his first grandson?

"My husband called him in Independence when the oldest one was born. Mother had gone to the hairdresser, but Dad didn't even call her there. He waited until she came home. When she came up the walk, he said, 'Ah! Margaret's just had a boy.' Very calmly like that. And she said, 'What! Don't just stand there. Go and call and get train tickets. We're going to New York immediately.'

"Dad was very calm. He got the tickets, and they were on the train that night or the next day. They visited me at Doctors Hospital, and Dad went in to see his oldest grandson. And this is a very funny picture. He was surrounded by reporters, and the father of the baby is out on the edge, cropped out of the photos. The Daily News took a picture of Dad holding this impromptu press conference about his grandson, and his son-in-law is way outside of this circle. All Clifton wanted to do was take his father-in-law back to the hotel. But he couldn't get him to leave because Dad wanted to talk about his grandson. Dad said his grandson had red hair. He never had red hair. He had masses of black hair. So much black hair that I said, 'Take him back. He can't be mine.'"

Bess still checks up

Harry Truman was 73 when his first grandchild was born. He died at age 88. His wife Bess, 91, still resides in Independence, Mo., where she suffers from chronic bursitis but, according to her daughter, "is just as sharp as she ever was and just as stubborn and checks up on me regularly as if I were 10 years old."

Mrs. Bess Truman has been under the protection of the Secret Service since the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in 1963. Until then there was no Secret Service protection for any former U.S. President or First Lady.

She still refuses to be interviewed by newsmen, however, a policy she has maintained ever since 1945.

Her daughter's explanation is: "Mother followed Mrs. Roosevelt into the White House, and that was a pretty hard act to follow. She had no intention of trying to pick up where Mrs. Roosevelt left off. In fact, Mrs. Roosevelt never stopped. She kept on. She was called the First Lady of the World before she died, which she deserved."

"But my mother felt very strongly that she should make a home. Although she wouldn't be interviewed and would not make speeches, she had to shake thousands of hands and entertain thousands of people, which she did very politely and very nicely."

'Wicked sense of humor'

"She still won't give interviews because she doesn't like the idea of answering questions about her personal life. She says that's her business and nobody else's. The truth is she has a wicked sense of humor about everything. But she's always been a lady, although I'm afraid she hasn't been able to instill too much of that in me."

Margaret Truman Daniel is not only a lady but a gentle, diplomatic one with a fierce loyalty to the memory of her father, who is now being lionized as the U.S. President responsible for some of the best years of our lives.

Observations

Perspective on the World. That's what Anthony Quinn has, thanks to his extensive travels. He'll share his perspective with you as he narrates the "Mobil Showcase" TV series, Ten Who Dared, about some of history's most remarkable explorers. And the on-location filming of much of the action will transport you from Columbus's Spain to the South Pole, where Roald Amundsen and four companions survived a frozen ordeal to win a place in history.

Some Victorian! Mary Kingsley wasn't your typical Victorian Englishwoman. When both her parents died after she had spent her first 30 years caring for her invalid mother, Miss Kingsley decided to carry on her father's work in natural history. Her travels among the Fang people of West Africa in 1893 make for an amazing adventure. But her journey was a short one compared with the 999 arduous days that newspaper reporter Henry Morton Stanley spent exploring the length of the Congo River.

The West. The Sierras and the deserts of North America provide the locale for the story of Jedediah Smith. In 1826 Smith, a fur trapper, became the first white man to cross the frontier from Utah to California. A very different locale—the lush and deadly Venezuelan jungle—is the setting for the adventures of Alexander von Humboldt, who became known as the father of geography. And in the Peruvian Andes, the greed of Francisco Pizarro destroys the Inca civilization.

"COULD YOU DIRECT ME TO THE EXPLORERS CLUB?"

Around the globe. The other explorers depicted in the series are: Captain James Cook, the mariner who charted vast areas of the South Pacific; Robert Burke and William Wills, whose crossing of Australia has been called "the most disastrous success" in exploration history; and Charles Doughty, the first Christian Englishman to live among the Bedouins without denying his faith.

Enriching your life. These ten hour-long documentary dramas will shrink your world and bring history into your living room. They're entertainment—and education—for the whole family. Check your local TV listings for the first episode, Christopher Columbus, which will be shown on most stations later this week. And watch for this symbol, just as a reminder.

If you're wondering what sort of career you should carve out for yourself, send for a free copy of "Jobs in 1985," which the Department of Labor will issue in February. Send a postcard to: Consumer Information Center, Dept. 529E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The booklet points out that the supply of college graduates will probably exceed the demand through the mid-1980's. Thus, some will find themselves overqualified and dissatisfied with the jobs they get.

According to the Labor Department, persons with vocational training in the crafts may be in greater demand than those with college degrees. Employers may hesitate to hire college grads as laborers because of the risk of job dissatisfaction. Moreover, college grads in the 1980's may face increasing competition for para-professional and technical jobs. And if you plan to become a teacher, think twice. In the 1980's there will be more teachers than openings.

What looks good on the job front? There will be a need for social workers, merchandisers, retail buyers, salespeople and computer programmers. Employment should be good as computer use expands in the health and education fields.

JACK FORD

JACK CARTER

Marijuana Update

The 1976 Presidential campaign was a first in a unique way.

Both Ford and Carter shared something with millions of American parents: their children had smoked pot.

Michael Ford, 26; Jack Ford, 24; Jack Carter, 29; Chip Carter, 26, and Jeff Carter, 24, all admitted to having sampled marijuana. Each said he no longer smokes the stuff. Jimmy Carter, of course, is on the record as favoring the decriminalization of marijuana.

The simple truth is that marijuana is no longer the bugaboo it once was. Even Egil Krogh—the straight arrow who was Nixon's architect for "Operation Intercept," the ill-fated marijuana blockade of the U.S.-Mexican border—testified some weeks ago before the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee: "It is wrong to jail young people for possessing pot." He now supports marijuana decriminalization.

Many localities are changing their attitudes and enforcement priorities concerning pot. Peter Bensinger, chief of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, declares that marijuana is no longer a federal priority. The Feds are more interested in stopping the flow of heroin across the border. Marijuana, however, is far from being legal.

Last year, 416,000 Americans were arrested for marijuana-related offenses. Seven out of 10 drug arrests are still for marijuana. But many judges are now assessing small fines for possession of limited amounts.

Margaret Truman, who went to Washington at age 9 and lived there off and on for 21 years, abandoned a concert singing career in the 1950's and conducted her own radio show, Authors in the News, for seven years. more than a man.

Like any man, Jesus Christ ate and slept. But he did other things beyond man's power. Like walking on water. Like raising the dead to life.

In view of this, it seems strange that some would say or sing, "He is only a man." Given the evidence, one ought wonder at least whether he was in fact God as he claimed.

If Christ is indeed God, wouldn't that imply that he is more than a remembered hero or teacher? Wouldn't that imply that in some way he is alive, present and active in today's world? If so, could one afford to ignore him? Or have the fuzziest notions about him? Is your present unhappiness perhaps the result of never really coming to grips with the Jesus-God question and its meaning in your life?

These are important questions. They will not go away. Somehow, they have to be answered. To help you with the answers, we would like to send you a free booklet: "Savior of All Mankind." We think you will find it helpful. Write today. No one will call.

Know Your Medications, Stop Taking Risks!

In a Midwestern city, a 10-year-old boy suffers heart damage from rheumatic fever—all because of failure to take a prescribed antibiotic long enough during an acute strep throat to knock out the infection completely and prevent onslaught on the heart.

In a town in upper New York State, a man is admitted to a hospital because of severe nosebleeds and vomiting of blood after taking excessive amounts of a prescribed anticoagulant drug needed to thin his blood and help prevent clots.

On the West Coast, a woman with bronchial asthma is rushed to a hospital with severe heart palpitations. Physicians are puzzled until they discover she used, at too frequent intervals, a prescribed spray for asthma.

These are just a few cases that illustrate a problem that lately has become of urgent concern: the failure of great numbers of people to use drugs properly, to use them at the right times and in the right amounts or even to use them at all, to understand their effects and possible dangers of improper use.

And the problem is by no means solely one of patient fault.

POOR PRESCRIBING PRACTICES. At the University of Rochester Medical Center, investigators in a pilot study interviewed outpatients and found 51 percent not to be complying with written prescriptions. Half of these said they simply did not understand the instructions given for their use.

The investigators then did an extensive study which showed graphically how the poor prescribing practices of physicians can confuse patients.

And the problem is by no means solely one of patient fault.

POOR PRESCRIBING PRACTICES. At the University of Rochester Medical Center, investigators in a pilot study interviewed outpatients and found 51 percent not to be complying with written prescriptions. Half of these said they simply did not understand the instructions given for their use.

The investigators then did an extensive study which showed graphically how the poor prescribing practices of physicians can confuse patients.

Consider the label on a bottle of prescription pills that reads, "Take three times a day, with meals."

The question is: before each meal, in the middle of or after each meal?

It can make a difference. Some medicines are best taken on a full stomach to minimize irritation, others on an empty stomach to help the body absorb them.

Penicillin G, for example, is one drug that should be taken on an empty stomach for optimal absorption. Yet the investigators found that 89.5 percent of patients who had received a prescription for penicillin G calling for use three times a day and at bedtime interpreted that to mean with meals and at bedtime.

Looking into how patients interpreted instructions on nine other prescription labels, the investigators found "a surprisingly wide range of interpretations, a high frequency of misinterpretations, and a significant potential for failure or illness as a consequence of mistaken interpretation."

Isolated situation? Hardly. In recent years, many studies have indicated a high rate of noncompliance or faulty compliance because of poor prescription writing or failure of communication between doctor and patient.

Commonly, physicians have blamed the patients. In one study, 67 percent of physicians tied noncompliance to the "uncooperative personality of patients." Many others cited inability to understand recommendations.

But a recent study emphasizes the doctor's role. Directed by Dr. Barbara S. Hulka of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, it covered 357 patients being treated by 46 physicians in private practice in Fort Wayne, Ind. The patients had either diabetes or congestive heart failure—conditions requiring continued drug treatment, sometimes with more than one drug.

The study showed patients failing to take 18 to 19 percent of the drugs prescribed, taking 19 to 20 percent more drugs than the doctors had ordered, and timing drugs incorrectly in 17 percent of cases.

Big improvement

Dr. Hulka and her co-workers found nothing about the patients—social class, educational background, or other characteristics—to account for the errors. And, significantly, they found that "when patients were informed as to what was expected of them, their behaviors conformed to that expectation more than 85 percent of the time."

When the Hulka study was published in the American Journal of Public Health, an accompanying editorial emphasized that "to characterize the patient as the willful culprit—as 'noncompliant' or worse, a 'drug defaulter'—is to ignore the responsibility of the practitioner."

A CAUSE OF NEEDLESS SURGERY. Just a few months ago, Dr. Ezra A. Amsterdam of the University of California, Davis, reported on a check of 115 patients with angina pectoris, the chest pain associated with heart disease. All 115 had been considered refractory to medical treatment and had been referred for special tests as candidates for major heart surgery.

The check revealed a startling fact. Nitroglycerin is a highly effective and safe drug that, when used properly, not only can stop angina attacks when they occur, but often can prevent them from occurring.

Yet the study showed that only 25 percent of the patients had ever been told by their physicians about the prophylactic use of nitroglycerin. "Far fewer angina patients," Dr. Amsterdam says, "would be considered refractory if given appropriate medical therapy."

Dr. Peter M. Yurchak of Harvard Medical School agrees emphatically, observing that medical treatment of angina is "effective if it's optimal, but most patients don't receive optimal treatment. Unless internists and cardiologists are willing to spend the time on optimal treatment, then they pass the baton to their surgical friends."

Heartburn is a common affliction—in some cases, a severe one—as large amounts of acid back up from the stomach into the esophagus, burning tissues there. Antacids and positional treatment are mainstays of therapy.

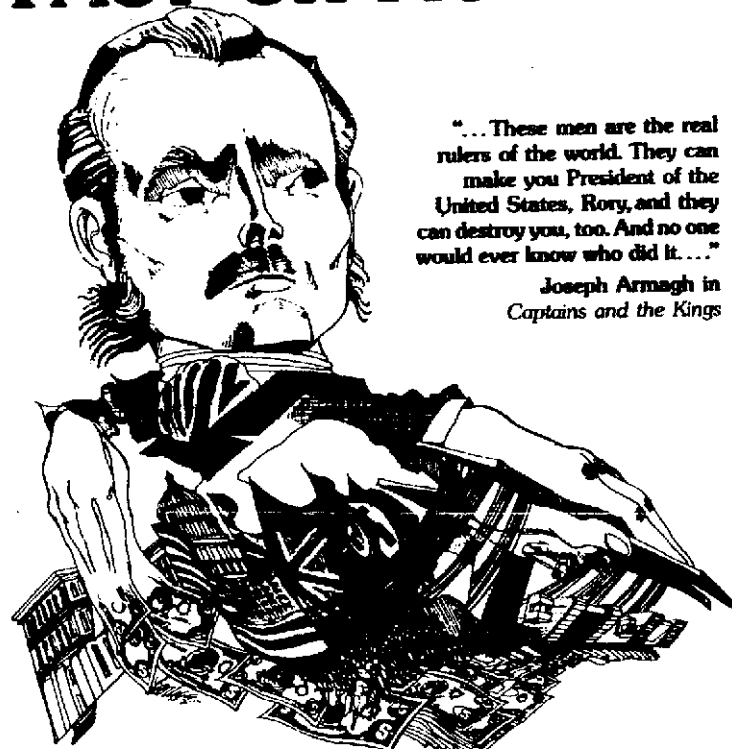

But Dr. Marvin M. Schuster of Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Baltimore, reports that too often antacids and positional treatment are not given an adequate trial, and "the patient is then called nonresponsive and is referred to a surgeon or gastroenterologist."

Says Schuster: "Positional therapy is often not explained clearly enough. Most intelligent patients will cooperate and improve if they understand that their shoulders should be elevated 30 degrees (in bed) and why. Simply telling the patient to use two pillows may be taken to mean two pillows behind the neck, which only aggravates the reflux [of acid]."

Limit: One subscription per person.
Subscriptions close: February 22, 1977.

From the time of George Washington, the Presidency of the United States has been a place for a brave heart and a strong spirit. An office of awesome responsibility. For the President is defender of the Constitution and guardian of the ideals first proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence.

The thirty-seven men who have shouldered this burden have been ordinary people, called by their countrymen to be shapers of America's destiny. Each the hope of future generations. The holder of what has become the most powerful office on earth.

Some strong and truly titans of their times, some weak; some movers of history, others swept by its tide; their story — the history of the Presidency — is the heritage of every American.

An official commemorative collection.

Now, on the eve of the inaugural of the first President of America's third century as a Nation, it is fitting for us to remember — and to honor — those men who, far surpassing even the most optimistic dreams of our Founding Fathers, have made the White House the focus of our history. The citadel of our freedom. The living symbol of America to us and to all the world.

To do so, in a lasting and significant way, The White House Historical Association — dedicated to enhancing every citizen's appreciation of the White House — has authorized the renowned Fleetwood Company to issue a collection of thirty-eight engraved Philatelic Commemorative Covers individually honoring all of The Presidents of the United States.

This is the first and only such collection ever to be authorized by the White House Historical Association and will be extraordinary in every respect.

A dignified and worthy tribute.

Historically accurate to the smallest detail, each Cover will focus on one President. Superbly produced on luxurious laid-fiber paper — the traditional paper of our Nation — each will be vividly cacheted with the President's portrait from the Official White House Collection. Masterpieces by such greats as Gilbert Stuart, Rembrandt Peale, Samuel F. B. Morse, they capture each President's character and vision with uncommon sensitivity.

Moreover, they will be handsomely engraved with the Presidents' signatures. Signatures that have been written with firm and determined hands in testament to the aspirations of a whole Nation; in witness to the great turning points of our history. Abraham Lincoln's, which freed the slaves. Thomas Jefferson's, which doubled the Nation's size. Theodore Roosevelt's that busted the trusts. And John F. Kennedy's that set America on course for the moon. Appropriately, each will be officially issued and postmarked during 1977 on the exact anniversary of the President's birth at the place where he was born. Places now enshrined in our history.

The complete collection will be a dignified and worthy tribute to the lives, the times, and the achievements of our Presidents. From the youngest,

John F. Kennedy, to the oldest, William H. Harrison, they are men who have had unshakable faith in America and its future, in its people and in its principles. Men who became part of our proud heritage as The Presidents of the United States.

One single, strictly limited edition.

The Presidents of the United States will be issued in a single, strictly limited edition. And the total number will be forever limited to the exact number of original subscriptions postmarked not later than February 22, 1977, with a limit of one collection per subscriber.

To assure the authenticity of this limited edition, each Cover will bear the imprimatur of the White House Historical Association and the distinctive hallmark of The Fleetwood Company — recognized since 1929 as America's foremost purveyor of Philatelic Commemorative Covers — which has been authorized by the White House Historical Association to produce the complete collection.

Handsome Collector's Album included.

Collectors who take advantage of this opportunity to acquire The Presidents of the United States will also receive, without additional cost, a handsomely bound collector's album. With narrative by historian David C. Whitney — one of America's most prominent authorities on the Presidency — this lavish, over 200-page album will bring each President and his times into vivid perspective. MEDICATIONS CONTINUED

And Schuster goes on to add: "One pitfall with antacids is that patients are often told to take a tablespoonful three or four times daily before or after meals—at which times the antacid is useless because there is a natural buffer in the stomach during eating. Rather, patients need the antacid an hour or two after eating, when the stomach is empty."

THE DIMENSIONS OF FAILURE. The degree of patient failure to use medicine properly or at all is staggering.

Strep throat infections can cause rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease, both preventable by proper use of penicillin. But studies have found 34 percent of patients not taking it.

PAS is a valuable drug for tuberculosis. But investigators, not relying on what patients reported, checked on urine samples—if the drug is taken, some of it appears in the urine—and found none detectable in the urine of 50 percent of patients.

Some don't take it

Some studies of diabetics have found half or even more making errors in insulin dosage. Oral iron to avoid anemia in pregnancy is effective—but 30 percent of pregnant women don't take it when prescribed. Psychiatric patients—under treatment for depression, anxiety, other conditions—commonly fail to comply. In one study, only 48 percent were using medication at all or as directed.

Most cases of epilepsy can be controlled. But a study of epileptic children showed that only 25 percent had appropriate levels of anticonvulsant medication in their blood.

TWO IMPORTANT REASONS. Recently, Dr. Richard N. Podell and an associate at Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, and Overlook Hospital, Summit, N.J., focused on two major reasons for misuse of or failure to use prescribed medications.

One involves unanticipated side effects that can be confusing or frightening—and failure of patients to tell their physicians about the disturbances.

Don't 'act dumb'

Says Dr. Podell: "The patient sometimes does not know that the side effect is related to the medication and he may fear he will offend the physician by complaining. There are many circumstances in which the patient 'acts dumb' before the physician. Our impression is that patient reluctance to express these concerns is especially common when the physician's actions are intimidatingly authoritarian. Obviously, if the physician does not learn about the side effects, there is little he can do to correct them; noncompliance is then likely to result."

A second problem is failure of patients to ask questions. In one study, Pharmaceutical firms are looking into gimmicks to help children and adults take their medicine properly. One new system called "Memory Dose" puts pills in individual packets labeled with clear, precise instructions for their use.

only 24 percent asked three or more questions about their medication. The fault of the patients? Perhaps to some extent—but, as Dr. Podell points out, "It is not quite this simple. The physicians often subtly discourage patients from asking questions."

In this study, in only 19 of 221 instances did a physician even bother to ask a patient if he had any questions. In 13 percent of cases, the physician ignored the patient's first question. "More important," observes Dr. Podell, "many mannerisms signaled the patient that further questions would not be welcome. These included obvious clock-watching, looking toward the waiting room to see how many more patients were there."

WHAT CAN BE DONE. In the Acute Disease Clinic of Children's Hospital, Buffalo, N.Y., when only 5 percent of patients were found to be complying with a 10-day course of antibiotic treatment for middle ear infection, a program was set up in which hospital pharmacists gave patients' parents complete verbal and written instructions on medication. Labeling was precise and detailed, and parents received a calibrated measure for the medication and a calendar to record doses. These measures raised full compliance tenfold.

Right now, under study by several major pharmaceutical companies as a means of improving compliance of both adult and child patients is a "Memory Dose" dispenser system developed by the Medical Dispenser Co. of Atlantic Highlands, N. J.

The compact dispenser can be loaded in seconds with a blister-packaged cartridge of a premeasured quantity of tablets or capsules. An appropriate date/time regimen is preprinted on each cartridge, and the regimen shows through two adjacent windows on the face of the dispenser. One window indicates when the last dose was taken, the other when the next dose is needed.

Perhaps the growing concern within the medical profession and increasing efforts to educate physicians to recognize and do something constructive about the frequency and dangers of patient noncompliance will bear fruit.

Meantime, what can you do?

It's your body

You can recognize that, whenever you have a health problem, the more you know the better—about the problem itself, about the reason for any medication and how it works, about exactly how much to take and when and for how long. Know also about any expectable side effects which need not be alarming and others which call for immediate reporting to your physician, who, often quite readily, can eliminate them with a change in dosage or a change to another effective drug less likely to produce undesirable effects.

You have every right to expect your physician to answer your questions, even to anticipate many, to give you adequate information even without your questions, and to write his prescriptions so they are precise and fully understandable.

A hasty scrawl of an uninformative prescription instead of all of the above is bad medical practice. It could well be called a substitute for medical practice. Don't accept it. If you can't get what is right, go elsewhere. But chances are increasingly good that with firm persistence on your part, you may well get good medicine in the same office where you may not be getting it now.

A Limited Edition Collection.
Available by Advance Subscription Only.
Limit: One subscription per person.
Subscriptions close: February 22, 1977.

From the time of George Washington, the Presidency of the United States has been a place for a brave heart and a strong spirit. An office of awesome responsibility. For the President is defender of the Constitution and guardian of the ideals first proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence.

The thirty-seven men who have shouldered this burden have been ordinary people, called by their countrymen to be shapers of America's destiny. Each the hope of future generations. The holder of what has become the most powerful office on earth.

Some strong and truly titans of their times, some weak; some movers of history, others swept by its tide; their story — the history of the Presidency — is the heritage of every American.

An official commemorative collection.

Now, on the eve of the inaugural of the first President of America's third century as a Nation, it is fitting for us to remember — and to honor — those men who, far surpassing even the most optimistic dreams of our Founding Fathers, have made the White House the focus of our history. The citadel of our freedom. The living symbol of America to us and to all the world.

To do so, in a lasting and significant way, The White House Historical Association — dedicated to enhancing every citizen's appreciation of the White House — has authorized the renowned Fleetwood Company to issue a collection of thirty-eight engraved Philatelic Commemorative Covers individually honoring all of The Presidents of the United States.

This is the first and only such collection ever to be authorized by the White House Historical Association and will be extraordinary in every respect.

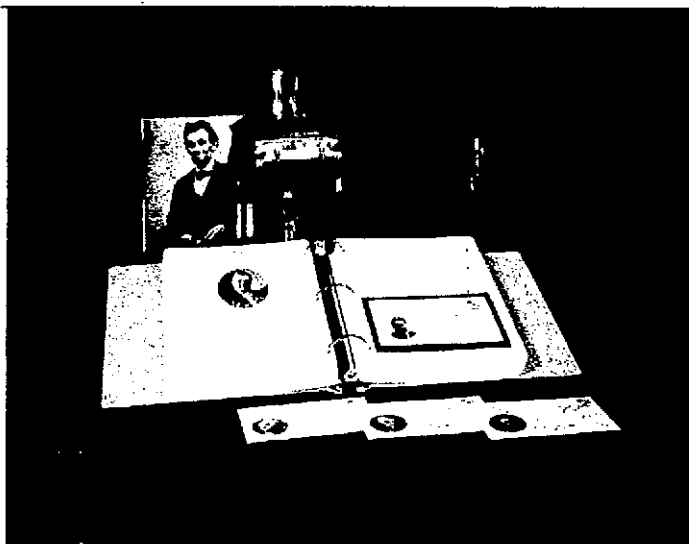

A dignified and worthy tribute.

Historically accurate to the smallest detail, each Cover will focus on one President. Superbly produced on luxurious laid-fiber paper — the traditional paper of our Nation — each will be vividly cacheted with the President's portrait from the Official White House Collection. Masterpieces by such greats as Gilbert Stuart, Rembrandt Peale, Samuel F. B. Morse, they capture each President's character and vision with uncommon sensitivity.

Moreover, they will be handsomely engraved with the Presidents' signatures. Signatures that have been written with firm and determined hands in testament to the aspirations of a whole Nation; in witness to the great turning points of our history. Abraham Lincoln's, which freed the slaves. Thomas Jefferson's, which doubled the Nation's size. Theodore Roosevelt's that busted the trusts. And John F. Kennedy's that set America on course for the moon.

Appropriately, each will be officially issued and postmarked during 1977 on the exact anniversary of the President's birth at the place where he was born. Places now enshrined in our history.

The complete collection will be a dignified and worthy tribute to the lives, the times, and the achievements of our Presidents. From the youngest,

The complete collection honoring The Presidents of the United States will be handsomely displayed in a luxurious album provided to collectors at no additional cost.

John F. Kennedy, to the oldest, William H. Harrison, they are men who have had unshakable faith in America and its future, in its people and in its principles. Men who became part of our proud heritage as The Presidents of the United States.

One single, strictly limited edition.

The Presidents of the United States will be issued in a single, strictly limited edition. And the total number will be forever limited to the exact number of original subscriptions postmarked not later than February 22, 1977, with a limit of one collection per subscriber.

To assure the authenticity of this limited edition, each Cover will bear the imprimatur of the White House Historical Association and the distinctive hallmark of The Fleetwood Company — recognized since 1929 as America's foremost purveyor of Philatelic Commemorative Covers — which has been authorized by the White House Historical Association to produce the complete collection.

Handsome Collector's Album included.

Collectors who take advantage of this opportunity to acquire The Presidents of the United States will also receive, without additional cost, a handsomely bound collector's album. With narrative by historian David C. Whitney — one of America's most prominent authorities on the Presidency — this lavish, over 200-page album will bring each President and his times into vivid perspective. Privately prepared exclusively for individual subscribers to this collection, it will be a truly impressive addition to your library and a superb way of appreciating and protecting this most significant collection.

Convenient plan of acquisition.

Subscribers to The Presidents of the United States will receive issues at the convenient rate of three per month, beginning in late February, 1977, and concluding in January, 1978, with five issues. The original issue price of $2.50 per Cover ($7.50 per month) will be guaranteed for the entire collection. And to ensure the highest standards, each shipment will be delivered, unblemished by addressing, in a protective package. The album, provided at no additional cost, will be shipped in August, 1977.

Subscription Deadline: February 22, 1977.

An Official Collection and one of historic importance to all Americans, The Presidents of the United States is certain to become a highly prized and admired collection in future years. One that will in a real sense be inspiration and pleasure for you to own; and an heirloom your children and their children will appreciate in years to come.

But please remember that there will be only one, limited edition of this collection, and that this is the only time that you will be able to acquire it. To take advantage of this opportunity, postmark your application no later than February 22, 1977. And mail it directly to The Fleetwood Company, 1 Uncover Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008.

MEDICATIONS CONTINUED

And Schuster goes on to add: "One pitfall with antacids is that patients are often told to take a tablespoonful three or four times daily before or after meals—at which times the antacid is useless because there is a natural buffer in the stomach during eating. Rather, patients need the antacid an hour or two after eating, when the stomach is empty."

THE DIMENSIONS OF FAILURE. The degree of patient failure to use medicine properly or at all is staggering.

Strep throat infections can cause rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease, both preventable by proper use of penicillin. But studies have found 34 percent of patients not taking it.

PAS is a valuable drug for tuberculosis. But investigators, not relying on what patients reported, checked on urine samples—if the drug is taken, some of it appears in the urine—and found none detectable in the urine of 50 percent of patients.

Some don't take it

Some studies of diabetics have found half or even more making errors in insulin dosage. Oral iron to avoid anemia in pregnancy is effective—but 30 percent of pregnant women don't take it when prescribed. Psychiatric patients—under treatment for depression, anxiety, other conditions—commonly fail to comply. In one study, only 48 percent were using medication at all or as directed.

Most cases of epilepsy can be controlled. But a study of epileptic children showed that only 25 percent had appropriate levels of anticonvulsant medication in their blood.

TWO IMPORTANT REASONS. Recently, Dr. Richard N. Podell and an associate at Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, and Overlook Hospital, Summit, N.J., focused on two major reasons for misuse of or failure to use prescribed medications.

One involves unanticipated side effects that can be confusing or frightening—and failure of patients to tell their physicians about the disturbances.

Don't 'act dumb'

Says Dr. Podell: "The patient sometimes does not know that the side effect is related to the medication and he may fear he will offend the physician by complaining. There are many circumstances in which the patient 'acts dumb' before the physician. Our impression is that patient reluctance to express these concerns is especially common when the physician's actions are intimidatingly authoritarian. Obviously, if the physician does not learn about the side effects, there is little he can do to correct them; noncompliance is then likely to result."

A second problem is failure of patients to ask questions. In one study, Pharmaceutical firms are looking into gimmicks to help children and adults take their medicine properly. One new system called "Memory Dose" puts pills in individual packets labeled with clear, precise instructions for their use.

only 24 percent asked three or more questions about their medication. The fault of the patients? Perhaps to some extent—but, as Dr. Podell points out, "It is not quite this simple. The physicians often subtly discourage patients from asking questions."

In this study, in only 19 of 221 instances did a physician even bother to ask a patient if he had any questions. In 13 percent of cases, the physician ignored the patient's first question. "More important," observes Dr. Podell, "many mannerisms signaled the patient that further questions would not be welcome. These included obvious clock-watching, looking toward the waiting room to see how many more patients were there."

WHAT CAN BE DONE. In the Acute Disease Clinic of Children's Hospital, Buffalo, N.Y., when only 5 percent of patients were found to be complying with a 10-day course of antibiotic treatment for middle ear infection, a program was set up in which hospital pharmacists gave patients' parents complete verbal and written instructions on medication. Labeling was precise and detailed, and parents received a calibrated measure for the medication and a calendar to record doses. These measures raised full compliance tenfold.

Right now, under study by several major pharmaceutical companies as a means of improving compliance of both adult and child patients is a "Memory Dose" dispenser system developed by the Medical Dispenser Co. of Atlantic Highlands, N. J.

The compact dispenser can be loaded in seconds with a blister-packaged cartridge of a premeasured quantity of tablets or capsules. An appropriate date/time regimen is preprinted on each cartridge, and the regimen shows through two adjacent windows on the face of the dispenser. One window indicates when the last dose was taken, the other when the next dose is needed.

Perhaps the growing concern within the medical profession and increasing efforts to educate physicians to recognize and do something constructive about the frequency and dangers of patient noncompliance will bear fruit.

MY FAVORITE jokes

by david sayh

EDITOR'S NOTE: David Sayh recalls the first time he auditioned at Catch A Rising Star in New York, one of the few clubs where inexperienced entertainers can break in their material: "When I first went to audition, I waited on line in the cold for about three hours just to get a number. I felt like I was in the bakery on Sunday morning."

David is frequently the emcee at Catch A Rising Star and has performed at the Bijou in Philadelphia, Valley Forge Music Fair in Pennsylvania and on the Playboy circuit.

Here are his comic observations:

I grew up in the South Bronx, one of the highest crime-rate neighborhoods in the world. You call the police emergency number—they put you on hold and play music.

They were looking for everybody in my neighborhood. We used to get arrest warrants in the mail addressed to "Occupant."

I got into one of these finish-high-school-at-home programs and everything was going real well for three months. And then I got a letter that said my home was no longer in my school district. They wanted to bus me to somebody else's house for the remainder of the semester.

When I was a kid and my mother got me bedroom slippers, I never had the cute, little furry ones with the clowns on them like other kids. I always had Taiwan specials with soles made of old tire treads. They were $3 a pair, plus 50 cents for balancing. And they wore real well—except every 20,000 steps you had to take your toes in for realignment.

On the back of shaving cream cans there are actually directions on how to shave. A can will say: "Wash face, press center top of can to release lather, spread lather evenly over face, shave." Who needs directions on how to shave? Do you wake up one morning after shaving for 28 years and say, "Hey, I forgot how to shave"? The next thing I expect is to pick up a bar of soap and see directions on how to take a shower: "Adjust water to desired temperature. Allow sufficient time for water temperature to stabilize, since failure to do so may result in erratic operation of faucet controls. Lather entire body, wash vigorously, rinse thoroughly. Note: For best results, remove all garments."

New Yorkers are incredible. You ask them directions—if they don't know, they make 'em up. I asked a guy, "Excuse me, do you know how to get to the Grand Canyon from here?" He said, "Yeah, just make a U-turn."

What about people out West; ever ask them for directions? You're in the middle of the Mojave Desert, 40 million miles from nowhere. Ask a guy how to get to Highway 80, and he'll say, "You got a car?"

I went to the supermarket the other day, tried to pick up some olives. Now, the guy who does the sizes for the olives is really messed up. The smallest ones are marked "Gigantic," the next size is "Jumbo," then "Colossal," "Super Colossal," "Mammoth," "Mammoth Hermunculus." I expect to open up that last can and find one tremendous olive inside—you have to kill it before you can eat it!

ADDED FEATURE!

Illustrated "Encyclopedia of Medical Terms" Section makes everything crystal clear...

Do you know the difference between Arteriosclerosis and Atherosclerosis? (Both affect blood vessels and they are similar-sounding words, but they are not the same condition.)

Let's face it, doctors frequently assume their patients know what their professional diagnostic language means. But, more often than not, the layman is left "in the dark" wondering, and perhaps needlessly worried, by the frightening sounding terms the doctor uses. The Editors of Better Homes and Gardens feel there should be no mystery about any medical term, provided you have a clear, easy-to-understand explanation of what it means. A proposed fleet of B-1 bombers—now being tested at Edwards Air Force Base, Cal.—would cost at least $23 billion. President Ford favored the project, but some Congressmen feel the Air Force rejected viable alternatives.

The B-1 Bomber: A $23 Billion Choice Facing President Carter

by Peter J. Ognibene

Strategic Air Command's Gen. Russell E. Dougherty says our defenses "would be seriously deficient" without the B-1.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Should the United States spend $23 billion or more for a fleet of 244 B-1 bombers? That is probably the most expensive question President Jimmy Carter will have to answer in the early days of his Administration.

Gen. Russell E. Dougherty, the head of the Air Force's Strategic Air Command, believes the case for the new bomber is overwhelming. "In my view, there is no weapons delivery system program that is more important, more critical, or offers more deterrent utility within the total mix of our strategic forces than the B-1," says Dougherty. "Without such a capable, flexible and visible strategic weapons delivery system, our deterrent forces would be seriously deficient across the potential spectrum of confrontation and/or conflict."

The outgoing Administration subscribed to a similar point of view. In fact, President Ford was so enthusiastic about the new bomber that he made it a point during the Presidential campaign to be photographed waving from the cockpit of a B-1 mock-up in Palm-dale, Cal. But when he asked Congress for money to begin production of the supersonic, swing-wing bomber, the B-1 ran into heavy weather.

Congress cautious

Although Congress ultimately approved the requested funds, it limited spending on the B-1 to $87 million a month until Feb. 1, 1977. The purpose of this provision was twofold: it allows Rockwell International, the builder of the plane, to keep its B-1 work force in place but lets the new President decide the bomber's fate. This unusual step seems to indicate that the B-1 has lost much of the overwhelming support it once enjoyed on Capitol Hill.

EMERGENC

During campaign, President Ford waved from mock-up B-1 cockpit at North American Rockwell plant in California.

BOMBER CONTINUED

Why has the bomber lost this support? Some people blame the Air Force. Instead of keeping an open mind on the subject of bombers, it has eliminated all possible alternatives to the B-1. This has angered many members of Congress.

In 1971, for instance, the Boeing Company tested late-model B-52G's and H's and found the main wing structure could last at least six times longer than the original design called for. What that meant in practical terms was this: the reliable B-52 could be flying well into the 21st century. But instead of being heartened by this finding, the Air Force buried it.

The Air Force also canceled a promising missile program called SCAD (for Subsonic Cruise Armed Decoy). The B-52 would have carried these weapons under its wings and launched them 2000 miles from their targets. Ingeniously designed with electronic reflectors, the SCAD would have looked exactly like a B-52 on enemy radar screens. Because this weapon would have improved the B-52's ability to penetrate enemy air defenses, it might have undermined the "need" for a B-1.

Study requested

Decisions such as these led the Senate Armed Services Committee to ask the Department of Defense for "a comprehensive cost effectiveness study" of the B-1 and its possible alternatives. Sen. Thomas McIntyre (D., N.H.), chairman of the committee's research and development subcommittee, analyzed the resulting Pentagon report and found it to be flawed.

"The Joint Strategic Bomber Study's most fundamental bias in favor of the B-1 was its design and evaluation of alternative bomber forces on the basis of the cost of the B-1 rather than designing a precise military mission and comparing each alternative bomber force's capability to fulfill that mission," wrote McIntyre. "If the study had defined the mission which our bombers should be expected to perform and measured the efficiency of various alternatives in accomplishing that mission, such an evaluation may have led you to conclude that we may not have needed a follow-on to the present bomber at all."

Critics of the B-1 oppose the plane for several reasons. They point, for instance, to the diminishing role of bombers in comparison to the other two elements of America's nuclear triad: intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBM's) and submarine-launched ballistic missiles (SLBM's). In 1960, bombers carried 90 percent of our nuclear weapons; the percentage is now 30 and expected to fall even lower whether or not the B-1 is built.

Bombers have clearly lost their pre-eminence to missiles. Indeed, when ICBM's and SLBM's take only 30 minutes to reach their targets, there is a real possibility that the bombers will find the war already over by the time they arrive at their objectives.

Supporters of the B-1 naturally see things differently. One of the bomber's staunchest advocates has been Malcolm R. Currie, the outgoing director of Defense Research and Engineering.

Currie believes the B-1 is "our best answer to the problems of survivability and penetrativity which will face our existing forces in the years ahead. Higher speed and fundamentally 'harder' construction to resist nuclear effects will virtually assure survival for those B-1 forces on alert. Higher speed, lower penetration altitude, lower radar cross section and better electronic countermeasures will contribute to a high probability of penetration [of enemy air space]."

But even if the plane's supporters are correct and the B-1 is marginally better than the B-52, is the new bomber worth the price? Indeed, do we know its price?

The price tag on the B-1 has been consistent in only one respect: it has climbed steadily skyward. In 1969, the Air Force told Congress that 244 B-1's would cost $9 billion. The current estimate is $23 billion.

Total cost is higher

Keep in mind, however, that that is only the price for 244 airframes. To perform its strategic mission, the B-1 will need nuclear weapons and a fleet of airborne tankers to refuel it in flight. When those systems are included, along with operating and maintenance expenses, the price soars into the stratosphere.

How high will it go? In 1976, Alton H. Quanbeck and Archie L. Wood, both former Air Force colonels, published a study for the Brookings Institution in Washington called "Modernizing the Strategic Bomber Force." They put the total cost for building and operating the B-1 through 1985 at nearly $92 billion. Whether they are right or wrong, their calculations seem more realistic than the Air Force's because Quanbeck and Wood have at least tried to include all the "extras" which an airframe needs to become a bomber. The Air Force only quotes the price for a stripped-down model of the B-1.

Instead of blanching at its ever-climbing price, Rockwell has been boasting about the jobs the B-1 would create. But then, all big government spending—whether it's for bombers or buses—puts people to work. In the case of the B-1, however, the benefits would be relatively few. In fact, a study conducted for Rockwell by Chase Econometrics, a subsidiary of the Chase Manhattan Bank, concluded that 70,000 extra jobs would be created if the B-1 appropriation were put into housing rather than bombers.

Carter's view uncertain

The President-elect has said he wants to see more jobs created, but he has given no indication that he would consider using the B-1 as a WPA-style make-work project. Indeed, during the Presidential campaign, Carter put himself squarely on the record against the new bomber, calling it "an example of a proposed system which should not be funded and would be wasteful of taxpayers' dollars."

Will Carter carry that view into the Oval Office or will he be persuaded by the arguments of the military men, businesses and labor unions which have a huge stake in the B-1? We should know the answer in a matter of weeks.

HOUSES AND HOPES The American dream of owning a home is rapidly growing faint.

The median price of a new house is now over $40,000. To live in a desirable suburb costs even more. Only a minority of American families can afford such prices.

For young families (those with husband and wife in the 25-to-34 age bracket) the prospect of buying a new house is almost nil.

Sen. Edward Brooke (R., Mass.) would like to provide young married couples with an opportunity to own a house.

In his Young Families Housing Act, Brooke has proposed a new type of mortgage arrangement whereby a young family would make smaller "monthly mortgage payments in the early years and proportionately larger payments in the later years. Brooke contends that it makes sense to structure a mortgage so that a young family pays less in the years when its income is less and more in later years, when its income is higher.

His legislation envisions a method whereby the young family can accumulate enough cash for a down payment. This would be done by permitting the first-time home-buyer to establish a savings account--called an "individual housing account"--into which he could deposit $2500 a year up to a maximum of $10,000. This money would be deductible for income tax purposes and would have to be applied as a down payment on a house.

The housing industry has outpriced itself, and imaginative, creative legislation such as Brooke's is sorely needed.

UNCLE JIMMY According to President-elect Carter's nephew Scott Stapleton, a first-year medical student at the University of North Carolina, "Uncle Jimmy is a man of principle who hasn't had to compromise to get where he is. He is very intelligent and very hard-working, and his most outstanding quality is compassion."

NEW BELT CONVEYOR SYSTEM Here's something that will make Detroit sit up and watch: The Honda Motor Co. of Japan has installed a new factory conveyor system in which each worker on the production line controls his own labor speed.

Honda calls it the "free flow system" and has put it into effect in its plants at Kumamoto and Waki. Executives say it works so well that it will be adopted at all Honda factories in Japan. They report that it not only increases the workers' morale, but results in higher-quality production.

The system's moving belt can be halted or released by each worker simply by stepping on a pedal. If he wishes additional time for his task, he stops the belt, separates the engine from its receptacle and works on it.

For years, industrial engineers have tried to reduce the ill effects of the monotonous conveyor belt system introduced in U.S. auto factories in 1913. Now they may have come upon a reasonable solution. According to Honda, their new free flow system was developed by introducing basic production technology from Car-gill, Inc., an American company.

MOVIES IN CHINA

What do people do for entertainment in the People's Republic of China?

China has 3000 motion picture theaters of various sizes in its major cities. The government also assigns some 4000 projectionists to tour the rural areas. They put on an estimated 25,000 screenings every week. Practically all Chinese productions are propaganda films produced in Shanghai and Canton.

Since the Communist takeover in 1949, only films made in China have publicly been shown in the People's Republic. The one exception is "Salt of the Earth," made in the U.S. and Mexico in 1955.

Several weeks ago, Canadian film executive Charles Chaplin, traveling in China, arranged for three American films to be screened in Peking: "The Quiet Man," "Son of Paleface," and "The Great American Cowboy." Other U.S. films, of course, are shown in embassies and diplomatic circles. But these are not for the Chinese people.

expected to fall even lower whether or not the B-1 is built.

Bombers have clearly lost their preeminence to missiles. Indeed, when ICBM's and SLBM's take only 30 minutes to reach their targets, there is a real possibility that the bombers will find the war already over by the time they arrive at their objectives.

Supporters of the B-1 naturally see things differently. One of the bomber's staunchest advocates has been Malcolm R. Currie, the outgoing director of Defense Research and Engineering.

Currie believes the B-1 is "our best answer to the problems of survivability and penetrability which will face our existing forces in the years ahead. Higher speed and fundamentally 'harder' construction to resist nuclear effects will virtually assure survival for those B-1 forces on alert. Higher speed, lower penetration altitude, lower radar cross section and better electronic countermeasures will contribute to a high probability of penetration [of enemy air space]."

But even if the plane's supporters are correct and the B-1 is marginally better than the B-52, is the new bomber worth the price? Indeed, do we know its price?

The price tag on the B-1 has been consistent in only one respect: it has climbed steadily skyward. In 1969, the Air Force told Congress that 244 B-1's would cost $9 billion. The current estimate is $23 billion.

Total cost is higher

Keep in mind, however, that that is only the price for 244 airframes. To perform its strategic mission, the B-1 will need nuclear weapons and a fleet of airborne tankers to refuel it in flight. When those systems are included, along with operating and maintenance expenses, the price soars into the stratosphere.

How high will it go? In 1976, Alton H. Quanbeck and Archie L. Wood, both former Air Force colonels, published a study for the Brookings Institution in Washington called "Modernizing the Strategic Bomber Force." They put the total cost for building and operating the B-1 through 1985 at nearly $92 billion. Whether they are right or wrong, their calculations seem more realistic than the Air Force's because Quanbeck and Wood have at least tried to include all the "extras" which an airframe needs to become a bomber. The Air Force only quotes the price for a stripped-down model of the B-1.

Instead of blanching at its ever-climbing price, Rockwell has been boasting about the jobs the B-1 would create. But then, all big government spending—whether it's for bombers or buses—puts people to work. In the case of the B-1, however, the benefits would be relatively few. In fact, a study conducted for Rockwell by Chase Econometrics, a subsidiary of the Chase Manhattan Bank, concluded that 70,000 extra jobs would be created if the B-1 appropriation were put into housing rather than bombers.

Carter's view uncertain

The President-elect has said he wants to see more jobs created, but he has given no indication that he would consider using the B-1 as a WPA-style make-work project. Indeed, during the Presidential campaign, Carter put himself squarely on the record against the new bomber, calling it "an example of a proposed system which should not be funded and would be wasteful of taxpayers' dollars."

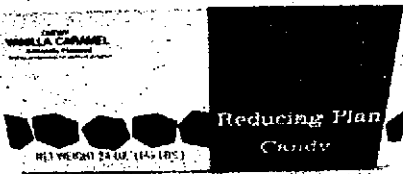

Will Carter carry that view into the Oval Office or will he be persuaded by the arguments of the military men, businesses and labor unions which have a huge stake in the B-1? We should know the answer in a matter of weeks.

HARDSHIP POST The State Department has declared Moscow an "unhealthy post," and U.S. employees who are stationed there receive 20% more in salary as hardship allowance.

A recent notice circulated at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow states that "the determination for such a designation [unhealthy post] is based upon the [State] Department's evaluation of reported environmental conditions regarding sanitation and disease, medical and hospital facilities and climate."

According to U.S. Embassy officials, one factor in determining Moscow as "unhealthy" is the prevalence of giardiasis, a rare intestinal disorder that is believed to be spread in drinking water. Nothing has been said of the persistent microwave radiation of the embassy by the KGB, the Soviet security and espionage apparatus.

WOMEN WANT SEA DUTY

Four women members of the U.S. Navy have filed suit in a class action. They allege that the legal prohibition against their assignment to sea duty deprives them of "the core experience of Navy life."

Navy women are currently permitted to serve on hospital ships and harbor vessels like tugboats but not on destroyers, cruisers, carriers and the rest.

DEAD DEAL

The Soviet Union has been trying for months to purchase from Great Britain its most powerful aero-engine, the Rolls-Royce RB-211, which provides 50,000 pounds of thrust to the jumbo jets.

The Soviets are building their first wide-body airliner, the Ilyushin 86, which will seat 350 passengers, and they want to study the RB-211.

The British are willing to sell a flock of the RB-211's to the Russians, but they want to control their production under license by the Soviets. They don't want to sell two or three and then have the Soviets pirate the engine with modifications.

In 1947 the British Labor government under Clement Atlee made the mistake of selling 55 Rolls-Royce Nene engines to the Soviets against the advice of its intelligence experts. The Soviets immediately began reproducing the engine illegally for their fighters and bombers. It was these fighters and bombers that were subsequently sent to North Korea to fight against U.S. aircraft in the Korean war.

The British are determined not to make the same mistake again. If they sell Rolls-Royce engines to the U.S.S.R., they want to provide substantial orders to the British aircraft industry. Otherwise —no deal.

CHIGNON COMEBACK

The latest hairdo in European society circles is the chignon, which is making a comeback.

One beauty who always wears a chignon is Mrs. Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, the French First Lady.

Hairdressers say that much of the credit for the chignon revival must go to Yves Saint Laurent, who combined the hairdo with his last formal couture collection.

The new chignons differ from the old ones in that they are larger, softer, and much more imaginative, boasting all sorts of braids. Women also ornament them with jeweled flowers, butterflies, and combs.

Alexandre, the well-known hairdresser, interweaves his chignons with strands of colorful ribbon.

ISLAND NUKE PLANTS

Professor Peter Kapitza, 82, the great Soviet physicist who dared risk Stalin's wrath by refusing to take part in the development of the Soviet Union's atomic bomb, believes nuclear power plants should be erected on uninhabited islands.

In a recent article in The New Scientist,

Kapitza says such problems as the danger of accidents, highly radioactive waste, and the production of plutonium could be overcome to a considerable degree if nuclear plants were built on small, uninhabited islands and the energy generated were used to produce hydrogen from the sea. Hydrogen is a relatively safe and pollution-free fuel source.

INFERTILITY EPIDEMIC

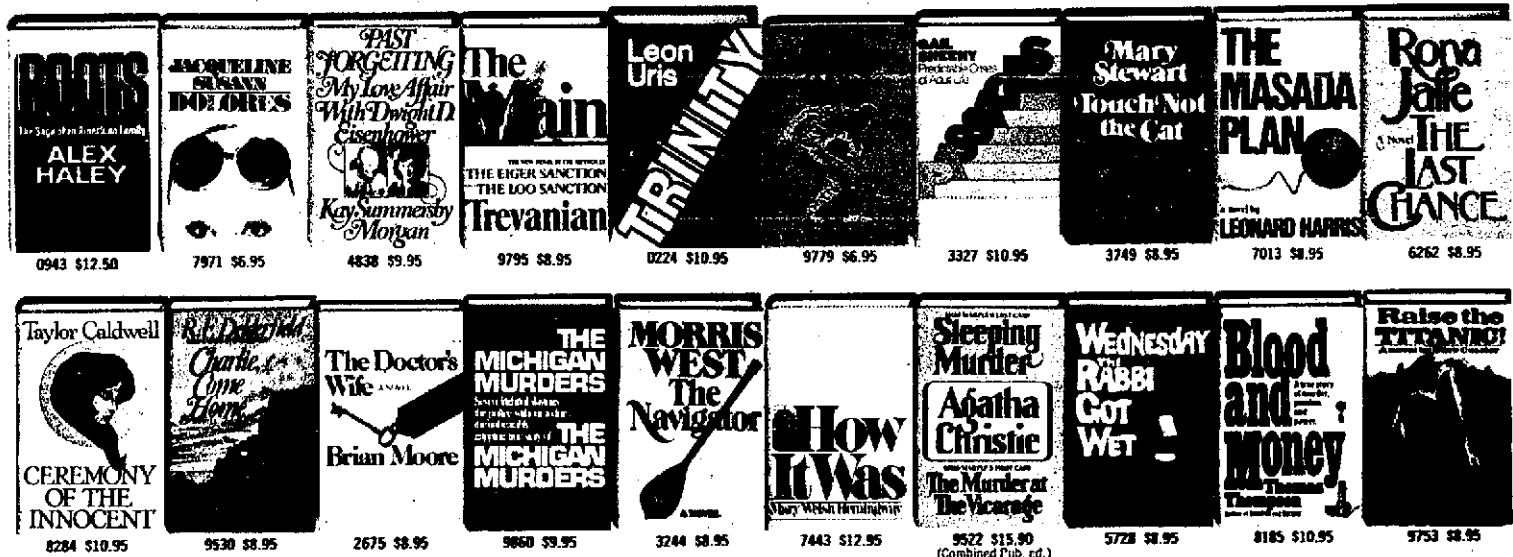

Human infertility has struck large areas of Africa. From 20% to 40% of the women in many tribes have become infertile. One tribe in Sudan has taken to stealing fertile women from neighboring tribes in an attempt to solve their problem.

The countries stricken with infertility include Gabon, Cameroon, Sudan, Uganda, Ghana, Kenya, and Tanzania. They have appealed for help to the World Health Organization.

Several reasons have been advanced to explain the cause. Pinworm infections disturb the lymphatic glands in both male and female and apparently lead to sterility in women.

South of the Sahara, the most common cause seems to be gonorrhea, which obstructs the fallopian tubes. A year ago, following a massive penicillin campaign designed to eradicate gonorrhea in New Guinea, the fertility rates there began to rise.
